By SMITH JOHNSON

Charlotte Davis could hardly wait till 12 o'clock lunch hour, so eager was she to show her friend Julia Winter her new ring.

"It's lovely," praised Julia. "I do hope you and Leslie will be very, very happy," she added, wistfully.

"I hope so too," retorted Charlotte. "And I guess we will be, for Les seems willing to give me anything I ask for. Lucky for him that he works in a store and can get a good break on the sort of stuff I want."

"Where will you live?" inquired Julia.

"Out on Park terrace."

"Aren't the rents awfully high in that district?" exclaimed Julia.

"Oh, yes," cheerfully admitted Charlotte. "But we only live once, I tell Les, so we're getting the very best of everything."

"It sounds wonderful," sighed Julia.

"I'll say it's wonderful," agreed Charlotte. "All that swell stuff for only $2. down, and he didn't really have to pay that for the store is giving him credit for the twenty-five as a wedding present, so he took the fifty he saved and made the down payment on my ring."

"Oh!" gasped Julia, aghast at the thought of the size of the debts in proportion to the size of Leslie's income.

"That's what I get for having a sweetie who is a salesman."

"Want a nice willow rocker for your hope chest?" called the foreman of the warehouse, as the tall, cheerful-looking truck driver passed the office door.

"What's wrong with it?" replied the younger man.

"Paint got scratched off in uncrating and the party that ordered it claims the color can't be matched. We settled with her for $5 cash — and we don't want the rocker."

"Store it for me?" grinned the tall chap in tan.

"You bet," cheerfully agreed the foreman. "Put it right in with the rest of your junk. And while you're in the mood to spend money, better take a look at the table over by No. 15. Make you a nice dining table when you've got the top done over, and it won't cost much since the party that owns it hasn't got room for it and won't pay storage any longer."

In the warehouse Pete's bargain-hunting had become a standing joke. But it was a kindly joke that the men enjoyed, for Pete MacElroy was popular and the men all knew that the young chap's purse was strained to the utmost with helping put three younger brothers and sisters through school and at the same time saving to marry Julia Winter.

"I'll wait," Julia had bravely promised.

Sunday afternoons when Peter and Julia walked in the park or took a bus ride or went to a cheap movie they talked, as lovers will, of the time they would be living in a "home of their own," with a garden and a radio and an open fireplace. And then a sorrowful silence would come between them.

Peter and Julia were the first guests to be entertained at the Park terrace apartment. Proudly Charlotte displayed her new treasures. Silk draperies, silk bedspreads, handsome glassware, china and rugs, stunning furniture.

"Honestly, Julia, I wish you could clear out of that stuffy hall bedroom before the hot weather comes," whispered Charlotte as she kissed her chum good-night.

Going home on the bus Peter and Julia were strangely quiet, yet when they reached Julia's rooming-house Peter said, "Let's sit on the porch a while and talk."

Nervously the young chap clasped and unclasped his big hands, cleared his throat and exclaimed abruptly, "Honestly, Julia, there isn't a bit of sense in going on this way. We are just eating out our hearts. And at the rate I'm getting on we'll both be gray-haired before I can give you more than about two rooms to live in."

Julia's poor heart almost stopped beating. Yet she did not blame Peter for wanting to stop pinching pennies to save for a home after spending most of his wages for his brothers and sisters.

Bravely Julia winked back the tears which filled her brown eyes. She tried to speak, to tell Peter that he was free—to offer to give back to him the inexpensive little ring he had given her two Christmases before.

But the words choked her.

Anxiously Peter peered down into her face. Tensely his firm, tanned fingers closed over Julia's trembling hands as he said, "How about it, sweetheart? Are you game to start homemaking with me in just two rooms? I've some odds and ends of furniture stored at the warehouse. And I've enough money saved so you can pick out your own cooking things for the kitchen, and curtains —no silk, like those fancy ones at Charlotte's. And the foreman gave me a tip yesterday about a garage-cottage we can rent dirt cheap, with an option to buy."

"Oh, my dear!" gasped Julia, looking up with a smile that was radiant testimony as to just how Julia felt.

Little Benny's Note Book

My birthday is the 13th of next month and I haven't said anything to pop about a present yet, and he was smoking to himself in his private chair seeming like a good time to leed up to the subject by degrees, and I said, Hay pop, guess what important event is going to get celebrated the 13th of next month.

Is it as important as the discovery of America? pop said, and I said, It is to me, it's even more important, because if it hadn't of been for this event it wouldn't matter to me even if America had never been discovered, it's proberly the most important thing that's ever happened to me so far.

Being a big hint, and pop said, By gollies I've got it, it's the anniversity of the innocation of all year around low shoes for men instead of the high button shoes I used to have to wear in winter when I was your age.

Well why is it, pop, I mean how is that important to me? I said, and pop said, Dont you realize you'd be late for school every morning of your life if you had to add high button shoes to your other struggles? And the result would be your education would be so impaired you'd have to take up some lifework requiring no headwork, such as sharpening toothpicks, wich I understand is already a pitifully overcrowded profession, he said.

Anyway it's the wrong guess, I said, and pop said, Then it must be the anniversity of the day Hairy Highbean the caveman invented the first 3 words of human speech, and by gollies that's important to you because if it wasn't for human speech you couldn't ask questions and if you couldn't ask questions you'd proberly make the most distressing sounds strangling to death.

Aw heck, pop, it was my birthday, I said, and pop said, Well I'd of guessed it in time because it was important to me, too.

Butter, Egg Prices Steady

Toronto, March 8 — A steadier tone developed in eggs while butter turned over in fair volume at unchanged prices during Thursday's session of the Toronto open produce market.

Receipts, which were ample for demand, moved more readily under improved inquiry on the egg market. Grade A-medium attracted the most attention, but A-large were inclined to lag. Prices held about even with the previous close and government inspected lots of graded eggs continued to sell at a 1-2 cent premium.

Light supplies of Ontario butter were taken up yesterday, but the bulk of the business transacted on the butter market was in the Western product. A number of cars, both on spot and for shipment, was sold here on a price basis of 27 3-4c per pound. Holders were not able to obtain their asking price of 28c. Top-grade Ontario creamery solids changed hands at the former level of 27 3-4c per pound.

Fine Work Performed By the Navy League

Of the numerous voluntary agencies serving the Canadian people, the Navy League of Canada occupies a unique place.

Its work is exclusively for the sailors—the men who are serving their King and Empire on the high seas.

These defenders of our shores and our large export trade are in the British Navy, the Canadian Navy and the merchant marine services.

They experience hardships that few landlubbers could stand They face dangers at which most men would quail—day and night

In its efforts to alleviate the discomfort of these men and to encourage them in every way possible the Navy League of Canada is performing a very special service.

It maintains sailors' homes in ocean ports, it looks after men disabled at sea, it gives aid to the dependents of the shipwrecked. In a score of ways it carries on a noble work. one in which the citizens of Ontario should have as great a stake as those who live in sight of the sea. Much is owed to this gallant body of men upon whom the safety and prosperity of the Empire so greatly depends

MORE THAN 300 MINERS KILLED IN CHILE

Coronel, Chile, March 8 (CP-Havas)—Investigation of the coal damp explosion in which more than 300 miners were killed yesterday at the Schwager mine here was started today.

Latest reports said 302 miners were believed dead, and 98 were injured in one of the greatest mine disasters in Chile's history. One hundred escaped.

Fire spread rapidly 500 feet below the surface after the blast, complicating the task of rescue squads. Property damage was estimated at $2,000,000.

FEW NEW ISSUES AS THE CAMPAIGN

Another large group of leading political figures addressed the electorate last night and advanced a dozen issues — few of them new, however.

P. E.I. Premier in Manitoba

Premier Thane Campbell of Prince Edward Island, started a campaign tour with a St. Boniface, Man., speech in which he stated the Nation government proposal of Conservative Leader Manion contained nothing but "a nebulous government of unnamed persons and unknown policies."

He praised the war efforts and criticized attacks against the administration in this connection.

At Saint John in the first speeches of his Maritime campaign, Dr. Manion repeated his charges, that the First Division of Canadian troops went overseas lacking modern equipment and offered to back up this accusation with proof. He said this information came direct "from the highest officers who took the Division to England".

More local administration of national harbors instead of the present system of "remote control" was advocated. Dr. Manion also declared that Defence Minister Rogers was inexperienced, a "spreader of falsehoods" and "one or two degrees worse" than Hon. Ian Mackenzie as Defence Minister.

Hon. H. H. Stevens, leading lieutenant of Dr. Manion, referred to Mr. Rogers at Brandon, Man., and said if the Defence Ministry had been filled by Col. J. L. Ralston, Finance Minister "it would have been a good appointment".

The railway question was introduced into the campaign again by Mr. Stevens who denied "persistently repeated lies" that Dr. Manion favored amalgamation or unification.

Two Cabinet Ministers took Premier Hepburn of Ontario to task. Revenue Minister Ilsley told a North Sydney, N.S., audience that despite the Premier's "irresponsible charges and statements" present signs indicated an increase of Liberal seats in Ontario.

Trade Minister Euler at Strathroy, Ont., criticized the "loose talk" of Mr. Hepburn and said such talk cannot be "of assistance to us in carrying on the war".

Hon. W. D. Herridge, New Democracy leader, at Prince Albert, Sask., advocated parity wheat prices for western farmers and said that in the prosperity of western primary producers is the foundation alone of an economy for all the Canadian people.

King Challenged by Drew

"We must get back to the idea of the strength in a central government to administer the affairs of the nation," Lieut.-Col. George Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, told a Victoria audience.

He said it was time for Canadians to decide whether "we are one nation or not; whether any of us concerned with the welfare of Canada, speak as Canadians, or whether the dangerous tendency of sectionalism will prevail."

The election is to determine whether "there shall be a government that is actually going to put into effect the express wish of the Canadian people that we stand behind the empire," he said.

Colonel Drew challenged Premier King to answer the charge of Murdo MacPherson, K.C., at Reing ships convoying troops overseas ing ships convoying troops oversaes could not have his office on Canadian soil and that the naval officer had to charter a yacht and transfer his office to that craft outside the harbor.

Refers to Hepburn

In his speech at Stratford, Trade Minister Euler referred specifically to Mr. Hepburn's action in banning the March of Time film production "Canada at War" from Ontario and in charging that a "violent disturbance" had occurred at the Royal Canadian Air Force technical training centre at St. Thomas.

Rerring to Mr. Hepburn as "that young man of whom we used to think a great deal," Mr. Euler said: "I received today a message from Shanghai, China, telling of how a paper there had featured a story of mutiny in the air force of Canada at St. Thomas. Loose talk cannot be of assistance to us in carrying on the war."

Mr. Euler said there had been criticism of the government for not getting out a film depicting Canada's war effort. He had thought the first war picture to be released in the Dominion should be one detailing the war effort of the people of the country.

Which One Leading

"The film was made and shown at Ottawa, where those who saw it thought it excellent. It was distributed all over Canada except in Ontario. Not even Dr. Manion said the purpose of the film was propaganda. I sometimes wonder if Hepburn is leading Manion or Manion leading Hepburn."

Canada should elect a government "that is not afraid to go ahead" in the critical war period, R. L. Maitland, K.C., British Columbia Conservative leader, said at Ingersoll, Ont.

Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, then Federal Conservative leader, warned Prime Minister Mackenzie King of impending disaster in 1929, Mr. Maitland said, but the Prime Minister spoke only of prosperity.

Government of Action

"We from the west went down to see Mr. King. He said there was no depression. We went back again. Again he said there was no depression. When he faced an election in 1930 and lost his power he still did not know there was a depession."

Conservative Government grants of $20,000,000 to the stricken provinces were in contrast to Mr. Mackenzie King's "attitude of not a five-cent piece."

From 1930 to 1935 there was a "government of action", Mr. Maitland said. Then it gave way to a "commission government," which appointed commissions and did nothing about the findings.

Canada soon will exert her full war effort, Transport Minister Howe said at Kirkland Lake. "The efforts of every man and woman in Canada will be required soon for war production."

Better Prepared

Mr. Howe said Canada was better-prepared at the start of this war than at the start of the First Great War.

Mr. Howe said the Liberal Government had done more since 1937 to develop aerial traffic in Canada than ever had been contemplated by the last Conservative administration.

He challenged the statements of Conservative speakers that their party deserved credit for establishment of Trans-Canada Aid Lines. The present government had spent $20,000,000 for every $1,000,000 spent by the previous government towards the service.

T.C.A. planes would operate twice daily across Canada by April and points now without feeder lines would be linked up by summer.

Claims Country Unprepared

Hon. H. H. Stevens, former Conservative Minister of Trade and Commerce, said at Brandon, Man., that the most important issue before the people was whether the old form of Government was to stand or give way to a one-party parliament.

Mr. Stevens claimed that Canada was unprepared for war, that the Liberal government had failed to take advantage of co-operative offers and that Prime Minister Mackenzie King had even gone on record as saying that in case of defeat in the March 26 Federal election he would have nothing to do with a national government.

Mr. Stevens said several members of the Liberal cabinet had "had it all arranged" to go to the Senate but under party discipline were required to remain and assist in the election campaign. Mr. Stevens said these men were Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, Hon. P. J. A. Cardin, Minister of Public Works, Hon. C. G. Power, Postmaster-General and Hon. W. D. Euler, Minister of Trade and Commerce.

Crerar Attacks C.C.F.

Mines Minister Crerar in a broadcast address at Brandon, Man., attacked the co-operative commonwealth federation's attitude toward Canada's war effort and said "the peace-time program of the C.C.F. as of all Canadian parties depends on victory."

Canadians were inclined to take it for granted that the war would be won upon relatively easy terms but in the Allied countries overseas it was understood the war would be long, desperate and uncertain. The people understood defeat would place them "under the heel of a conqueror more cruel, more bloodthirsty, more despotic than the world has seen since Genghis Khan."

He appealed for realization that Canada may prove the decisive factor in an Allied victory and that a half-way war effort might mean the loss of "food, warmth, security."

Confident of Result

Premier Thane A. Campbell of Prince Edward Island said at St. Boniface, Man., he felt sure Canadians would follow the example of the Prince Edward Island electorate which last year returned his Liberal government. The Co-operative Commonwealth Federation and the Liberal party had rejected the National Government proposal. That left only the new democracy party for Dr. Manion to look to.

Hon. H. H. Stevens ,former Conservative cabinet member, appeared the only certain member of a National cabinet.

"Concerning Mr. Stevens, Mr. Manion wrote in his book, life is an adventure in 1936, that he had frankly attempted to wreck the party with which he had been associated for 25 years in the hope that he would become the leader of the official opposition and enjoy the emoluments of that office.

"That is what Dr. Manion thought of Mr. Stevens four years ago. I suggest they would have a great deal of trouble preserving unity among themselves."

The Mackenzie King government is "more capable of giving united leadership to the country than any other," Revenue Minister Ilsley said in addresses at Sydney and at North Sydney, N.S.

Only One Issue Says Speaker

Only issue in the election campaign, the Minister said, is: "What government will be entrusted with the all-important task of carrying on successful prosecution of the war in the next few years?" Both major parties were agreed the war should be prosecuted vigorously.

Reviewing events leading up to the election call, the Minister from Nova Scotia declared the "appeal to the country was prompted by the Ontario legislature resolution of censure, jointly subscribed to by the Premier of that province and its opposition leader."

Despite what he called "irresponsible charges and irresponsible statements of Premier Hepburn," Mr. Ilsley said "present signs portend an increase of Liberal seats in the province of Ontario this election."

Other prominent speakers included Labor Minister McLarty at Cornwall, Ont., and Arthur Roebuck, Liberal candidate in Toronto-Trinity, in Toronto. There were no leading Social Credit or C.C.F. speakers.

BRITONS DEMAND RETALIATION

He called the Royal Air force's propaganda pamphlet flights over Germany "confetti raids", and suggested—

"Let us stop this farcical waste of lives, valuable machines and petrol which we shall need if anything serious comes along".

Admiral of Fleet Heard

Admiral of the Fleet, Sir Roger Keyes, found in the shipping situation a fortification of his contention that the Royal Navy should control its own air force, independent of the Air Ministry.

"It has been 300 years since we suffered such indignities as we have suffered in the last few months", Sir Roger told the House of Commons last night.

Thus he renewed the argument expressed in some quarters for a partition of the R.A.F. which Sir Kingsley Wood rejected in the House yesterday with a declaration he and Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, are fighting Germany—not each other. Sir Kingsley outlined the way in which the navy and air establishments keep in close touch with each other.

A secret appropriation of an unprecedented size for the R.A.F. was approved without record vote by Commons. The amount was shielded by the token figure of £100 ($445).

Italian Ship Sunk

The latest casualty in the aerial warfare at sea was the 5,335-ton Italian steamship Amelia Lauro, bombed and set afire off the southeast coast last night. Another Italian ship, the Titania, answered the Amelia Lauro's SOS and 29 men, three of them wounded, were brought ashore.

Meanwhile, a flier from a German plane shot down off the east coast yesterday was rescued from a rubber life raft.

Sir Roger, called back to service in the navy this week after years in retirement, said: "I am sure that before long this awful desecration of the North Sea will be destroyed." But this could not be, he argued, "until the navy has full control of its own air arm."

The Daily Mail asked "Why do our planes fly over German naval bases without attacking?"

"Our ships are bombed often enough," it said.

"Is the R.A.F. thoroughly prepared to resist the expected spring attacks?

'Are we evolving new types to deal with the long distance attacks on shipping or to outstrip the Messerschmitt 110?

"This is how the people are talking."

Growing Faster Than Germany

Sir Kingsley Wood told Commons yesterday that the Allied air forces are superior to and growing faster than Germany's Hugh Dalton, Labor, commented that "too many Germans are bombing our ships and getting away" and voiced belief that the Messerschmitt 110—German twin-engined fighter monoplane—is superior to any British craft.

Sir Kingsley said he would "sooner have 100 Wellingtons (bombers) or 100 Spitfires or Hurricanes (fighters) than a much larger number of their German counterparts."

He said the coastal command had sighted U-boats on more than 100 occasions and delivered more than 60 attacks. More than 700 convoys have been successfully escorted by air craft.

SWEDEN IS ACTING AS INTERMEDIARY

already been.

(Scandinavian reports said the new demands required that Finland surrender all the Karelian Isthmus, the city of Viipuri, its half of Lake Ladoga, the port and peninsula of Hanko and part of the Petsamo district on the Arctic ocean).

Finland Concerned

At the same time the Finnish government was reported concerned over Sweden's supposed part in transmitting the Soviet demands considered here to be so obviously unacceptable. Popular resentment against Sweden's attitude toward the conflict appeared to be increasing.

There was considerable evidence that Finnish leaders regarded as unchanged their determination to continue fighting. "They Shall Not Pass" was the title of an editorial in Foreign Minister Tanner's newspaper Social Democrat, which asserted Finland was determined to continue to defend her territory. It did not comment on peace proposals."

It was established that Baron Carl Mannerheim, Finnish commander-in-chief, had not left the country. Reports abroad had him at Stockholm.

Baron Mannerheim has remained at his post since the preparatory groundwork for peace talks was started at Stockholm eight days ago, it was said.

Russia Prefers Sweden

(A report from Haparanda, Swedish town on the Finnish border, said Russia had preferred Sweden's services as a mediator rather than be under any obligation to Germany).

The Finnish delegation now at Stockholm left Helsinki two days ago, it was learned. Vaino Voionmaa, former Finnish foreign minister and Paasikivi were listed as Helsinki's two principal spokesmen. Paasiki participated in fruitless negotiations at Moscow which preceded the Russian invasion. (Other reports had said Premier Ryto is also at Stockholm).

The government disclosed receipt of word that a Russian peace proposal was planned, but well-informed persons said it already had been made, with even heavier assaults predicted upon refusal. Copenhagen reports said the Russians set midnight tonight as the deadline.

General Nature Known

At least the general nature of the Russian offer was believed to be known to the Finnish government, with rejection inevitable if demands exceeded those made before the war started November 30. Reports from Stockholm and Copenhagen indicated they did exceed the old ones.

The pre-war demands called for a Russian Naval base at Hanko, in southwestern Finland, cession of part of the Karelian Isthmus to Russia, border revision in the Arctic and demilitarization of the frontier. In return, Finland was offered a portion of Soviet Karelia north of Lake Ladoga.

More significant than the terms, in the opinion of Finns, was the fact that Russia was reported willing to make a settlement at all. Previously the Kremlin has declined to recognize the Finnish government, calling its leaders "White Guards" and declaring it would deal only with a Red Puppet government which it set up at Terijoki in territory occupied by the Red Army at the start of the invasion.

Hostilities Continue

Parallel with the talks of peace efforts, the struggle against the Russian invaders pursued its bitter course, with the Finnish command reporting uncounted Russians were killed as they tried to cross the ice of the Bay of Viipuri under fire.

Finnish lines were described as holding fast from Viipuri to the mouth of the bay. Finnish casualties were not disclosed.

Taipale, the Mannerheim Line fortress on Lake Ladoga, was reported repelling all attacks, but Russian seizure of some islands northeast of there was acknowledged.

Military observers predicted that Russians already in the outskirts of Viipuri would not try to take the city until they could drive back the Finns west and east.

Anne Jamison Gives Recital for Students

Miss Anne Jamison, soprano, who is in the city today to give a recital for the Canadian Concert Association delighted the high school students of the city this morning when she gave a brief program for them in the Collegiate Auditorium. The friendly personality of the young singer and her gifted voice heard in familiar and lovely songs captivated her audience. During her program she called for an "assistant" and on the insistent demand by the students that Miss Bernice Saunders accept Miss Jamison's invitation the local singer appeared on the stage, and sang, with Miss Jamison "Ah Sweet Mystery of Life." Miss Jamison thanked Bernice for her graciousness in taking part in the impromptu number. At the conclusion of her recital, Miss Jamison was besieged with demands for autographs to which she charmingly responded.

$3,115,000,000 VOTE OF CREDIT

Specific appropriations are confined to 100 pounds ($445) each as tokens, "so that the actual sums spent for any war service are secret. These tokens have already been voted for the navy and air force and the army's requirements will come before the House of Commons next.

An explanatory white paper said that the credits represented:—

"An estimate of the amount required to be voted toward defraying expenses which may be incurred during the year ending March 31, 1941 for general ,navy, army and air services and for the Ministry of Supply insofar as specific provision is not made therefore by Parliament, for securing public safety, defence of the United Kingdom, maintenance of public order and efficient prosecution of the war, for maintaining supplies and services essential to the life of the community and generally for all expenses beyond those provided for in the ordinary grants of Parliament, arising out of the existence of a state of war."

CANADIANS DRILL DURING DARKNESS

Correspondent Tells of Night Manoeuvres of 48th Highlanders

By SAM ROBERTSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Aldershot, March 8—(CP Cable) —Britain's nightly air raid precautions black out many activities but not the training program of the Canadian First Division.

When darkness blankets this military command units push out to practice the manoeuvres they will carry out in war zones under cover of night. An infantry battalion goes out on patrol; engineers throw bridges across rivers; a supply column gropes from an imaginary ammunition dump to firing trenches.

I accompanied Toronto's 48th Highlanders last night on a patrol exercise that had the reality and thrills of a night in No Man's Land. The Toronto unit was out at full strength crawling through brush and weeds, and across ditches and hillocks.

With feline stealth the Highlanders wriggled along on their stomachs or bear-crawled on their hands and knees reconnoitring enemy trenches, capturing outposts, seeking information onthe enemy's strength.

The enemy of course were men of the 48th. But they were posted secretly and it was up to the patrol to find them in the baffling blackout.

Training at Night

Lieut.-Colonel E. W. Haldenby is giving the 48th a heavy diet of night work and the men love it. It may sound like a glorified game of hide-and-seek, but there is competition in it and it is training that teaches a man how to keep his skin whole in combat.

"The present phase of activity on the western front is largely night patrols and reconnoitring," Colonel Haldenby said. "Our Canadians helped to control No Man's Land in the last war. With these night exercises we can do it again."

So essential is the need for stealth in such work that some of the Highlanders snaked only 800 yards in the two hours the exercises lasted.

Then they swung home behind their pipers to a hot meal and welcome bunks.

PREMIER DYSART RETIRES IN N. B.

Attorney-General J. B. McNair Will Succeed to Premiership

Fredericton, March 8 (CP)— The retirement of Premier A. A. Dysart was announced today. He will be succeeded by Attorney-General J. B. McNair.

The Premier's resignation from the legislature also was announced. He has held a Kent county seat since 1917.

The announcement of Mr. Dysart's retirement as Premier of New Brunswick came at the end of a two-day caucus of Liberal members-elect of the Provincial legislature. He has been Premier since 1935 and in the Provincial elections last November he again led his party to victory.

On Physian's Advice

In tendering his resignation to the caucus the Premier said he had been reluctantly forced to his decision by insistent advice of his physicians and, as a matter of fact, had remained in office during the last year against the advice of medical counsel.

R. . Gill, M.L.A.-elect for Northumberland and Chairman of the caucus, made the announcement of the Premier's retirement. Mr. Gill said the causus unanimously regretted the Premier's decision, and expressed the highest appreciation of the service he had rendered the province.

The selection of Attorney-General McNair to asusme the Premiership was unanimous, Mr. Gill said.

LEGION CAMPAIGN GOES 'OVER TOP'

Total of $2,372 Collected—Officials Express Appreciation for Generosity of Public

With a total of $2,372.32, exactly $372.32 "over the top" of the original quota of two thousand dollars allotted them, members of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada Belleville Branch No. 201 and prominent business and professional men of the city who comprised the campaign committees are resting on collection laurels while the Canadian Legion War Auxiliary for which the funds were collected will benefit to that amount.

Officials of the club and other campaign committees voiced their appreciation yesterday of the generous response shown to the drive by the residents of this city and district.

Lieut.-Col. E. A. Geen, general campaign chairman, President Fred Wiggins, of the Army and Navy Veterans, and other officials spoke in glowing terms of the generosity shown.

"We were not turned down, or disappointed anytime at any place," said officials, "and the success of the campaign which was started some few days after those in other places depended largely on the ready response of the public. We are proud of the citizens of Belleville."

Officials urged the support of the drive for funds of the Salvation Army which is taking place next week.

Troops in England Appreciate Gifts Of Flashlights

Flashlights and batteries, razor blades (Gillette), shaving soap, cigarettes, chocolate bars and gum, etc., are some of the vital necessities for Canadian troops in England, according to a letter received yesterday from a member of the Toronto Scottish Regiment now stationed at Aldershot.

Due to the blackouts in England 2-cell flashlights are at a premium, the letter states and spare cells and bulbs are needed. Chocolate is also needed owing to the shortage of sugar in the Old Country.

War Effort of King Government Criticized By Militia Officer

Sharp criticism of the Mackenzie King government and its war effort especially as far as local units go, was levelled by Dr. James Howard, newly-elected president of the Belleville National Young Conservative Association here this week.

The speaker charged that the Argyll Light Infantry (tank) and the 34th Field Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery "had been left on the sidelines completely".

"Since the war broke out the unit hasn't received equipment worth a cent and as a member of a unit which has been given the cold shoulder I think something should be done about it".

Declaring he was not criticizing "in any way the men who have already enlisted in the Canadian Active Service Force", Dr. Howard stated that he was asking for action on the part of the remaining two-thirds of Canada's militia, which had been scuttled as ruthlessly as Parliament was on January 25th.

Collegiate News

Library Club, March 7, 1940:

Last Thursday was the first time we visited the Library Club and it seems to be an active, flourishing club—a service club which deserves much more credit than it gets.

The meetings open with roll call, then minutes. A financial report was read by Phyllis Clapp; the club has handled over $100.00 in the last year—a large sum for any club to handle. Marie Doyle read the mending report.

The Library Club recently presented the school with two glass showcases outside the library. They are wired and painted, and one displays good current movies, the other current events, books, mending displays, etc. At present one is devoted to pictures of Lord Tweedsmuir, the other to "The Light That Failed", a movie now running.

Engraved plates presented to Mr. MacLaurin in assembly last week by a member for the Library Club, are to be placed in the cases soon. The Library Club has also bought a copy of "The Queen's book of the Red Cross" which has been signed by all the members.

Girls' Athletic Society:

Girls' Basketball

On Thursday last XII A and XI E played off with XII A victors with a score of 27-8. On Monday XII B played XI D, XII B won with a score of 16-12.

These two games were the semi-finals. The second victory won by XII B was hard-fought and hard won. XI D put up an unexpected amount of competition and it was a touch and go game. The teams were rather wild but played well.

On Thursday XII B plays XII A for the school championship and they are much too close teams to pick the winner now. Both teams are confident of the victory but we have our doubts. The game will be close, well-played, well worth watching and undoubtedly the best game of the year.

Boys' Athletics:

In the pre-scheduled return game between Napanee High School senior basketball team, and B.C.I., our boys again whipped the orange and blue of Napanee in a 29-21 victory in the final play-off game Monday afternoon February 26 in the boys' gym. Both teams were in great condition for the return match and it was one of the hardest-contested games of the season. High point averages were prevalent throughout the entire game with Max Vechter heading B.C.I. scorers with 12 points, and Chapman of the opposing team with 8 points.

In the Junior League B.C.I. again whipped through to score a 29-13 honour over the hard fighting Juniors of Napanee High.

In the play-off game between Albert College Juniors and B.C.I. Juniors, our team also came through with a 27-26 win on Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 28, on Albert's home grounds.

The season's basketball schedule has been played through to a complete success with both Senior and Junior divisions coming out well on top over the opposing teams of the district and for the first time in years the Senior team of B.C.I. are eligible to contend in the play-offs for C.O.S.S.A. championship honours which will be played according to reports about the first week in April at Toronto. Good luck to the Senior team.

Boys' Athletic Reporter.

All commercial students of the B.C.I. along with students from the O.S.D., gathered in the assembly hall this morning to witness a demonstration by Miss Irma Wright of the Underwood Company. Miss Wright, who has been five times Canadian champion typist, and former World's Amateur Champion Typist, has an official record of 118 net five-stroke words a minute. She was in charge of the Canadian women typists during the International typing marathon at the Canadian National Exhibition last fall.

She demonstrated at a rate of 139 words a minute this morning and sent all students back to their class rooms with a renewed interest in typing, and a determination to improve in posture, accuracy and speed.

We all hope to be honoured by another visit from Miss Wright again next year.

Church's Chief Defence Is Christian Propaganda, Says Rt. Rev. Dr. S. C. Parker

Moderator of Presbyterian Church Calls Christians to Recover Zeal of Early Church — Wars, He Said, Are Created Out of Passion in Men's Hearts—Church is the Only Redemption Agency, He Tells Congregation at St. Andrew's Church—Conviction is Urged Upon People — Says the Church Should Have Large Funds Thoroughly to Propagandize the World on Principles of Christianity

Wars are not created just because of such and such a treaty, but because of passion beating in men's hearts, said Rt. Rev. Stuart C. Parker, D.D. of Toronto, Moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, who spoke at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Thursday evening on his visit within the bounds of the Presbytery of Kingston.

Dr. Parker said that the secret of peace lies not in external and concrete adjustments but in the hearts of men. He told how the jealousy, impatience and madness of Germany had caused the war and showed how Bismarck had transformed the spirit of the German people so that today it is unmoral or amoral. "We cannot make peace with them," he said, but must end this situation, remarking that peace would be merely temporary."

Christian Propaganda

The Moderator placed a great task before the church to recover the zeal of the early church, so as to impress the principles of Christianity upon the world. Missions he said were the propaganda of the church and he declared that the Christian church had not the money for necessary propaganda effort it should bring to bear on the world through moulding the human heart of man the world over. While the task was great, he pointed out, yet active minorities ruled the world, not flabby majorities.

"I think sane propaganda is the chief defence of the church" and that 'the key is funds', he said explaining that if the church had the means he would have "the air" shot through with Christian influences, he would have the church crash the moving picture field with influence of noble Christian ideals.

He spoke of the weakening of religion which he traced back to the changed scientific and philosophic outlook beginning 85 years ago as the beginning of the weakening of religion and the consequent lowering of moral standards by many persons.

At the close he said that "the church is the cement that is holding civilization together. It cannot be entirely done away. The Christian church is the prime thing in life."

Rev. Dr. Parker warned that the people should take the times very seriously.

"Seeing It Through"

"Our nation has made up its mind to see it through. I think that not only morally the right thing to do but also the wise thing to do, because it is not possible to do otherwise. We could have peace tomorrow perhaps if we want it, but it would be a peace which we British people (the same I fancy applies to France) needn't and couldn't accept because in the first place it would be temporary for we realize that it is us they are after.

"We cannot make peace with them. We cannot shake hands with murderers, with men to whom lying and treachery have become a matter of policy. You cannot do business with a nation that has thrown goodness and mercy to the winds. Any peace we might make with our adversary would be like the peace Pilate made with Herod over the murder of Jesus. We cannot make Pilate to Germany's Herod and shake hands over the body of murdered Poland.

"So for the first time in history our nation which has been standing for peace and pacific means says there can be no peace — that this must come to an end.

Church's Great Task

"What is the church to do?" asked the moderator. "It will do what it has always done. Its young men enlist, they always do. It is not what we vulgarly call the tough fellows who make the best soldiers. Some of these rough-and-tumble men, who know no religion are much like our enemies, their toughness is not the right kind. The best soldiers, you will find, are the boys brought up in our homes. Many a marvellous deed of heroism has been done by some boy of a Sunday school, not by the swaggerer who goes down the street. Our own Presbyterian Church has 21.7 per cent of the enlistments in Canada up to date. Is that not encouraging even though we are one of the smaller churches. Our boys will do their duty, our women will work for charity, our men will subscribe and work. But is that all the church will do? Is it the church's business to play ambulance to the world? It has a higher, a more ancient task—to create the kind of world that produces desirable conditions. Don't let us forget this in our business of knitting socks, don't let us drug ourselves that that is all we have to do. Had we of the church been more vigorous in impressing Christian principles in influencing the world, there would be a different world.

Salvation in Spiritual Values

"Men are seeing today that wars are not created because of such and such a treaty, but war is caused because there is passion beating in men's hearts. Let us see that the secret of peace lies not in external or concrete adjustments.

He said that "business will not save us from wars. Education will not save. The worst war has occurred when all are educated," declared Dr. Parker. "Science won't save us. Only the strength of spiritual values will save us."

"Of all the institutions of the world the church is the only one that seeks the redemption of the world. The church has to save the world and we are not fit for the job. Let us admit that to ourselves.

"We are crippled in every possible way. This applies to all the churches.

Church is Not Rich

"We are crippled by poverty. The church does not raise the funds to meet the task of impressing Christian values on the world.

"We are crippled by lack of earnestness of the great mass of our people. This has reached a stage which is absolutely paralysing.

"All this mess can be traced back to the weakening of religion and the consequent disregard of moral standards. It began about 85 years ago when the natural sciences were developing, when many men threw their faith away, feeling that science had given it the quietus.

"Germany 'went the whole hog' about science and philosophy. Thousands lost their religion.

Conviction Necessary

"There are several needs. We have got to get back into us people of the church, conviction about things for which we stand. The church is cluttered up with people who have no convictions. People who built the church of the first four centuries were men of conviction. The church then was an earnest Christian minority of religious cranks. They conquered the great Roman Empire and from that time they began to go down. Christianity then became respectable and faded back into the background of life.

"We have lost personal witness. That is the way that Christian civilization was made. The early men who made Christian civilization did the things we won't do. We have got to get convictions.

"Don't let us church people go on humbugging ourselves. The world is not ruled by majorities for majorities are always flabby but it is ruled by vibrant minorities of men who know what they want. What we want is men like the men in the gorgeous first centuries of the Christian era.

Dr. Parker said that a proper notion of the church was necessary. Christ died to found a church that would be a conquering company that would swarm into all the earth and challenge evil and attack it on all its fronts, bring it to the ground and plant the flag of Christ there and sound the bugles of good will.

Propaganda Chief Defence of Church

The Moderator declared missions are propaganda of Christian ideas in all the world. "We need a vastly extended Christian propaganda", he said. "We need ideas put into men's heads? That is why I think sane propaganda is the chief defence of the church."

"You say you cannot change human nature. Bismarck changed the German people from a peace-loving, philosophic, beer-swilling people into a swash-buckling, unmoral amoral people utterly devoid of morality.

"How long did it take an unknown corporal they call Adolf Hitler to influence his nation and have his name on everyone's lips and his principles sunk so deeply into the minds of his nation that they are willing to die for them? Five years."

"That is what Germany has done in five years "for one man, almost an anti-Christ".

"I want to see the church using all the means of propaganda—the air—all manners of programs shot through with Christian influence. But we haven't the money. I want to see Christianity crash the moving picture industry, shooting all through with Christian influence. Where are the children getting the influences which mould them? In the movies. You didn't think from the Sunday School did you?

Why Has Not Church the Money?

It would take millions and millions of dollars to do it. Why should not the church have money?

"We have to put our house in order, the church all through the world has to take its coat off and get to work.

"We need a huge Christian propaganda. Don't imagine we don't know how to do it?"

"The key to it all is funds. There are a million things we could do."

Rev. Mr. Hunter of Madoc, was in charge of devotions and Rev. W. J. Walker, minister of St. Andrew's, welcomed the Moderator.

Early in the evening Dr. Parker, spoke to a gathering at a banquet in the church rooms on the condition of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. He was heard by members of various congregations in this district. Today the Moderator is in Kingston.

Germany Must Succumb To Effective Siege Says Geological Society

New York, Mar. 8 (AP).—A geological study concluding that Germany already is besieged effectively and must succumb in the end was issued today by the Geological Society of America.

The study covered oil and mineral resources and topography. It was made by Prof. Douglas Johnson, head of Columbia University's Department of Geology, who was an Intelligence Service Major in the First Great War.

He concludes that the Allies can deprive Russia of three-quarters of her oil, proving "disastrous to Russia and almost certainly fatal to Germany." The armies already concentrating in the near east could do this, he says, by seizing Batum on the Black Sea and Baku on the Caspian.

Batum is in Russia fifteen miles from the Turkish border, and Baku is a Russian port 100 miles from Persian territory. Prof. Johnson finds serious topographical barriers to taking these ports.

He finds that Germany's oil situation will be acute when military operations begin on a large scale. He says:

"Rumania and Russia, while large producers of oil, have but limited surpluses available for export, Russia in recent years having shipped abroad only 1,000,000 or 2,000,000 barrels annually out of a total production of over 20,000,000 barrels."

Ontario Appeal Court Reverses Decision Of Justice Greene

Toronto, March 8—(CP)—In a judgment involving consideration of Ontario school laws, Ontario appeal court today ruled that the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham must pay the board of school sections 16 and 18 of Murray and Brighton townships the cost of transporting pupils outside the boundaries of the sections to and from a continuation school at Wooler.

The judgment reverses a finding of Mr. Justice A. W. Greene who found in favor of the counties which had disputed the claim of $1,176 incurred in 1937 on the ground that transportation of the pupils was not part of the cost of county pupils toward which they have to make a contribution.

New York, March 8—(CP)—The New York Times said editorially today that the dramatic voyage to New York of the new super liner Queen Elizabeth "proves that the British are looking ahead to the days of peace, and to the laurels of peace which must be won."

"The British were right in not leaving such a ship at the mercy of an air attack at home," the newspaper added. "Their luxury liners will have a job to do when the war is over."

RUSSIAN PRESS KEEPS SILENCE

No Evidence Seen of Soviet Readiness to Make Peace With Finland

Moscow, March 8—(AP)— Evidences of Russian readiness to make peace with the Finnish government at Helsinki were lacking in Moscow today.

The press did not mention the reports circulating throughout the world of Russian terms presented to the Finns. No information concerning any peace negotiations was available in authoritative quarters. Officials were non-committal.

The Komsomolskaya Pravda, organ of the Soviet youth movement, gave prominence to an article declaring that "the days of the Mannerheim-Tanner regime are counted."

The article, reprinted from the organ of the "Finnish People's Government" established with Moscow's recognition at Terijoki, in Russian-occupied Finland, said Helsinki was "doomed by the heroism and might of the Red Army and the failure of foreign states to fulfil their promises of extensive aid" to Finland It was signed by Otto Kuusinen, head of the Terijoki regime.

"It is time for the soldiers and citizens of Finland to decide whether it is worth while to spill more blood for Mannerheim and Tanner," it said. "The Finnish people want to live in peace."

GERMANS SAY SHIPS ATTACKED

German News Agency Reports German Raids on British Coast

Berlin, March 8.—(AP) — The German News Agency, DNB, reported today that German planes raiding off the British coast last night and the night before sank or severely damaged 11 merchant ships.

The agency said the ships either were in convoy or operating with screened lights.

Their gross tonnage was estimated at 30,000.

The attacking planes returned safely to their bases, the agency said.

Communique

The raids were described also in the High Command's daily communique which follows—

"No special events on the western front except local artillery activity.

"During the nights of March 6-7 and 7-8 the air force again undertook successful raids against the British East Coast. In the course thereof, despite strong defence, a total of 11 British merchantmen convoyed or with lights screened sailing along the British East Coast were sunk or severely hit.

"All German planes participating in these raids returned without losses. One plane commissioned to reconnaissance of Northern Scotland is missing."

(London announced one German plane was shot down yesterday.)

"The night of March 6-7 a single English plane entered German (Heligoland) Bight. All planes except one turned back before reaching the German coast.

"Danish and Luxembourg territory was violated by enemy planes entering Northern and Western Germany the night of March 7-8."

U.S. Receives No Request to Mediate Russo-Finnish War

Washington, March 8—(AP)—President Roosevelt said today the United States government had received no request for mediation in the Russo-Finnish war.

Beyond saying that, however, the president declined to discuss European reports that mediation efforts of the United States government might be sought.

The president told his press conference that such matters were of a nature that could not be discussed even if negotiations were going on.

To another inquiry whether Sumner Welles, who is making a fact-finding tour of Europe for Mr. Roosevelt, was participating in any Russo-Finnish negotiations, the president remarked there was nothing to be said on that.

A state department official said no request for United States mediation thus far either formally or informally had been received.

He declined to say what would be the attitude of the government if such a request arrived. The state department, it was explained, was following with greatest interest reports of mediation and peace prospects in the Finnish-Russian war, but was doing nothing more than that.

(In London, usually well-informed sources said today that the United States might be asked to mediate.)

Unofficially some doubt is felt here that Russia would accept United States mediation because of the strong attitude the American government has taken against Russia and in favor of Finland.

Observers recalled the speech of Soviet Premier Molotoff at the end of last year in which he called into question United States impartiality.

Prime Minister King Issues Statement on Expenditures of War

Ottawa, March 8—(CP)—Only the amounts actually expended before Sept. 1, 1939, should be included in discussing pre-war defence expenditures by the government, Prime Minister Mackenzie King said in a statement issued today, referring to Conservative leader Manion's comments on use made by the present administration of defence appropriations.

The Prime Minister's statement follows:

The leader of the opposition has been asking what the government did with the $188,000,000 which, he declares, was provided for defence before the war.

In answering this question in my speech at Winnipeg, I pointed out that before the outbreak of hostilities the government had actually spent:

1. The unexpended portion of $17,000,000 voted by parliament under the previous government for the fiscal year 1935-36.
2. $94,000,000 in the three full fiscal years 1936-37, 1937-38, 1938-39.
3. A part of the amount of more than $60,000,000 voted by parliament for the fiscal year 1939-40.

In my speech I did not add these three amounts together, but their total was given the same evening by the Minister of National Defence as approximately $122,000,000.

To this total Dr. Manion has deliberately added the $64,000,000 voted by parliament for defence in the fiscal year 1939-40. He has carefully avoided pointing out that his $64,000,000 was provided for a fiscal year which will not end until March 31. Only the amount actually expended before September, 1939, should be included in any statement of pre-war expenditures.

This explains very simply the difference in the figures quoted by the Minister of National Defence, Dr. Manion and myself. They relate to different periods of expenditure.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE NORTH SHORE OF VIIPURI BAY; RUSSO-FINN PEACE MOVE SHIFTS TO MOSCOW

Riga in Latvia May be Centre of Final Negotiations

Attention Centres on Whereabouts of Dr. Paasikivi, Finnish Negotiator, Who is Reported to Have Left Stockholm and Believed to be in Berlin or Enroute to Moscow

UNOFFICIAL TERMS

Russia Demands Fulfillment of Terms Before Even Accepting an Armistice—Unofficial Terms Are Ceding to Russia of Isthmus, Entire North Coast of Lake Ladoga, Hanko Port and Part of Petsamo District

Stockholm, Mar. 9 (AP).—Negotiations toward a Russo-Finnish peace appeared today to have shifted to Moscow, with Sweden's role in the matter more or less finished.

Attention was centred on the whereabouts of Dr. Juhu Justi Paasikivi, Finnish negotiator who was reported to have left Stockholm and was believed to be in Berlin or en route to Moscow.

Paasikivi led the Finnish delegation which unsuccessfully negotiated in Moscow before the Russian invasion began last Nov. 30.

There were rumors that Riga, Latvia, might be the centre of final negotiations, and that a Finnish delegation is en route there to meet Soviet representatives.

Outcome Shrouded.

These reports developed as efforts to settle the war in Finland drew toward a climatic stage with the probably outcome still shrouded by indecision and official secrecy.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Sky and art! The old joke about artists painting a star or two within the crescent of the moon brings to mind also that clouds are often painted unlike those found in nature. Clouds are fleeting things—they are careless about remaining in the same position long. So the best artists may do is to hastily sketch their forms, and take notes as to color and shadings. Attention has been called to painting of those huge, white, billowy clouds intended for spring or summer cumulus. But these clouds have flat bases with rounded tops. Flat bases remind us that the condensation level is a certain height, and there the bases begin which must be flat.

SHIPS SUNK THIS WEEK

By The Canadian Press

British and German marine losses were fairly equally balanced the week ending March 8.

While mines and submarines were in continued use against Allied and neutral vessels, the German air force was unusually active in bombing forays, but few ships were sunk.

One vessel badly damaged, the 10,516-ton British tanker Charles P. Meyer, made port, while another, the 5,335-ton Italian ship Amelia Laro, attacked by German aircraft, was still afloat although badly burned.

The German losses were the 6,530-ton Heidelberg, captured by the Royal Navy after leaving The Netherlands West Indies, and the 5,846-ton Uruguay, scuttled when intercepted in the North Atlantic.

The week's losses, as compiled by The Canadian Press:

Nationality	No. of Ships	Tonnage
British	5	13,827
German	2	12,376
Netherlands	3	3,062
Swedish	1	2,816
Norwegian	1	1,366

$35 Rent Bill Indirect Cause Of Dispute

Roberval, Que., Mar. 9 (CP).—A rent bill for $35 was the indirect cause of a dispute which brought death to one man and the serious wounding of two other St. Ludger de Milot villagers under treatment in hospital here.

Witnesses declared yesterday at an inquest into the death of 66-year-old Michel Tremblay, shot on Tuesday at St. Dudger with his two sons-in-law, that non-payment of the rent bill resulted in an eviction order and the tragic dispute in the nearby village.

Tremblay who was shot on the threshold of the home of his son, Jean Baptiste Tremblay, when an armed bailiff arrived to carry out the eviction order was "responsible for his own death", a coroner's jury decided.

Bailiff Exonerated.

The jury exonerated Bailiff J. A. Cote who admitted having fired revolver shots at Tremblay; Gustave Maltais and Albert St. Hilaire. Cote testified it was the first time he had carried a gun while carrying out his duties.

The inquest was conducted in Roberval Hospital. Maltais and St. Hilaire, the dead man's sons-in-law, under treatment there testified from their hospital beds. Maltais is in grave condition from a wound in his right side. St. Hilaire is being treated for a lung wound.

Bailiff Cote said he had fired at the three men who stood in the doorway of the Tremblay home when Joseph Gaudrault, the landlord who had obtained the eviction order was knocked down by a blow from a rifle butt.

PRIME MINISTER DEFENDS EMPIRE TRAINING PLAN

Defence Minister Rogers Tells Kingston Audience Soldiers Well Equipped

By the Canadian Press

The week which saw the hottest political debates of the Dominion election campaign winds up in a blaze of oratory with government leaders vigorously replying to criticism of the military aspects of the war effort and Conservatives hitting out at Prime Minister Mackenzie King and his administration.

New topics were broached and new information of how Canadian soldiers overseas were equipped was provided last night as the Prime Minister and Finance Minister Ralston led the Liberal campaign and Conservative leader Manion and leading lieutenants made renewed appeals for their party's cause.

Mr. King dealt exclusively, in a national broadcast from Ottawa, with the Commonwealth air training plan and previous negotiations for air training arrangements. He denied charges by Conservatives regarding the latter and defended the government's attitude both in earlier negotiations with Britain and in reaching the present agreement.

PLAN PROJECTED BY GREAT BRITAIN SAYS MR. KING

Air Training Plan Could Not Have Been Evolved in Peacetime Says Speaker

DEVELOPED EARLY

(By Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, March 9—(CP) — The Commonwealth Air Training Plan "has made Canada, for the purpose of final victory in the present war, a pivotal centre of the British Commonwealth," Prime Minister Mackenzie King said as he denied charges relating to air training made by Conservative leaders.

Speaking over the national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in a 15-minute election address last night, he denied that alleged failure of the Dominion government to co-operate with the United Kingdom in affording air training facilities in Canada in 1938 delayed the present agreement and retarded development of the Canadian aircraft industry.

A huskiness in Mr. King's voice during his speech was noticeable but his secretary said later that he was suffering a slight cold but it was not serious enough to keep him from his office.

Mr. King said the Commonwealth Air Training plan could not have been evolved in peacetime and could not have been developed sooner than it was. "No earlier discussion or decision could have affected our military and financial position under the agreement as it was finally signed.

Allies Willing to Intervene With Expeditionary Force If Finns Ask, Papers Predict

French Cabinet Thoroughly Explores Developments in Finnish - Russian War

FRENCH OPINION

Paris, Mar. 9 (AP).—The French cabinet thoroughly explored today the latest developments in the Finnish-Russian war as newspapers predicted the Allies would be willing to intervene with an expeditionary force if Finland gives the word.

Premier Daladier and his ministers were closeted for 2½ hours with President Albert Lebrun, and a communique—avoiding details of the deliberations — said only that the premier in reporting on the international situation was particularly emphatic in regard to Finnish developments.

The communique's mention of the importance attached to the Finnish question, however, bore out statements yesterday that Great Britain and France are considering expanding means of aiding the Finns.

That an expeditionary force is being considered despite rumors of peace negotiations between Russia and Finland was indicated in the press with a noticeable hardening of French opinion toward the Scandinavian neutrals.

Former Premier Leon Blum, writing in his Socialiste le Populaire, said there was reason to believe that France and Britain — if formally asked by Finland—would "transport an expeditionary force without submitting their decision to the express consent of Norway or Sweden."

Already, the allies have dispatched 400 warplanes, nearly 1,000 cannon and lesser arms to the embattled northern government.

Meanwhile Paul Reynaud, Finance Minister directing the French economic war against Nazi Germany marshalled for Sumner Welles the facts and figures on his behind-the-front campaign. Reynaud's conference with President Roosevelt's investigator was held after the cabinet meeting.

Reynaud's latest public pronouncement was his broadcast of Feb. 29, declaring that the nation's financial structure is sound, but announcing revaluation of the gold supply on a basis of current foreign exchange and restrictions on food consumption.

ROBT. R. SIMPSON HAMILTON, DIES

President of Hamilton Jockey Club Dies Suddenly at His Home

Hamilton, Ont., March 9—(CP) —Robert R. Simpson (age unavailable), President of the Hamilton Jockey Club, died suddenly at his home today. Earlier in the week he complained of a slight attack of influenza.

Mr. Simpson, as Vice-President of the Jockey Club, succeeded to the Presidency in December, 1936, on the death of Harry McIntyre, a former business partner. He was familiar to race patrons on the Hamilton track and other racing strips throughout Canada and the United States.

Ardent Sportsman

An ardent sportsman, Mr. Simpson was most active in curling, having been a member of the Hamilton Thistle Club for the past 25 years. In 1928 he was President of the club's curling section and was formerly well-known as a skip. He did little curling in recent years but always took a keen interest in the sport. He also was a staunch baseball supporter.

For many years, Mr. Simpson and Mr. McIntyre were associated as partners in the old Royal Hotel here, mecca of Hamilton night life and social activity in the early years of the century. Later Mr. Simpson became manager of the Canadian Knitting Mills, Ltd., and also was associated in management of the Wentworth Mineral Water Company.

In early years of his commercial life, Mr. Simpson was connected with a commission house operated by his father here. He later operated hotels at Buffalo and Niagara Falls, N. Y.

Parallel bulletins in French will go out over the C.B.C.'s French network. Regional bulletins of Canadian Press news and the regular night national news summary will be broadcast as usual.

KING DIFFERENT MAN IN OR OUT OF POWER—MANION

Conservative Leader States King Gov't. Promised "New Era" for Workers

CENSORSHIP CRITICIZED

(By Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Charlottetown, March 9—(CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King is two different men when he is in and out of power, Conservative leader Manion told more than 2,000 supporters in the Strand theatre here last night.

Dr. Manion said that what Mr. King promised to do and what he did were hard to reconcile.

"He promised a 'new era' for the workers," Dr. Manion said, "but has since done nothing for the unemployed and the youth of our nation."

Dr. Manion spoke in support of the two district candidates, Chester McLure and John O. Hyndman.

The Conservative leader said the current banning of broadcasts of political meetings was typical of a "Hitlerite Government," adding: "They can't do better than that over there."

He noted that Australia had just formed a national government such as he proposed in Canada.

Allied Officials Silent in Russo-Finn Peace Project Situation

'CRITICAL' WEEKEND

London Newspaper Sees Hitler at Work in Project to Get Russia Out of Finnish Adventure

London, March 9 (CP)—Indications increased today that Great Britain and France are considering greater aid to Finland, if peace negotiations fail to end the Russian invasion.

Officials kept silent on the Russo-Finnish negotiations. It was apparent in high quarters, however the British government wants no Finnish "surrender."

Many newspapers demanded that British and French aid be given to Finland on the largest possible scale, if Finland should find Russia's peace terms unreasonable and unacceptable.

As the German foreign minister, Joachim Von Ribbentrop, sped to Rome on a mission which British diplomatic commentators interpreted as an attempt to make Italy a more active partner in the western

HEPBURN PLANS INQUIRY WITHIN SCOPE OF GOV'T

Asserts There Was "Violent Disturbance" at Air School on February 10

DETAILS NOT GIVEN

St. Thomas, Ont., March 9 (CP) —Premier Mitchell Hepburn plans an inquiry, within the scope of the Ontario government, into conditions at the Royal Canadian Air Force technical training centre here which, he asserts, resulted in a "violent disturbance" at the school a month ago.

The Premier announced his intention last night after another telegram from Hon. Norman Rogers, Minister of National Defence, in reply to Mr. Hepburn's allegations of a "walkout" of aircraftsmen at the training centre.

Details of the manner of the probe, to be opened Monday, were not announced immediately. There may have been a hint, however, in a statement in Mr. Rogers' latest telegram: "You have further advised me that you propose to question public officials and local citizens. That is a matter on which you must make your own decision."

Finnish Defenders of City Menaced From Behind—Finns, However, Claim All Enemy Attacks From East Repulsed With Loss of 18 Tanks and Several Guns

Finnish Air Force Bombed and Machine-Gunned Russian Forces Seeking to Beat Their Way Across Ice on Bay of Viipuri — Peace Overtures Bring No Let-up in Fighting

Helsinki, March 9 (AP) — The Finnish high command announced today that the Red Army driving across the frozen bay of Viipuri had secured "a restricted foothold on the northwest shore of the bay" and captured some islands.

The great battle for Viipuri continued with undiminished intensity in the midst of efforts from outside to find a basis for Finnish-Russian peace.

The advance of the Russians on the northwest shore of Viipuri Bay produced a grave threat to Viipuri's coastal communications with the rest of Finland, menacing the Finnish defenders of the City from behind.

To the east of Viipuri, the army announced, "all enemy attacks were repulsed" with the Russians suffering loss of men and at least 18 tanks and several guns."

Extensive Finnish Successes

Extensive Finnish successes along the eastern front were reported at the same time.

The army said a Russian detachment, whose size was not given, was "completely annihilated" at Lavajaervi, that the Russians again lost "a large number of men" in furious but fruitless attacks throughout yesterday at Kollaanjoki, and that at Kuhmo, below the nation's narrow "wasp waist," the Finns captured some Russian positions, "much booty and 125 prisoners."

For the third successive day the high command told how the Finnish air force bombed and machine-gunned Russian forces seeking to beat their way across the ice of the bay of Viipuri.

Besides the troops it said, there were columns of trucks, sledges and tanks.

Six Russian planes were reported shot down yesterday.

There was no official comment today on the reported peace negotiations but the communique showed clearly that the overtures had brought no let-up in the fighting.

Flooded With Rumors.

Helsinki was flooded with all sorts of rumors from abroad, some going to the extent that fighting had ceased on the Karelian Isthmus. But most of the reports were utterly without foundation.

According to best information available here, the situation is this:

"The Finnish government received certain peace proposals from Moscow by way of Stockholm several days ago.

They were more far reaching than Soviet Russia's demands last autumn, before the war started Nov. 30.

It is not known whether a Finnish reply has been sent or whether there has been any further communication as to possible modification of the Russian proposals.

For the first time since Tuesday, Helsinki had an air raid alarm this

Over 600 Candidates To be Nominated On Monday Next

More than 600 candidates will be officially nominated on Monday to contest the Dominion general elections March 26. A survey by The Canadian Press today showed 619 accredited candidates in the 245 federal constituencies.

The question of acclamations of course can not be decided until the official nominations are concluded on Monday but the unofficial list of candidates already indicates a contest in 227 seats, and of the remaining 18 constituencies where so far only one candidate has been announced, 17 are in Quebec. In 1935 there were no acclamations.

The Liberal government forces have nominated 239 candidates to date. The Conservatives have 193 National Government candidates and there are 98 Cooperative Commonwealth Federation aspirants in the running. Various other political schools of thought are represented by 89 candidates.

Dr. Dobbie, in making the presentations, said it seldom was the lot of a Grand Master to invest the jewel on a Past Grand Master and that he considered the honor the crowning peak in his Masonic career. He referred to Mr. Herrington as a "Mason known all over the world."

AN "IMPRESSIVE" INVITATION

Hamilton, N. It cost him 86 cents for stamps but he believes it will be worth it for he is trying to convince Jane Hardy of Sweet Briar, Va., that she should accept his invitation to the Junior Prom here on May 3.

No Change Likely in Italian Policy As a Result of Ribbentrop's Visit

Rome, March 9—(AP)— An informed Italian source said today Italy probably will retain her policy of non-belligerency after the visit here of the German Foreign Minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop.

This informant said the visit, while "important," is not regarded by Italians as an occasion for alarm.

Adolf Hitler was believed in Italian circles to have taken the initiative in sending von Ribbentrop, and diplomatic sources suspected he might be seeking Italy's aid in case of war in Scandinavia as a result of British-French help to Finland.

Vatican authorities, meanwhile, announced Pope Pius XII would receive the German Foreign Minister in private audience Monday.

Italians assumed that von Ribbentrop's conversations with Premier Mussolini and Count Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister, would cover the entire international situation, including the Finnish-Russian conflict, the Italian-British coal controversy and the possibility of war spreading to Scandinavia, the Balkans or the near east.

Well-informed Fascists expressed belief Germany is inclined to exert pressure on Russia to moderate her peace terms to Finland.

They also thought Britain and France had informed the Finns of aid they were prepared to furnish.

If Finland Appeals for Help Allies Must Supply it Quickly Papers Say

London, March 9 —(CP)— If the Finns appeal to the Allies for direct aid rather than accept Russia's peace terms, "they must have all which can be furnished them, for the honor of our crusade," the Daily Telegraph said today.

The Daily Mail, recalling that Britain and France surrendered 40 Czech divisions, the Maginot Line of Bohemia and the great Skoda works in return for 12 months to further their war preparations, urged the Allies not to lose "the only really strongly fortified position in Scandinavia."

"There can be no illusions in Scandinavia," said the Daily Telegraph. "Once Finland submitted to mutilation, Bolshevist armies would be immediately on Norway's frontier. Sweden would see the whole of the eastern Baltic and Gulf of Bothnia dominated by the Bolshevist power.

"We cannot think any Scandinavian statesman, though, he cares for nothing but the interests of his country, would advise Finland to choose peace on these conditions.

"It would be the height of folly to expect from the past workings of the Nazi-Bolshevist alliance any proposals which a small nation could trust. There is no chance that the Finns will accept terms tantamount to their national death and individual ruin. They will fight to the last.

Welfare Service of Salvation Army for Soldiers Fourfold

For over a period of seventy-five years the Salvation Army has been constantly at war—at war with poverty and misery—sin and wrong. And now comes another war—a war of man against man—of nation against nation.

War imposes upon the Salvation Army extra tasks and a heavier burden of responsibility. As in the Great War of 1914-18 the Salvation Army will again accompany the Canadian troops to the battlefields to do its bit to keep alive the spirit of Christian kindness amidst the cruelty and devastation of war. Its welfare service is fourfold. (1) The Red Shield huts and service overseas with the Canadian troops. (2) Auxiliary services in Canadian assembly camps in England or elsewhere. (3) Service centres in camps and cities throughout the Dominion. (4) The home service activities of the Salvation Army.

Since the war was declared, the Salvation Army has performed excellent service in providing clothing and shelter as well as medical supplies for thousands of European refugees driven out of Poland, Czecho-slovakia and East Prussia by the Nazi invasion. In addition, they are already operating many huts and rest rooms in France and England, for the convenience of the Allied troops.

The splendid services provided by the Salvation Army among the troops were very well summed up by a young seaman visiting the Halifax Army hostel a short time ago, who told of his own reaction to this particular war time service with these words: "I like this place," he said, "because it is ninety-eight per cent. service and only two per cent profit. In fact it is not difficult for any soldier or ex-serviceman to feel warmly toward the Salvation Army, whose fine work during the last Great War was fully appreciated by the boys who went overseas.

Belleville Veteran Praises S.A. Work

Robt. Brown of N. Front Street is one ex-serviceman who cannot speak too highly of the Army's war effort among the soldiers during the last war. Mr. Brown went overseas with the 48th Highlanders of Toronto, and went through the battles of Vimy Ridge, Arras and Amiens with that battalion. Always, said Mr. Brown, the canteens and huts of the Salvation Army were to be found right up among the reserves, and proved to be life-savers for many a hungry lad who could always purchase hot coffee, biscuits, cake or canned meats at a very nominal sum.

To carry on their invaluable service to the troops overseas in the present war the Salvation Army is sponsoring a Red Shield War Service campaign with an objective of $1,000,000 throughout the Dominion. The local campaign has a $3,500 objective and is scheduled to start on Monday. Its record of the last war is well known. Help it to "Carry On."

Sunday School Classes Entertained At Bridge St. Church

Last evening in Bridge Street Church Parlors, the children of the Beginners' and Primers' departments were entertained at a supper party. They were received by their teachers, Miss Ethel Morden, superintendent of Primary, Miss Helen Sulman and Mrs. A. C. Wilkin and their assistants, Miss Jean Henry, Miss C. McGee, Miss Marie Carscallen, Miss Margaret Semple and Miss Russell. After a short period of games, Mr. Shortt delighted the tots with motion pictures suitable to their age. Then the children, about 150 in number sat down to a sumptuous supper. The tables were most inviting decorated in Spring colors and laden with all that small children could desire. Dr. Semple, Mr. Clayton Burr, Supt. of Sunday School and Miss Angin, Supt. of Cradle Roll department were supper guests. Several mothers and friends, who assisted most capably in serving included, Mrs. Lind, Mrs. Hefkey, Mrs. McCullough, Mrs. Morden, Mrs. Henry, Mrs. Jamieson and Miss Ann Ketcheson.

After supper an impromptu program proved most interesting and prizes for best numbers were awarded to Charles Bateman, John Hagerman, Doris Wickett, Beverley Lawson, Carolyn Thompson, Carol O'Flynn, Betty Woodley, Grace Graham, Pat Neal and Mary Lou Campbell. Promptly at seven o'clock the parents came for the children, who one and all decided it was the best party ever held.

NO CHANGE LIKELY IN ITALIAN POLICY

tend further help to Finland were indicated today in London and Paris).

Copenhagen dispatches to Italian newspapers reported the Allies were pressing Sweden for permission to send troops through Swedish territory to Finland.

Hitler May Ask For Help.

Word that von Ribbentrop is coming here gave rise to belief in some quarters that Hitler would ask Italian help in Russo-Finnish negotiations, possibly by attempting to hold allied attention on the Mediterranean.

Informed Fascists said that once the Russian terms and the prospects of increased allied assistance to the Finns were known, the Finns would have to decide for themselves whether to accept the former or rely on the latter.

They had no confirmation of Berlin reports that the former Finnish president, Per Evind Svinhufvud, is coming to Rome. It was said, in any case, such a visit would be postponed until after von Ribbentrop's departure.

London dispatches reporting a summary of Britain's reply to the coal blockade protest, which may be delivered here tomorrow, said the reply is expected to make relations between London and Rome "more cordial", and that commercial negotiations may be resumed.

Fascist circles predict the British prize court will free the seized Italian vessels laden with German coal—once the coal has been removed.

Von Ribbentrop is due in Rome Sunday at 10 a.m. (4 a.m. EST).

Italians said the German Foreign Minister is accompanied by four or five foreign office experts including Dr. Karl Clodius, trade treaty negotiator.

Von Ribbentrop is expected to remain two days. Italian newspapers predict that during his visit he will apologize for the bombing of the Italian merchant vessel Amelia Lauro off the British coast this week.

HEPBURN PLANS INQUIRY

At the same time Mr. Hepburn said he would not accept a previously tendered invitation from the Defence Minister to visit the school Monday, accompanied by newspapermen, and "ask any questions you or they wish to ask."

Mr. Hepburn took occasion to label as "just welching" Mr. Rogers' attitude in his telegram, which read in part: "I do not propose to share your responsibility for making the Royal Canadian Air Force the target of a bitter political controversy."

Statement Issued.

To The Canadian Press, Mr. Hepburn issued a statement declaring that his demand for an inquiry was not intended to reflect on "the character or efficiency of the officers and staff at this training institution nor on the personnel of the school in any way". Rather, he said, the officers and personnel "are victims of inefficiency in the Department of National Defence at Ottawa.

"I realize that the men who comprise the training staff are handicapped greatly through the lack of proper facilities and that they undoubtedly have been carrying on under extreme difficulties."

The training centre, which has an enrollment of about 900 men and an additional 250 personnel, was originally built as a provincial mental hospital. At the start of the war Ontario offered it to the Dominion government for military purposes.

"I thought Rogers was willing to co-operate in this matter," Mr. Hepburn said in reference to Mr. Rogers' telegram, after arriving at his farm home here from Toronto. "But I find now he is just welching."

Mr. Rogers' telegram detailed Mr. Hepburn's charges as follows:

Telegram Detailed.

"1. That there was a violent disturbance at the Royal Canadian Air Force training centre near St. Thomas, involving several hundred men.

"2. That it took the military authorities several days to round up the men.

"3. That I had given the men blanket leave so that I could deny there had been any disturbance.

"4. That the censors warned local newspapermen that the story could not be published."

The first of these, Mr. Rogers said, had "no foundation in fact" and the second was "equally untrue". The third he termed "absolutely untrue".

"Your statement that the censors had warned local newspapermen the story of the alleged occurrences at St. Thomas could not be published is also untrue," the minister said. "It has been denied officially by the censorship authorities in Ottawa and confirmed by the editors of the St. Thomas Times-Journal."

It was announced from Mr. Rogers' office that whether or not the premier visited the training centre newspapermen still would be allowed to go there.

POSSIBLE APPEAL FOR ALLIED AID

war and perhaps in striving to settle the northern struggle, it was announced here that Viscount Halifax, foreign secretary, conferred yesterday with Giusepppe Bastiannini, Italian ambassador.

Halifax Confers with Bastiannini

The conference, first since the Italian ambassador's return from a visit to Rome, was at the invitation of Lord Halifax and was said to be concerned with the dispute over Britain's blockade of Italian coal purchases from Germany.

It was indicated, however, the talks extended beyond this to the entire sphere of Anglo-Italian relations.

The meeting was described as friendly and tending to improve the situation in the coal controversy, but it was not disclosed whether any settlement formula was found.

The British reply to Italy's protest over seizure of Italian ships carrying German-mined coal will be presented in a day or two, informed sources said.

Very 'Critical' Week-End

The News-Chronicle (Liberal) called this week-end "one of the most critical of the war," and said Sweden is "pressing the Finns to 'appease' Russia in precisely the same way that England and France pressed Dr. Benes (president of former Czecho-Slovakia) to appease Germany in Sept., 1938".

A French spokesman in Paris let it be known that although the decision for peace or continued war was up to Finland, the Allies felt that once Russia gained possession of Finnish defences by negotiation she might invade the rest of the country at will, as Germany did in Czecho-Slovakia after the Munich agreement.

To prevent such an eventuality, the French spokesman said, the Allies were "ready to continue and perhaps even increase their aid to Finland."

Sees Possible Appeal to Allies

The Daily Telegraph (Conservative) declared: "If negotiations prove that they will not give Finland peace with honor, she doubtless will appeal to Britain, France and the rest of the world for help. She must have it swiftly and in ample measure."

The Daily Herald (Labor), remarked that Adolf Hitler and Joachim Von Ribbentrop of Germany hope to "pull Russia out of her unhappy Finnish adventure and swing her into open hostility against Britain and France."

It said, "they hope at the same time to goad Italy into joining Germany in her war. The play is a little obvious. Both Moscow and Rome are likely to think many times before accepting the role of auxiliaries to the Nazi Reich."

Meanwhile, Reuters news agency, reported that the French charge d'affaires in Moscow and the United States ambassador had visited the Swedish embassy in Moscow, and that Laurence A. Steinhardt, the United States ambassador, had talked for two hours at the Kremlin with Russia's premier, Vyacheslaff Molotoff.

May Reaffirm Determination

The British reply to Italy was expected to reaffirm Britain's determination to stop all German coal exports to Italy and offer to substitute British coal. A compromise was held possible on the type of Italian products to be exchanged for coal by taking some agricultural produce, as Italy wants, and some heavy industrial goods, such as arms upon which Britain has been insistent.

Von Ribbentrop's visit produced few signs of concern in British quarters.

Informed sources expressed skepticism that Italy would be swung into any triple alliance with Germany and Russia against Britain and France—a scheme which the Daily Herald said was one of the German minister's objectives in Rome.

One problem confronting authorities here was Sweden's increasing reluctance to serve as a gateway for Allied aid to the Finns.

Observers attached significance to the emphasis in some sections of the press on Sweden's obligation under the League of Nations covenant to allow passage of troops bound for Finland. Whether any such insistence by the government was being considered was a secret.

PROTEST PARADE AT ST. THOMAS SAYS MacPHERSON

CAN BUY UNIFORMS

Regina, March 9—(CP)—M. A. MacPherson, K.C., before an election audience here last night read an extract from a letter which he said told of a protest parade by 400 men of the Royal Canadian Air Force stationed at St. Thomas, Ont., on Feb. 10.

Mr. MacPherson, national government candidate in Regina for the March 26 federal election, said the letter was written by one of the men at the Air Force station to his brother in Regina.

Premier Hepburn of Ontario has charged that "violent disturbances" occurred at the St. Thomas, Ont., Air Force technical training centre, Defence Minister Rogers has issued a denial and has invited the premier to visit the premises.

Mr. MacPherson, who said the writer of the letter enlisted in the R.C.A.F. Oct. 23, 1939, quoted from a letter dated Feb. 11, 1940:

"Four hundred of us staged a protest parade yesterday after dinner. We just marched out of the place."

Reads from Letter

From a letter which Mr. MacPherson declared was written by the same man Feb. 3, 1940, he quoted:

"I haven't had so much as a suit of underwear nor a shirt and still no uniform outside of a great coat and a hat. Not half of the men are properly clothed and still they expect us to stand outside in parade and shiver while waiting for the officer of the day to put in an appearance. They tell us they can't get uniforms and still at the same time anyone who has the money and is foolish enough to do so can go to the military stores in London and buy a uniform."

Mr. MacPherson who spoke on the same platform as Hon. H. H. Stevens, former Conservative minister of trade and commerce, said he was not concerned with the quarrel of Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Premier Hepburn except that it had served to reveal certain facts.

Received Three Calls

Yesterday morning he received three calls—one from a mother of a boy in St. Thomas, one from the friend of a boy who had returned from St. Thomas to Regina and the third from a Reginan who had produced two letters from his brother in St. Thomas. He then quoted from these letters.

"Let's get through with this sort of thing," Mr. MacPherosn added. "Let's get rid of a government that buries its head in the sand in Ottawa."

Mr. Stevens in his address claimed the opening of the war has found the government unable to supply Canadian soldiers with underclothing, boots and uniforms.

"I saw many hundreds at the coast marching almost barefooted or with such light shoes as to be as good as barefooted, with light overalls and sweaters, cold and shivering," Mr. Stevens said. He had seen the same thing later in Toronto.

Junior Farmers to Try Seed Judging on Tues.

The Hastings County Seed Judging Competition is being held in Stirling on March 12th. This has become a very popular event with the Junior Farmers in the County. 50 boys took part in this competition in 1938 and last year there were 55 boys. The boys are asked to judge 10 classes of cereal grains and clover seeds and also identify 15 weeds and 15 weed seeds. This is a very fine training for the Junior Farmers and the boys who take part in this competition receive a great deal of useful instruction which can be applied to good advantage in selecting grain and seeds for use on the farm. Boys who take part in this competition from year to year have a greater appreciation of the value of good seed.

Mr. J. W. Haggerty, County Treasurer, has donated a trophy for the high contestant in the competition. There are also two Stirling Silver medals, one donated by Mr. S. L. Lucas, Manager of Bank of Montreal, Stirling and one by Mr. H. L. Fair, Agricultural Representative, Stirling. There are also a number of good cash prizes.

The contestants will be the guests of the Stirling Community Welfare Club at a banquet at 7 o'clock. The prizes will be awarded to the winners during the program. For further information regarding this competition write to the Ontario Department of Agriculture, Stirling.

PLAN PROJECTED BY GREAT BRITAIN

Projected by War Cabinet

"The Commonwealth plan was not projected until about a month after the outbreak of war. It was put forward by the British war cabinet after the swift domination of Poland by Germany had demonstrated the decisive importance of superior air force.

"The fact, however, is that Canada's action in 1938 and 1939, the surveys which were then made, and the questions of jurisdiction which were then determined, settled the principle upon which any plan of joint training would be organized and controlled. The development of the present plan was materially assisted and accelerated by our action at that time."

The Prime Minister said that Conservative leader Manion and his associates had "misrepresented" facts concerning the earlier negotiations and "keep on misstating the facts concerning the training of British pilots in Canada and Canada's vital contribution to the plan itself.

"Misrepresentations of this kind cannot assist the prosecution of Canada's war effort. It may do an infinite amount of harm to the Allied cause."

The Prime Minister said that Dr. Manion had repeated his claim that the training scheme would have given Canada a great aircraft industry and that it "has been lost to Canada and is being developed in the United States and Great Britain."

No Attempt to Bribe

This statement "is not only a further misrepresentation of facts but it is an insult to the British government," Mr. King continued. "The British Government made no attempt to bribe Canada with orders for airplanes."

The 1938 agreement with Britain to train 50 British pilots a year in Canada for three years was all that was intended for peace-time, he continued and ridiculed Dr. Manion's suggestion that if Britain had been permitted to establish its own schools in Canada in 1938 she would have started sending Royal Air Force men to the Dominion immediately at the rate of 25,000 a year.

In May, 1938, Sir Francis Floud, then British High Commissioner to Canada, made preliminary inquiries concerning the possibility of Britain establishing her own air training schools in this country.

The Prime Minister said he told Sir Francis that all military establishments in Canada should be under control of the Canadian Government. "With that stand I believe all true Canadians will agree."

Then Mr. King said he offered to have facilities for advanced training of British pilots provided under control of the National Defence Department here.

British air experts came to Canada and an agreement was completed whereby Britain undertook to send 50 pilots a year for three years for advanced training in Royal Canadian Air Force schools. An appropriation of $6,000,000 was added to air force estimates for this purpose and to expand the air force in Canada. The British Government itself fixed the quota at 50 pilots.

FOUR YEARS AGO HITLER TOOK HIS FIRST STEP

Four years ago this week the world had the first great shock of those many shocks which ultimately brought the outbreak of war. Four years ago on March seventh Adolf Hitler sent his armed forces across the Rhineland into the zone which had been demilitarized. Here was a manifestation of force which startled mankind, the world markets rocked and slumped badly for it seemed to be a crisis loaded with high explosive.

It was the first time the outside world had heard the sound of the march of the Huns since 1918.

It was Hitler's first mature step. There his mind gave a definite indication of his intended course of violation of pacts and treachery in regard to treaties and the rights of others. The law of force, the policy of the "war of nerves" was promulgated at the Rhine. He was stepping on what had formerly been German soil but his step was one of violence. That event was a major event with the man who had come to the time when he felt he could act. It was the product of all his scheming and of all his twisting of the situation in Europe. Other events were natural second, third and fourth steps to this move.

Those who remember those days recall that it took some time for the world to restore confidence after the rude jolt of March 6, 1936.

From that time onward some felt uneasy though most were hopeful that there would be no disastrous aftermath.

But for Hitler it was the beginning of a number of heavy blows at world peace and security. Steadily he waded through violation and breach of treaties and faith in three and a half years of grabbing and stealing and crushing liberty.

Had not Britain and France stood steady in September last Hitler's army machine would have gone on lumbering over new pieces of Europe, allowing himself time for consolidation if he could, though he could only expect that time would be a major factor against him and that be faced with opposition for his dastardly deeds in wrecking the freedom of Europe.

Five times Hitler rang the tocsin for the Germans—at the Rhine in March 1936, in Austria in March 1938, in Czecho-Slovakia in September 1938, in Czecho-Slovakia in March 1939 and in September 1939 with the rape of Poland.

This is the dragon which the Western Powers are fighting to crush forever as a factor in the diplomacy of the world, this Hitler and all like him whom he has moulded to his liking and who imitate him.

War is a harsh thing but it had to come. The great free nations saw liberty being mangled and dragged in the dust, while Hitler's armed men were spreading out over the neighbor lands to make them one with Germany. For three and a half years with unmistakable signs to the world, at regular intervals as with blows of fate the world was jolted by the thud of German aggression. Now aggression is halted—the spoiler of nations has been barred in behind the Maginot Line and the Allied blockade of the sea, by the long arm of the British fleet and the Royal Air Force and the French naval and air arms.

Hitler in truth has brought up monsters from the depths of barbarism—attacks on innocent civilians, bombardment of undefended ships, trickery, treachery and lies in diplomacy and a whole horde of things the world abhors.

Those who knew Hitler early knew now that these days before September 1st and perhaps the following days in Poland were all in his mind from the time before he wrote his book of 'Mein Kampf" (My Battle or Struggle). The present situation is the full-fledged offspring of the minds of Hitler and the Nazis.

BESIEGING GERMANY

In laying siege to Germany in the good old way when cities and towns were besieged by armies, the Allies have adopted a very effective method to help bring Hitler to his knees. It saves men's lives, and it hamstrings the enemy. It is to be noted that the German Nazis often complain of Britain's blockade. The blockade is within the meaning of the laws of nations. But the Germans feed this to their people for two seasons, because it is the measure which must have already pinched the Teutons and because a complaint is a handy means of stirring up the energies of the German people by bitterness against the British.

How effective a siege can be against Germany is shown by Hitler's desire to have co-operation with Russia even when it cost half of Poland. He did not want a two-front war for he probably planned on large supplies from Russia though Russian materials will be very slow in reaching him and perhaps come in small quantities.

German tardiness in opening up war on a great scale has made some conservation of oil possible but when activity intensifies it may be that the oil scarcity in Germany will have a very important effect on the course of the campaign.

MARCH WITH THE POETS

March as the first month of spring has attracted the poets of every tongue. English poetry possesses the inspiration one would expect from a month which is the herald to all the spring sights and sounds and the feeling of freedom which the season brings.

The stormy March is come at last,
With wind and cloud and changing skies;
I hear the rushing of the blast
That through the snowy valley flies.

Slayer of the winter, art thou here again?
O welcome, thou that bring'st the summer nigh!
The bitter wind makes not the victory vain,
Nor will we mock thee for thy faint blue sky.

Like an army defeated
The snow has retreated,
And now doth fare ill
On the top of the bare hill;
The Ploughboy is whooping-anon-anon!
There's joy in the mountains
There's joy in the fountains;
Small clouds are sailing,
Blue sky prevailing;
The rain is over and gone.

Up from the sea, the wild north wind is blowing
Under the sky's gray arch;
Smiling I watch the shaken elm boughs, knowing
It is the wind of March.

In fierce March weather
White waves break tether
And whirled together
At either hand,
Like weeds uplifted,
The tree trunks rifted
In soars are drifted
Like foam or sand.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Diet to Promote Health

Perhaps you wonder why there is so much talk about food requirements these days. If meat, potatoes, some fruit and bread daily are eaten, what more is needed?

There was a time when food fads were popular because indigestion and constipation were considered very serious matters. Today, the thinking individual, realizing that vitamins were unknown until recently and that minerals were not considered as important as proteins, starches, and fats, now reads all the latest scientific facts about food. He reads that too much meat may leave "clinkers' in the kidneys; too much starch may cause arthritis; too much fat may start fresh trouble in a gall stone patient yet a little fat will help empty the gall bladder promptly; lack of certain minerals will not only interfere with growth of bone and other tissues but will actually interfere with body processes—digestion, heart action, and others; lack of vitamins will allow infection to occur. In other words as his food not only gives heat and energy but becomes a part of his body, it is decidedly important that he eat enough of the right kinds of food.

Most of us get enough meat, potatoes, bread, tea and coffee, but these foods are not rich in minerals and vitamins. Most of us do not eat enough of the 'protective' foods as pointed out by Prof. E. V. McCollum of Johns Hoskins University. Protective foods are given this name because they protect us, being rich in necessary vitamins and minerals. If "enough" of the protective foods is eaten daily and "enough" is not a large amount, we can, to a great extent, be free from colds and bronchitis, mental and physical sluggishness, and constipation.

Protective foods are milk, butter, cheese, egg yolk, green vegetables, liver, kidney, heart, fat fish (salmon, herring, mackerel), fish oils (cod liver and haliver oils), and fresh fruit. Eating protective foods only would not give us a complete diet because cereals, bread, root vegetables, meats and fish are all necessary to health, but if "some" of the protective foods are eaten daily, together with the other foods, you can be sure that you are getting a complete diet.

Children should get a large quantity of the protective foods, larger than adults, because protective foods are so rich in "growth" elements.

Who Rules the Seas?

The pride of Britain's mercantile marine, the new liner Queen Elizabeth, sister ship of the Queen Mary, this morning completed a trial trip without parallel in the annals of world shipping.

On June 20th last year it was officially announced that the Queen Elizabeth would leave the builder's yards on the Clyde on February 26th 1940. She did so, and she anchored off the Clyde mouth until Saturday last when she started on her first voyage without any ceremony save God-speed signals from the planes of the Royal Air Force circling overhead. Many thousands of people knew agout it, and yet the secret was kept absolutely watertight. Not a vestige of a whisper escaped until she was sighted last night, and an official broadcast in London announced she would dock in New York "shortly." She is now safe alongside the Queen Mary, where she will remain until the war ends. This is Britain's latest answer to Goebbels' boast that Germany controls the ocean. Not only is it a great triumph for British seamanship, but it is also exclusive proof that Britons need no murdering secret police to make them keep their mouths shut when the occasion requires.

Had the Queen Elizabeth remained in the Clyde she would have offered a tempting mark for Nazi air attack. Now she is safe, and she has made room for construction to begin upon a new battleship at home.

The Nazis had a myriad opportunities to attack the Queen Elizabeth while she was being built, while she was being towed down the Clyde and when she started on her voyage to the United States. Their complete failure to do so is the measure of their much-vaunted air supremacy.—Montreal Star.

British Sea Power

Britain's battleships on active service today probably number nine at most, rather than the fourteen which survived after the Royal Oak went down. We know, from Mr. Churchill's admission, that the Barham and the Nelson were damaged, one by a torpedo, the other by a magnetic mine, and that they have not yet emerged from their repairs. The Queen Elizabeth and the Valiant were undergoing large-scale construction when the war broke out, and it is not certain whether they have yet rejoined the fleet. The Repulse was pictured the other day docking for repairs, perhaps as the result of exceptionally severe storm damage early in the Winter. This leaves nine ships, not including any additional vessels that may be in procees of overhaul, or others that may have been damaged by German action without public knowledge.

Even with only nine battleships at sea, however, the British strength in capital ships remains outstanding. In any comparison of Allied with German power at sea, one must add the seven French battleships to the British; and these include the crack new ships Dunkerque and Strasbourg, which are a match for Germany's 26,000-ton Scharnhorst and Gneisenau. Moreover, Mr. Churchill has reminded the House of Commons that no less than five 35,000-ton battleships are nearing completion and will be placed in commission "shortly". Only two of these, the King George V and the Prince of Wales, are likely to make their appearance this Spring; even so, the British record of speedy battleship building is one of which the Admiralty can be proud.

The keels were laid on Jan. 1, 1937, on the very day when the old naval treaties expired; Britain must have been assembling materials and preparing shipbuilding space for months before these giants were laid down. Now, in a little over three years, they are virtually completed. Our own North Carolina, authorized in the 1937 program, was not laid down until October, 1937, and the ship is not due for completion, under our leisurely system, until November, 1941. Now we are told, with apparent pride, that it will go into commission late in 1942. No doubt the delay here can be ascribed to red tape, slowness in letting contracts and frequent changes of design, as well as to some inefficiency in our shipyards. But the British have set us an example by their foresight and efficiently in naval building long before the present war began. It will be a relief when our Secretary of the Navy can echo Mr. Churchill by announcing that our two battleships of the 1937 program will be ready for service "shortly."—N. Y. Times.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Rumors of an armistice and a negotiated peace drift through Scandinavia as the Soviets continue their drive against the Finns defending the Karelian Isthmus, and, while reports of peace moves vary, it seems to be established that Russia had made some offer to Finnish representatives.

The fact the Russians at this stage recognize the Finnish Government after setting up a puppet communist Finnish authority to take its place is a tribute to Finnish valor and arms. If Russia is willing to talk peace, even though demands may be as great or greater than those presented to Finland before the war, it would seem to be because Russia is tired of the war.

That must raise some hope for the Finns and their interested friends, the Swedes and Norwegians, that a reasonably fair bargain could be struck if hostilities ended and peace talks began.

The effect of an end of the Russo-Finnish war on the main European conflict probably would remove any immediate danger of the conflict spreading to the north and dragging in Norway and Sweden.

No matter what the terms of settlement were the peace would be pleasing to Germany. If Russia got little out of the deal the Nazis would take pride in the fact that while they subdued Poland without difficulty, Russia failed to humble Finland, a much smaller power. It would be a confirmation of Nazi belief in the superiority of Germany's striking power over that of any other nation.

In a material sense, of course, the peace would be important for Germany in that it would stop the drain of war on Russian energies and resources which Germany wants to harness to its own war machine.

For the Allies a humiliating peace for Finland would be distressing. It would mean another triumph for the aggressive spirit against which they are fighting and the nullifying of encouragement that Finland's early success gave small nations to stand up for their rights.

Judge G.E. Deroche Intrigued by Sight Of Deer on Fairway

Golfing, apparently is "deer" sport" down California way. A letter received from Judge G. E. Deroche from the sunny state today reveals the fact that the animals frequent the fairways. The letter speaks for itself.

Dear Friends:—

Did you ever see deer playing golf? No? Well, neither did I, but I have seen them feeding away on the fairway quite undisturbed as we drove our balls through them or around them

We are golfing in Griffith Park Golf Course. It is a beautiful course containing two 18-hole courses, and one nine-hole course—splendid greens and good fairways. The 18-hole course costs seventy-five cents and the nine-hole forty cents, but the great beauty of it is its setting.

The whole course is surrounded by mountains, the view and coloring changing as you move from green to green. I played my first golf here eighteen years ago with the late Frank O'Flynn and R. R. Bennett. The unique thing I wish to say is that one day eighty pretty deer came down from the mountain onto the fairway and paid no attention to the golfers unless they did some yelling. Today five were on the fairway feeding contentedly. A third day a father deer peered down from the mountain and then strolled on to the fairway followed by five baby deer.

Chippy

A poem dedicated to a small black and white dog known to all Rotarians as the "sentinel of the south door" of the Quinte Hotel, where he is to be seen every Monday noon awaiting the arrival of his master, Mr. Chas. Spalding.

Chippy is our little dog.
He came to us one day.
His coat is white with big black spots
He's really just a stray.

I don't know who his parents were,
I don't know where he's been,
And when folks ask what breed he is
I laugh and say 'Holstein.'

He's really quite remarkable;
He's smart as he can be,
For every single Monday noon
He goes to Rotary.

You'll always see him waiting
Outside the Hotel door.
I guess to get a nice big bone
Is what he goes there for.

He's been there every Monday
From June right through December,
Perhaps he thinks they'll make of him
An honorary member.

Everybody calls him Chippy;
He's really quite well known,
He even has a special place to
To get an ice-cream cone.

And he is most affectionate;
He's quite a dandy pet.
If there are any smarter dogs
I haven't seen them yet.

Tells Britain How to Win War

It may be that readers of Canadian papers have grown weary of advice from people in United States telling how Britain should carry on the war. But the end of such advice is not yet. Another letter-writer has come to the front in the New York Sun, and he knows exactly how the war can be won in six months. We quote:

To the Editor of the Sun: Sir,—If England clings to the old tradition that Britain always bungles at first, but wins her war anyway, then she is doomed, because the combined resources of German and Russia and the neutrals will outweigh those of England and France. And with Hitler or his successor in Holland and Belgium and in control of the Channel ports, communications between England and France will be severed, and Germany will bomb England and her fleet to her heart's content. France will be too much occupied by the German and Russian invasion through Belgium and Switzerland, so will be unable to help, and with Hitler or Stalin, or both, in control of Scandinavis, England will be besieged and beaten; her colonies have no navies and troopships would never reach the British Isles.

However, England has a seldom talked about, huge and marvelously equipped air base not so far from Alexandria. She has planes there. It is not an excessive distance from there to the oil fields of Rumania, and, anyway, Turkey is about mid-way. Now suppose England was to drop her pussy-footing and acknowledge that Russia is actually fighting with Germany against the Allies, and issue a stern ultimatum to Russia to halt her invasion of Finland within a short time limit, or else—It might save Finland and the Scandinavian peninsula. But that is more likely, Stalin being familiar with recent British diplomacy would pay no heed to her and continue on his course.

Then, pussy-footing have been discarded for action, England would declare war on Russia, and within a few hours. British bombing planes could and should be over the Russian oil fields—and make a good job of it. With this done, Hitler would soon provide the necessity for Allied seizure or destruction of other oil fields which need not be named—and the war would be over within six months, for no modern army can fight without ample gasoline and oil. And I believe peace would be concluded with representatives of the German people, and other peoples, because some of the dictators and their help would be absent from the meeting.

The world looks to British leadership in Europe. The little countries are crumbling. Those already fallen have seen their non-combatants, even children, slaughtered, or enslaved. Small nations no longer look upon England as a protector, so they either knuckle under to the dictators or courageously die. Their victors are getting more brutal and emboldened. Unless their planes are disrupted there will be no neutral countries in Europe.

So England must strike and not merely defend. In the oil fields of southeastern Europe lies the key to world peace in this decade, bringing with it international sanity in armament reduction and the prevention of world bankruptcy. Then, indeed, chastened nations can get together and agree on a more Nature's bounty which will produce evenly balanced distribution of international amity and more contentment among the common peoples of the world. Such is my belief and hope.

Russian Peace Rumors

The circumstantial reports from various Scandinavian points today to the effect that negotiations are in progress with the object of arranging an armistice preliminary to a peace accord between Russia and Finland, while not officially confirmed on neither side, are very probably based on fact. Ever since the Russian steamroller smashed the western end of the advanced defences of the Mannerheim Line, Finland's extremity has become increasingly evident, and today the calling up of youths of twenty years to the colours accentuates it in a dramatic manner. Already thousands of Finnish lads, of twenty years and even nineteen years, are fighting as volunteers. Russia's overwhelming superiority in numbers is bound to tell in the long run, unless the Finns receive substantial aid in man force from the Allies.

A London cable says that Sweden communicated Russia's peace terms to Finland two weeks ago. It is also reported that Finland has rejected them and that Russia has retorted with an ultimatum to expire at midnight tomorrow. As to the nature of the terms, rumours vary, but they include the surrender of the Karelian Isthmus, the city of Viipuri, the shores of Lake Ladoga and a section of the Petsamo area in the Arctic, as well as the naval base of Hango and the Hango peninsula in the south. It was the refusal of the Finns to cede this base that led to the war.

The Finnish Government has on more than one occasion expressed its willingness to enter into peace negotiations provided its national integrity and honour are preserved. But the terms as rumored are hardly of a nature to encourage the Finns to believe they will have any national integrity left after the war is over.

Reports that Germany is behind the Swedish move for peace are not at all improbable in view of the fact that in the event of Allied intervention on behalf of the Finns, the way would be opened for the establishment of Allied bases in Scandinavia from which Germany would have to face the danger of attacks upon a new front—something which the German army strategists have already admitted they do not wish under any circumstances to happen.

The increasing sentiment in favour of such intervention may have been a contributory factor in hastening peace moves. Both the Swedish and the Norwegian press are obviously convinced that the former is imminent, the principal independent Norwegian Liberal newspaper, "Tidens Tegn", declaring that it is an official secret known to everybody that British troops and British ships are ready at British ports for an immediate start.

World opinion, outside of Germany and Russia, is unanimously on the side of the heroic Finns, and any attempt on the part of the Russians to impose terms that would destroy Finnish independence will meet with worldwide condemnation and quite possibly refusal of peace overtures at birth. — Montreal Star.

Mountain Holiday

By TEMPLE MANNING

WHERE to go next summer is a question that's already occupying the minds of a great many folk, judging from letters already to hand.

Well, we've already made up our mind. Estes-Rocky Mountain National Park, pride of Colorado, is going to give us the opportunity of reviving memories of other glorious holidays. There's nothing in the wide world like it. Nature and man have conspired to provide comfort and beauty in abundance in this playground of the Rockies, set at an elevation of 7,549-feet.

The village at the eastern entrance of the reservation is just about as grand and inviting as any holiday spot could be. Estes Park Village has its own post office, direct wire and long distance service, electric and phone service, public library, churches of various faith, plus a Community Church which offers free educational and recreational training for summer visitors. And right in the heart of the village is a grand swimming pool, filled with heated snow water. There is a movie house, there are dance-camps, fine schools and simply swell shops. To see Estes Park village in the summer is to see a glorious community, typically American, in full swing. And everywhere there is breath-takingly beautiful scenery.

Nature Lavish

Maybe it is unwise to attempt even the barest description of all the lavish magnificence of Nature that is within Rocky Mountain National Park. There comes to mind Loch Vale, which is like a page from a Scottish Highland book—romantic, beautiful. In contrast is Big Thompson Canyon. A wide highway runs along the roaring Big Thompson River into Estes Park; and every yard of the way is filled with grandeur.

There's Grand Lake, a sapphire gem that provides the highest yacht anchorage in the world. The annual regatta is a grand event, one not to be missed even by those who aren't sailing enthusiasts. Those who belong to the brotherhood of old Izaak Walton will rejoice, for the streams and lakes of this reservation are just teeming with native black-spotted, rainbow and eastern brook trout. Near the village is an interesting state fish hatchery, which offers plenty of contemplative study. And for a course in the elements of building and engineering there are the Beaver Dams on Trail Ridge road.

On a Rocky Mountain

Popular in Winter

Trail Ridge reminds us of the eternal snows that make a summer snow-ball battle possible. And there's plenty of skiing now that winter's here. A letter from a friend brings the news that bigger and better ski trails have been opened up, and that there are swell facilities for the expert and the beginner. Frozen lakes are there for skating, and there are warm, well-equipped shelters. Each year there are more and more winter sport enthusiasts who come to Estes-Rocky Mountain National Park, delighting in the expert arrangements made for their favorite sports.

Veteran Engineer Honored by Friends

Returning from his last run as an engineer in the employ of the C. N. R., on Feb. 28th last, Mr. W. A. Morgan, or "Pierpont" as he is known to a host of friends, was met in the Belleville yards by a party of firemen, engineers and members of the office staff who said "goodbye" to a fellow-employee of many years standing, and wished him the best of health as he passed into retirement from active service with the railway. Later, assembling at his home, a number of relatives and friends spent the evening with him.

On Friday, March 1st., the members of the Belleville Locomotive Engineers and former employees of the railroad, who are now on the retired list, feted Mr. Morgan at his home. A social evening was spent with the older members of the party discussing "old times" as they were remembered during the early days of railroading.

Born Near Ivanhoe

Mr. Morgan was born on the ninth concession of Huntingdon Township, near the village of Ivanhoe, on the old Morgan Homestead which was owned by Mr. Morgan's grandfather. He was the oldest child of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. Morgan and lived on the homestead till he grew to manhood. He entered the employ of the N. Y. C. Railroad during the time they were constructing their line from Ottawa to Cornwall and also worked for the same company in Utica, Syracuse and Albany. Mr. Morgan worked in the lumber camps near Tupper Lake in the Adirondacks for eleven years before coming back to Canada where he worked as a carpenter for a few months.

During August, 1907, Mr. Morgan hired with the old G. T. R. Mr. T. Crosier recommended him for fireman and the first engineer whom he fired for was Col. Bonisteel. He was classed as an engineer in 1911 after serving four years as a stoker. Mr. J. Muir is the only engineer living that he fired for on the passenger runs between Belleville and Montreal and Belleville and Hamilton. Coal lamps were standard equipment on the coaches during those days and the firing was done by the strong-arm method as compared with the present-day stokers, electric lights and shorter trips which make working conditions much more pleasant for railway employees.

In 1908 Mr. Morgan was married to Miss Sarah Tanner. One son, William Jr., is now with the Shell service. Former schoolmates of Mr. Morgan who attended the Brown School, Rawdon Township and White Lake Schools join with his fellow-workers and friends in Belleville in wishing him health and happiness with his family. He is a member of B. L. E. 189 and Army and Navy, Belleville 201.

On March 4th, at the Belvedere Hotel, Mr. Morgan was feted with a banquet being staged in his honor by the different departments of the Railroad and friends of the district. To the strains of the "Grand March", played by Fairman's Orchestra, Mr. Morgan was escorted by his son to the head table in the dining room where was placed a large birthday cake on which 65 candles were imposed. Mr. Dick Sargent, acting as chairman for the function, struck up "For he's a Jolly Good Fellow" followed by a varied program of old time songs by Mr. Secker, readings by George Cornish and "Red" Morrison from Trenton, while community singing was also enjoyed.

Mr. Fred Wiggins, Pres, of the Army and Navy Veterans Association spoke briefly as did Mr. E. J. Cherry, while A. Newman and C. Clarke as representatives of the firemen gave short addresses. After toasts to the King and the guest were proposed, the chairman asked Mr. Hallam to present to Mr. Morgan, on behalf of the boys, a fishing rod and reel. Mr. P. Lynch tendered a gift for Mrs. Morgan which was accepted by the guest of honor as Mrs. Morgan was absent.

With a few well spoken words, Mr. Morgan thanked his friends for their kindness in remembering him at this time when he was retiring from active service with the railroad. Mr. Dan Fairman, veteran engineer, in a short address compared the present day railroaders' lot with that of long ago.

The meeting broke up as the strains of "Auld Lang Syne" were played by the orchestra and the guests returned home after an enjoyable evening.

Ready AND ABLE FOR THE BIG TASK AHEAD

With silent yet perceptible determination and without need of regimentation or special organization, the Canadian Farmer has accepted the responsibility which is his, to maintain a ready abundance of the vital foodstuffs so essential for the Empire and the success of its great cause.

Difficulties and disappointments may have impeded his progress through the trying years from which he is just emerging, but provided, as he now is, with purpose nobler than self-interest, he sets himself to the task with loftier ambition and renewed energy. Eager he is for that conscious recognition within himself of having a definite and necessary part in the Empire's struggle to retain and maintain our dearly won and highly treasured freedom. Zealous is he that his contribution may be worthy and adequate.

By his side ever ready to help make more effective the farmer's effort is the Canadian Implement Maker whose co-operation in furnishing the most efficient machines enables him to multiply his output and extend his activities so that today he produces more with less manpower and in the most economical manner yet attained.

Never were demands of Empire more urgent—never was the Canadian farmer better fitted or better equipped to meet whatever demands may be made. Massey-Harris prizes proudly the distinction it has earned as—"The Service Arm of The Canadian Farm."

His Excellency, the late Right Honourable Lord Tweedsmuir, Baron of Elsfield, P.C., G.C.M.G., C.H., Governor-General of Canada, was until his widely-mourned passing on Sunday, February 11th, Honorary President and Patron of the Salvation Army National Advisory Board.

On January 26th, only sixteen days before his unexpected and untimely death, he wrote the letter reproduced below, warmly commending the work of the Salvation Army for the soldiers. The writing of this letter was thus one of the last acts of a noble life consecrated to duty, achievement and patriotic service.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE,
OTTAWA

As Honorary President of the National Advisory Board, I should like to draw the attention of the public to the War Service Work of the Salvation Army.

Whether our sailors and soldiers and airmen are engaged in actual fighting or in training, time will often hang heavily on their hands. It is for organizations such as the Salvation Army to provide opportunities for recreation and refreshments of the mind in these long periods of enforced inactivity.

The Salvation Army with its high ideals, its long practical experience and its magnificent record of service is highly competent to take part in this important work and I warmly commend its efforts to all those who have the welfare of our fighting services at heart.

PICKLE BLEND CUCUMBERS

This special blend is composed of the outstanding pickling varieties in correct proportion to produce maximum yields of uniform, symmetrically shaped, dark colored pickles. Each variety in this mixture is a pure strain grown separately, after which the seed is mixed to secure proper cross-pollination, resulting in first generation hybrid pickles. Their vigor, productiveness and uniform quality follows by the same principle used in hybrid seed corn and other hybrids. The value of this blend has been thoroughly proved. It is, in fact, very similar to the blend used for years by several large commercial pickling concerns. Order direct from this advertisement. (Pkt. 10c) (oz. 20c) (¼ lb. 40c) (lb. $1.25) postpaid.

MISS JAMISON WINS NEW FRIENDS BY FINE SINGING

VARIED PROGRAM

Under the auspices of the Belleville branch of the Canadian Artists Association, Miss Anne Jamison, soprano, was heard in recital here last evening and to her brilliant artistry and charm of manner the local members are indebted for one of the most enjoyable concerts it has been their pleasure to attend. The Collegiate Auditorium was filled, the appreciative audience including many new members of the association who were privileged to include this concert with the 1941 series.

Miss Jamison's superior musical intelligence, her rare gift of voice and her winning stage presence have enabled her to exercise her art with mastery in radio and concert work. The beauty of her performance last evening explained her remarkable progress in the road to success since her early studies at the Toronto Conservatory of Music which won her fame on a Canadian radio station, leading to the wider field of American radio and concert undertakings. Possessing a fresh and lovely voice, Miss Jamison enhances its appeal with her exceptional powers of dramatic interpretation which made her operatic numbers and lighter character sketches a joy. Perfect enunciation and a crystal clarity of tone were apparent from the first notes of her opening number.

Mr. C. A. Cameron, K.C., newly-re-elected president of the Belleville Association, introduced Miss Jamison to her audience, Mr. Cameron discussed the plans of the association for the coming year. The 1941 membership campaign is now under way and results so far are most encouraging. If the membership reaches a total of 600, Belleville will have the pleasure of a visit from the Don Cossack Male Choir. Miss Ania Dorfmann, pianist, will also appear in Belleville next season. Mr. Cameron expressed sincere appreciation to the officers and committee members for their faithful work during the past year and the audience echoed the sentiment with prolonged applause.

Familiar Melodies.

Miss Jamison's program was well chosen not only for a demonstration of the singer's art but for the genuine enjoyment of her audience, including works of master composers and the more familiar tunes in which all delight. Her first group demanded the best in technique and skill and Miss Jamison's easy command of her numbers brought forth appreciative applause. From the Bach aria "Schafe konnen sicher weiden" of the "Birthday Cantata", and the eighteenth century "Fingo per mio diletto", the group ranged to the delightful charm of the page's song "Non so piu, cosa son" from Mozart's Marriage of Figaro. Returning for an encore Miss Jamison sang an amusing little song "Daddy's Sweetheart" dedicated to the daddies in the audience.

In her second group Miss Jamison turned to Lied opening with two of Schubert's, the melodic "Die Vogel" and "Der Doppelganger" whose sad story she portrayed with wonderful dramatic fire. The exquisite sweetness of her voice was apparent in "Fetes Galantes" (Hahn) while in "Le Nelumbo" (Moret) it soared to thrilling heights. To complete this group the singer chose an aria from "Manon" the "Gavotte" a delicate and melodic selection which she interpreted with charm. For her encores Miss Jamison included favorites of all. There was the "Nagging Woman" which she gave with a delicious humor, and there were selections for the Scottish and Irish, "Comin' Thru the Rye" and "The Kerry Dance", Miss Jamison's rendition adding new beauties to these melodic gems.

In the second half of her program, English songs predominated and included "The Sprig of Thyme" (Grainger), "Hey Diddle-Diddle" (Hughes), "To One Who Passed Whistling in the Night" (Gibbs) and the old English "The Lass With the Delicate Air" all sung with feeling and superb finish. In response to encores she offered the familiar and lovely "Musette Waltz" and "Sweethearts".

Generous With Encores.

In her final numbers Rossini's "La Promessa" and the aria "Ernani, Ernani" from the Verdi opera, Miss Jamison gave dramatic expression to the theme of the compositions, and the full beauty of her voice was revealed.

Miss Jamison was most generous with encores, her last group containing "House Guest", "Ah Sweet Mystery of Life" and "The Singer".

In Avey Clarke Byran, Miss Jamison had a perfect accompanist. Former accompanist for the late Arthur Blight, the pianist brought outstanding ability, experience and a completely sympathetic accord to the assistance of the singer.

TONY

—BY ELIZABETH VERNON—

CHAPTER XXVI

The rain drops sparkling on the leaves, the surface of the drive drying under the sun, the summer sky blue once more.

Alan acknowledged the lodge keeper's greeting. The gate clanged behind him. He turned his horse on to the turf and drove his heels into its flanks. It bounded forward. The clods of earth flew up. Alan smiled as he galloped up the drive of Oaken.

Three minutes later, he had taken his horse round to the stables. Now walking quickly, he approached the front door, running his eye over the house and its windows.

"Galloping past the front like that: rather bad form," Mrs. Querne spoke to Hyacinth. From the small sitting room she looked out on the drive. Her voice was a little tremulous.

Hyacinth made no reply. She smiled, her hands steady on her petit-point needlework. Strange how mother could think of "bad form" when the storm was upon them. Through the peace of the summer's afternoon rang the sound of the front door bell.

Hurriedly, Mrs. Querne rose. "I think, after all, I'll leave you, Hyacinth. No use in both of us—"

"No use at all," said Hyacinth. "I'll tell him we know nothing. It's almost true. We don't know where she is—"

But the door had closed behind Mrs. Querne. The heavy man's tread approached from the hall. Hyacinth laid down her work. Mechanically she gave herself one last glance in the mirror.

"Mr. Fleming!" Peter announced.

Alan entered. "How do you do, Hyacinth?" His words were clipped. With hardly a pause, he asked: "Where is Tony?"

"Alan, it's so difficult to tell you—"

"To tell me what?"

"She's—Tony's run away."

"What do you mean?" Alan's voice was quiet. But Hyacinth felt a tremor.

"Oh, we don't know where she is, nor Jacky. Tony left a note for you."

"Then give it to me."

She held out to him the blue scented envelope; one of mother's. On it was written the word "Alan" in Tony's clear handwriting, a little changed this time, as if Tony's hand had twitched before she reached the last letter of that name.

Alan tore the sheet of paper from its envelope. He read the two lines that it contained. He looked up. His eyes met Hyacinth's. And then she saw that he was pale with anger.

"Hyacinth, you know what this letter contains?"

"Yes." She averted her gaze from Alan's glance. In his eyes burned a flame of fury. Her hopes shivered a little. But she would not abandon them. "Oh, my dear," she said. "I am so sorry. This is a shock. But, Alan, it was so likely to happen. You don't understand Tony."

"Where is she?"

"We don't know. She left last night. She was afraid, I suppose, to see you again after writing that letter."

"What steps have you taken to find her and Jacky?"

"We're making inquiries. Mother doesn't want to bring in the police."

"No. That I can understand." Alan said grimly. "And now, who forced Tony to write this?" The paper crackled in his clenched hand.

"No one. We tried to get her to make it a little more decent— to give you and us some explanation. Oh, my dear, can't you believe me?" Hyacinth sat down, her shoulders drooping a little as she gaze up at him, her throat white as marble against the green silk of her dress.

"Hyacinth," Alan said, "you are wasting your breath—and my time. I see now that no one could hope to get the truth from you, except by those methods which you and your brother used towards Tony when she was helpless."

"So you believe her stories? Alan, you don't know what she was like as a child. She has lied to you. She was a little devil. Anyone will tell you."

"I know what she was like then. And what you are like now, Hyacinth."

"Do you?" Hyacinth sprang to her feet. "Do you know, Alan? Oh, look at me! I have been so wretched in these past months. I have loved you so. When I gave you up—that ghastly mistake — I've been no good since—"

He looked away. She could not see his face. It might conceal anger, or the renewal of his feeling for her. She would trust in the power of her beauty; she would go on. What did it matter what he thought of her? It was what he felt that mattered. Her voice was low, very sweet, conjuring back the passion that once she had aroused in him.

"Alan, I haven't lied. I swear I haven't lied. But in these last days I would have lied to get you. I would have done anything —anything. Look at me," she murmured again. "You used to love me. You do now, not Tony—not her. Alan—".

He did as she said; he looked at her. In the silence before he crossed the room to the door, she knew to the bottom of her heart what he felt. The edifice of her hope, so hastily, so obstinately built crashed into ruin. Despair took its place; this time, she knew for ever.

A hot sun beat down. The short cuts and narrow lanes were dappled with the shade of the tall elms. Alan rode rapidly, and beside him rode the image of Tony as she had ridden on the day of his accident—slight, long-legged, determined, quiet and lovely. In some way, inexplicable, she had lost faith. He felt a sudden pang. How wretched she must be! And he too was wretched, gnawed by anxiety. All his mind, all his being pressed forward to that moment when he would see her again. He brought the whip down on the flanks of his willing horse. As the beast bounded forward he thought: "Why did she not come to me" When he was with her each impulse almost, each thought of that loving nature was bared to him. But now he could think of no clue to her action. None. Well, the mystery would be explained in time, if he had to call in every detective in London.

But his heart, in spite of these sure thoughts, held not enough certainty. It held only anxiety, and his increasing anger which, he told himself, Tony should feel soon, and a sharp, sharp ache.

The car, driven slowly, lurched over the popholes and ruts. The sky was grey. A steady rain fell. "Why doesn't he have this lane repaired?" Mrs. Querne asked.

"Perhaps," Hyacinth replied, "he can't afford it."

"Oh, I don't suppose it's that." Mrs. Querne stroked the folds of her gown. Her voice expressed her chronic distaste for any but a rosy view. "He is sufficiently, well-to-do, I think."

"Yes," Hyacinth said, bitterly. "Let's believe anything. That costs us nothing." She stared ahead through the falling rain, and reflected that it was she who step by step had steered her life towards this moment—the moment in which she was driving towards Fallows—the last place in the world which she would ever want to see, the very thought of which opened in her heart a black pit of fear.

"I don't know why we've come," Mrs. Querne said querulously. "Such a horrible afternoon."

"We have come because we didn't dare refuse."

"What odd things you say, Hyacinth. You hardly seem to be yourself today."

"Perhaps you will never see me 'being myself' again." A wave of self-pitch brought the tears to Hyacinth's eyes. It brought no thoughts of another younger girl who had never in many years dared to be natural and happy.

"I don't know what you mean, dear," Mrs. Querne replied. "But it's always wiser to take things calmly, I find. So many things turn out for the best."

"Yes," Hyacinth said. "'God's in His Heaven, all's right with the world'."

Mrs. Querne made no reply. The car swung round a corner. Fallows stood before them.

Cheaveley, advancing down the flagged path, hailed them. Hyacinth felt her heart sink. She had hoped for another two minutes' reprieve.

MARSH HILL Y. P. U.

About ninety enjoyed a social evening when Foxboro joined Marsh Hill Young People on Friday March 1. The President, Jack Dafoe, opened the meeting with hymn 191, followed with prayer by Rev. E. M. Cooke. The scripture lesson was read by Leonard Marsette. Hymn 154 was followed by a song from six Foxboro girls.

The main feature of the program was a debate between Foxboro and Marsh Hill "Resolved that environment builds character better than heredity," Ralph Campbell and Eileen Mitts taking the affirmative with Jim Ketcheson and Nama Sine the negative. The negative won. The judges were Mrs. H. Dafoe, Miss Helen Davis and Mr. Don Williams. The Foxboro girls then rendered another selection. The meeting closed after which Marsh Hill Young People served lunch.

FRONT ROAD LADIES AID

The regular monthly meeting of the Front Road Ladies Aid was held Thursday afternoon at the hospitable home of Mrs. Arthur Clazie and Mrs. Roy Clazie. Owing to sickness in several homes the attendance was not as large as usual. The president, Mrs. Clazie, took charge and the meeting opened by singing the Ode and repeating the Lord's Prayer. Responsive reading "Easter Day", was followed by hymn 372. Mrs. Clazie read the Scripture reading. After the transaction of business Mrs. H. Greatrix very capably conducted the devotional period opening with a hymn 334. Miss Helen Brown read the Scripture lesson. A reading versed on the lesson given by Mrs. Greatrix was very instructive and passed on some helpful thoughts. A poem entitled "Beautiful Life" was read by Mrs. Lee Purdy. A prayer by Mrs. Brown and repeating the Benediction brought to a close an inspiring afternoon with the Ladies Aid.

The hostesses and their conveners served a dainty lunch and a social half hour was enjoyed.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Home Background an Important Social Asset

Unless there's some real reason why a girl can't invite a boy to her home, I think she makes a big mistake not to give him this invitation. No matter how modern men may seem, there isn't a man who doesn't appreciate having a girl establish in his mind her home background.

Yet so many girls pay no attention to taking this important step in the right direction toward making a real friendship, perhaps toward a romance. They meet their dates at the movies, or wherever the evening is to be spent. Or, having asked the young man to honk the horn to announce his arrival, the girl rushes out to the car so he won't have the opportunity to come in. If the young man is permitted to call at the door, often she greets him at the door with her hat and coat on and they whisk away to the party. He isn't given a chance to meet her mother and father; he isn't given a chance to see her home or her home background.

The well-bred girl shows her boyfriends how attractive and pleasant a person she is when she is in the midst of her family and her home. Then, besides just being someone to take out for the evening, she gives herself a build-up as a personality with a gracious background.

Widow to Marry

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,—

I would like some information about the informal name of a widow who is about to be married the second time.

1—I have a grown unmarried daughter whose name (I'll say) is Doris Cruthers. My maiden name was Gertrude Worth. Being a divorcee, I took the name of Mrs. Worth Cruthers, and, of course, the informal name of Gertrude Worth Cruthers. Now, upon a second marriage, does my informal name retain the Worth. Such as—Gertrude Worth Drummond. Or am I—Gertrude Cruthers Drummond?

Reader

When you remarry, your informal name will be Gertrude Worth Drummond. In other words, you drop the surname of your first husband, and prefix your maiden name to the surname of your second husband. The fact that your daughter's surname is her father's surname makes no difference in the form of your future name.

Courtesy Tip

After you have put the sugar and cream into your tea or coffee, stir it briefly. Don't be too enthusiastic about the stirring!

Fashion Flashes

Always a lift for drooping spirits is a new hat. A postilion type in soft blue pasted feathers has a high crown encircled by a loose feather wreath. Filmy, all-over veil is of smoky brown.

It's always open season for such fabrics as net. A charming dance frock has a very wide skirt of white net with a slim bodice of starched white coarse lace.

Have a heart in the form of the new heartshaped handbag. Done in patent in blue or red, in white kid, and in black patent or kid it has lines of stitching radiating from the top and corded leather handles.

Palmy days by the sea bring out smart play clothes. White sharkskin is used for shirtwaist frocks, often made with a button closing from neckline to hem. These glistening white dresses are worn with red flannel coats.

The younger generation is smartly turned out in fleece. A pretty little suit is in pale blue with pale blue silk stitching outlining the notched revers and the huge patch pockets of the long, loose jacket. Worn with a pink sweater.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Uncertain Whether She's Engaged or Not—Leap Year Must Decide

A letter in the morning's mail from a girl —She doesn't actually know whether she is engaged or not!

The young man in question is one of those shy violets who occasionally talks of marriage in the abstract, especially after he has had a good Sunday night supper at her house, and is led to talking of the joys of home, versus lunch counters, but he never comes to the point.

The world is full of such procrastinators. For some unknown reason New England used to breed them a generation or two ago, and the late Mary Wilkins' stories were frequently written around dilatory lovers who went "steady" for twenty or thirty years, yet never married.

Your modern girl, like my correspondent, declines to put up with such tactics. "No man, however attractive he may be, wears out our living-room chairs and eats our Sunday night suppers and keeps away other men who know what they want."

She wonders if she should fall back on Leap Year to settle things, and if so, what would be the best way to go about it. She very genuinely likes this young man, is even in love with him after her own fashion which isn't headlong. But she thinks two years of backing and filling is enough.

A dash of humor has frequently solved such a situation. Lead off with some nonsense about Leap Year and wind up with an experimental proposal, which, if the shy violet is really in earnest, he will welcome. A staid matron confided to me the other day that tears (known as woman's "weapons") brought to heel the highly satisfactory husband to whom she has been married for a quarter of a century. He too was a shadow-boxer in love, and she didn't know whether she was actually engaged or not. But the fountains of tears settled matters. She was engaged actually before the tearful evening was over.

Another girl I know, who's a successful movie star, landed her first (she's had two since then) by sending him a white waistcoat and tie and a jolly note saying she preferred an evening wedding. It was Leap Year and she proposed by letter in direct masculine fashion.

But all these signs may fail if the shadow-boxer is not in earnest or if he's one of those hard-bitten males who prefers to do his own proposing.

He may be brought to the point by the girl's announcing she's on the brink of packing her trunk and visiting some relative (real or imaginary) in the far West, the great open spaces where men are men. Has he been lacking in this quality, the dilatory lover asks himself?—and decides to show her how manly he is too.

But all said and done, it's a maddening situation for a girl not to know whether she is actually engaged or not. Month after month the slow coach calls and one by one other eligibles drop off. Still nothing positive is said, and the girl begins to have a feeling that inasmuch as so much time has been wasted six months or a year more won't matter. But youth has a dreadful way of evaporating. In these days of frankness, being "the captain of your soul, the master of your fate," rather than drifting like seaweed with the tide, is the way for a girl to be.

If all the merry hocus pocus concerning Leap Year fails, it's just as well for daughter to look over the list of eligibles and declare a New Deal. There may be all sorts of reasons why a man can't propose, and never will propose, and in such cases wedding bells must come from another quarter.

A PERSONAL STATEMENT

Much to my surprise, I have been upbraided in letters from strangers, for resigning from the board of guardians which is looking after the affairs of the Quintuplets. There seems to be an idea abroad, in some minds at least, that I have somehow ceased to have the same degree of interest in the children and that their care isn't my chief interest in life any more.

Nothing could be farther from the truth. Actually, the reverse is the case. By resigning as one of the guardians, I gained more time to devote to the physical and mental welfare of the five children. In some respects they do not need as much of a doctor's attention now as they used to, in others they require more. They are growing up fast, they are becoming more sharply differentiated individuals every day and they need more attention as individuals to present needs and future wants. As for their future, I hope the time never comes when I do not have some share in the responsibility for their welfare and happiness.

Perhaps the present impression that I am not looking after the Quins to the extent that I did in their first five and a half years arises from a misunderstanding of the dual role in which circumstances cast me until recently. I was first and foremost, the personal physician to the five. Then, when the youngsters were less than a year old, the board of guardians was reorganized and I was asked by the government of the Province of Ontario to serve on the board with Judge J. A. Valin and the girls' father Oliva Dionne.

I wasn't any more desirous of serving on the board then than I am now, for I had enough to do looking after the children's physical being, without accepting a share of the financial worries then connected with them. Besides I knew that financial matters were not my strong suit. However, I finally agreed to serve on the board.

That was in the winter of 1935-36, and in those days the financial problems connected with the care of the Quins were actute. It took a lot of money to run a hospital, and in those days the Nursery really had to be a hospital. We needed money and we were under all sorts of pressure to accept propositions entailing exploitation of the Quins, but we proceeded cautiously. We turned down many opportunities to get money for the Quins because we knew in our hearts that they were not the right thing to do. We had no book of experience to go by and no precedent to guide us, and naturally some of our decisions laid us open to criticism by persons who didn't know all the facts and circumstances.

In the intervening five years we ironed out most of the financial problems and started building up the estate of the Quins slowly. There have been fantastic stories that the Quins are worth millions or will be worth millions. Well, I wish I could say these stories are based on fact. But you can accept this as official: the Quins are a long way from the first million.

Anyway, when the financial end of the Guardianship got into good shape, I wanted to retire from the Board. I talked about it for nearly two years before the Government of Ontario saw fit to relieve me of this duty. Now that it has, I can devote more time to the Quins' immediate needs. I think a much better arrangement now prevails.

The letters of criticism I got over my resignation from the Board from all over the country were very revealing to me, even though the writers seemed to think I was deserting those children and was deserving of deepest resentment. They showed how greatly interested so many persons are in these dear little girls. The Quins have come to be very close to the hearts of thousands of persons, and those letters were the very natural reaction to a misunderstanding.

Believe me, I will never desert the Quins as long as they need me. And, as I said above, I hope the day never comes when they don't. We have been through too much together to be separated now.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

CONCESSION ROADS IN POOR CONDITION IN SOME PLACES

Highways throughout this district reported by farmers on the city market today to be fairly free of ice and snow, although some township concessions are still in bad shape.

Water is moving off the land following the mild weather of the past few days, but fear was expressed in some quarters that fall grains may be affected due to the fact that heavy frost depths in the land are stopping absorption of water.

If the mild weather continues, some farmers in the district are considering maple-sugar operations next week.

SUCKERS NOT RUNNIN' YET SAY FISHERMEN

"Suckers are not runnin'", and according to fishermen on the city market today, it will be some time before the finny fellows shoot up against white water.

There were a few for sale on the market today, but they were termed by vendors to be "dead water" fish, or those caught in still water.

"There won't be a fish moving and until we get a heavy rain, prominent vendor said today. There is no water running from the land due to its dryness, and inability to reach streams because of frost in the ground. "These Spring fish must have fresh water," he said, before March 21st," Wesley Evans there seems little chance of that."

LAKE BOATS MAY BE USED IN COASTAL TRADE THIS SUMMER

Local mariners who go "down to the sea in ships" will do that literally this summer. According to reliable reports emanating from Kingston, a number of the lake boats that have wintered in that port will be used in the Atlantic coastal trade this summer.

At the present time a number of men are "fitting out" the ships to have them in readiness for the opening of navigation so they can proceed to the ocean service.

It is stated that many of the ships are suitable for coastal service but could not make the trip overseas on account of the construction and limited fuel storage capacity.

FRACTURED ANKLE IN FALL FROM HORSE

William O'Sullivan, 59, of Marysville, sustained a fractured ankle when he fell off a horse while riding home from work yesterday. The injured man was brought to the Belleville General Hospital, where Dr. G. H. Stobie reduced the fracture and placed the leg in a cast.

THURLOW RESIDENT FALLS FROM BARN

While employed repairing the roof of a barn, 46-year-old Douglas Atkins, R.R. No. 6, Belleville, sustained a fractured foot yesterday. The injured man was later removed to the Belleville General Hospital, where Dr. R. S. Gibson attended the injured man. The foot was later placed in a cast and Mr. Atkins was permitted to return home today.

Police Blotter

Quietly and without ceremony city police visited four local billiard rooms shortly after the designated closing hours as provided through city by-law, and found four of the local pool halls doing a thriving business. Constables Taylor and Evans merely observed the proceedings and reported the incidents to headquarters. Today Chief Kidd preferred charges of operating billiard establishments after closing hours, as provided by city bylaw, against the four operators allegedly found delinquent.

"All these establishments had been warned previously regarding the practice of remaining open after hours," city police officers stated today. So quietly did the constables make their rounds and gather information, that no indication of their purpose was exposed until the quartette of operators were issued with summonses today.

Youths Surprised

Constables Thomson and Wright surprised four local youths on Mary Street early today as they were about to enter a parked automobile. Later the officers found two small bottles of alleged liquor in a nearby snow bank, they reported to superior officers. The lads' names were obtained and investigations are proceeding regarding the possible ownership of the liquor. No charges had been preferred in the matter at a late hour this morning, however.

With no arrests necessary in the city during the past twenty-four hours, the cell block was occupied by nine transients, who slumbered uninterrupted last night.

Ice-Field Settles In Lower River Area

Slight settling of the ice-field in the Moira River between the lower City Bridge and the Canadian Pacific Railway Bridge has taken place within the past few days.

While no actual breaking-up of the ice has occurred, it is believed that water beneath this particular part of the river, has flowed into the open channel cut south of the railway bridge by City Public Works Department workmen last week. This plus the fact that tributary streams that feed the river in the northern areas, have thus far been unproductive of any water, is thought to be the cause of the slight settlement that is apparent in the central part of the river at this point.

Open channels of water are apparent near spots where warm sewerage flews into the river, while small quantities of surface water are lying on top of the ice in various parts.

This ice is said to be honeycombing in spots, but lowering temperatures of yesterday and last night, may have put a stop to any potential disintegration.

New-Type Surgical Retractors Eliminate Need Hospital Lighting

Boston, March 9 (AP)—New "flashlights of surgery", described as opening a new field for surgeons operating at the front lines or in cities subject to air-raid blackouts were exhibited here today.

They are surgical retractors — instruments used to keep wounds open to light during surgery—but instead of being made of metal, they are of a transparent, plastic material through which light from a 10-cent flashlight bulb in a detachable handle is "piped", without reflection, into the operating field.

Dr. Jerome L. Bayer of New York said the instruments "eliminate the necessity of hospital lighting," and that in front line surgery, they can be used by simply plugging them in to an electric socket on a field ambulance.

The retractors already are in use by Great Britain and France in the war area, Bayer said.

The retractors, angular in shape, "bend" the light toward the operating field. There is no diffusion as would be true of ordinary glass. This is true, said Bayer, because the plastic material has the property of carrying light by "internal refraction."

Anzacs on Spot for Fine Setup in the Middle East

(This is one of a series of war commentaries by Sir Charles Gwynn, British soldier of many wars, commandant of the Camberley Staff College for four years prior to retirement in 1931).

Written for The Canadian Press By Major-Gen. Sir Charles Gwynn

London, March 9—(CP)—Arrival of the Australians and New Zealanders in Palestine and Egypt is welcome not only as a proof of the unity of the Empire but as a substantial addition to our military strength.

If the new Anzacs are of the same quality as their predecessors, and we need not doubt it, there will be no better fighting troops in the Allied Armies.

Why have they disembarked in Egypt? One good reason is that Egypt and Palestine provide admirable training grounds which England in winter—and already crowded with troops—does not. How long will they remain in the Middle East? That will depend on Hitler and Stalin, I imagine. All we know at present is that, pending developments, the Allies think it wise to maintain a subtsantial reserve there. It is composed of many nationalities, under General Weygand's command.

Allies in South Africa

In Egypt and Palestine, British, Indians, contingents from Cyprus and Malta, and now the Anzacs, are united under General Wavell. In Syria there is a strong French contingent. Further north again there is the Turkish army ready to cooperate.

What changes have occurred in the Middle East since the Anzacs were there in the last war? Then the Muslim world was divided and a large part of it fought for Germany, threatening Egypt from two sides and engaging large numbers of our troops in Gallipoli, Palestine and Mesopotamia. Today the Muslim world is wholeheartedly in sympathy with the Allies—in India, Afghanistan, Iraq, Saudi Arabia, the Transjordan and above all Turkey. The Arab kingdoms have renewed their traditional friendship with Great Britain.

If the Allies are on such good terms with their neighbors in the East, why is the presence of a strong force there advisable? Perhaps its main object is to act as a deterrent, as a proof that our alliance with Egypt and the Anglo-French guarantees to Turkey and Rumania are no mere scraps of paper, and as the centre from which help could be brought to Britain's friends should the war spread.

Turk as Fighter

It would be strange if these new Anzacs found themselves sailing through the Dardanelles, which their predecessors fought so hard to force, but this time to fight alongside the Turk, not against him.

They would find the Turk the same gallant fighting man that he has always been, but now better trained and equipped. Kemal Ataturk is no longer there to lead, but the influence of a man of his genius does not cease with his death. The present president, Inonu, is a professional soldier and was Kemal Ataturk's right hand man as prime minister. We may feel confident that the Turkish armies will be well commanded.

Farnsworth Winner In Puck Playoff

Tweed, March 9—(Special)—The first game of the finals in the East Hastings Rural League for the Dr. H. E. Welsh trophy, resulted in an easy win for Farnsworth over Plainfield by a score of 7 to 1. Plainfield previously undefeated during the season was unable to cope with the speed and combination of the winners.

Dan Palmateer picked up three goals and was easily the best man on the ice, being followed closely by Mouck in the winners' goal who turned aside a number of hard shots in every period. Meraw, Baker, Lajoie and R. Palmateer scored the remaining goals. The losers' lone counter was deflected into the net by Parks who was a standout for the losers, with the Denyes brothers also turning in nice efforts. The entire Farnsworth squad played effectively.

The second game will be played on Tuesday at the local arena. Should a third game be necessary it will be played on Thursday night.

Action at Front Remains Quiet

Paris, March 9 (AP) — French and German patrols west of the Vosges Mountains on the western front engaged yesterday in a sharp combat supported by artillery on both sides, the French command reported today.

Details of the fight or losses suffered were not disclosed.

German reconnaissance planes penetrated as far as the Paris region last night. Visibility was low throughout eastern France and air "alerts" were not sounded.

This morning's communique said "Nothing to report."

Germans Admit Loss

Berlin, March 9 (AP) — The German high command announced today that one of its planes had failed to return from a reconnaissance flight.

Its communique said:

"Artillery and scouting on the west front.

(The shooting down of a German bomber was announced in London yesterday.)

Ontario Intelligencer Newsboys Play 2-2 Tie in Hockey

The Tea Leafs and Alley Cats, two teams from the Ontario Intelligencer Newsboys of the city, played a game of hockey at the Hume arena this morning but the decision as to which is the better team will have to be left over for another meeting as the teams staged a 2-2 draw with members of both teams wondering, whether they will be able to make their deliveries this afternoon. If the paper boy is late blame it on the hockey match.

The Tea Leafs were always on top scoring the first goal two seconds or less after the face-off. Juby of the Alley Cats put his team back in the running with a nice bit of footwork, according to the Tea Leafs but the Tea Leafs went to the front again with a goal from the stick of McLellan. Juby proved to be the hero for the Alley Cats when he scored with only a few minutes remaining. The Tea Leafs stormed the Alley Cats' citadel but could not get one past the goalie. The boys had a real morning's fun and are endeavouring to arrange another tussle in the near future.

Songs by George Carver Will Be Introduced Here Next Week

Two War - Time Songs Written by Local Newspaper Man With Music Composed by Reg. Hinchey Will be Introduced at Rotary and Masonic Lodge Meetings

ONE A MARCH SONG

(By K. J. C.)

Introduced for the first time at the winter conclave of the Canadian Bandmasters Association meeting in Waterloo, Ont., two wartime songs, one of the rollicking marching type and the other of a more patriotic nature, were heard for the first time last week. Strangely enough the words and music of these songs were composed by two Belleville citizens.

Reg. Hinchey, well known composer of band and orchestra music, composed the music, while George H. Carver, of the editorial staff of The Ontario Intelligencer, composed the lyrics of both songs. "Hail To Canada" is the title of the patriotic number, while "We'll Put the Blitz on Poor Old Fritz" is the title of the other war-time song composed by Mr. Carver, with six-eight marching time music being composed by Mr. Hinchey. "Both songs met with instant approval at the Canadian Bandmasters Association semi-annual meeting, a number of the bandmasters requesting copies of the words and music as soon as they could be procured," Mr. Hinchey stated today.

The two songs will be introduced for the first time in Belleville next week when Jack Deacon will sing the marching song, "We'll Put the Blitz on Poor Old Fritz" at Monday's meeting of the Rotary Club, while Mr. Harold Howard will sing the patriotic song "Hail to Canada" at the regular monthly meeting of the Eureka Masonic Lodge gathering next Wednesday night.

The words of the two songs are—

HAIL TO CANADA!

Hail to Canada! glorious Canada
The land of loy'lty and freedom,
Whose sons great spirit ever have shown when called to do or die
May this land of ours be a guiding light,
A beacon the world may see
Hail to Canada! glorious Canada
The land of loy'lty and freedom.

Lady of the Snows, in Thee doth repose,
The faith of a nation of freemen
Proud of their liberty, hating all slavery, sons of the Fleur-de-lis and Maple.
May they ever be symbol of unity joined by the blood of sires,
Lady of the Snows, in Thee doth repose,
The faith of a nation of freemen.

Hail then Canada! To Thee Canada, thy sons pledge proud devotion.
In answer to thy call, they come one and all from broad ocean to ocean.
May their destiny e'er be wrapped in thee, gem of an Empire's crown.
Hail then Canada! To three Canada, thy sons pledge proud devotion.

"WE'LL PUT THE BLITZ ON POOR OLD FRITZ".

1st Verse—

Young Johnny Canuck while walking out in London town one day
Was accosted by a stranger in a friendly sort of way
"Who are yer mate?" the stranger said, "if asking aint a sin"

Chorus

"We're rollickin' sons of Canada from B.C. to the main
Our daddies fought before us so here we are again
We'll double Goebbel's troubles, we'll deflate Herr Goering too
And as for Mr. Hitler and his nasty Nazi crew,
We'll scuttle them completely, but we've got a war to win
We know what is before us, and we'll do it with a grin
So it won't be long before we're back and till that day we'll sing,
"We'll put the Blitz on poor old Fritz, till he shouts "God Save the King".

2nd Verse

With English Mary in the parlour Johnny sat one night,
He told her of his deeds of daring, how he'd win the fight,
At 3 a.m. her father roared, "Who's down there dear, the cop?"
Before she answered Johnny yelled, "I'll have you know, old top".

Chorus

We're etc.

Two Miners Crushed By Block of Rock

Malartic, Que., Mar. 9 (CP).—Two miners were crushed to death early today when a solid block of rock weighing about 25 tons crashed down on them while they worked in an underground level of the East Malartic Gold Mines near here.

One of the men, Joseph Ryztola, was dead when rescue workers dug them out about two hours after the accident. The other, Nick Perry, still was alive but died of injuries soon after.

The officials of the mine said no other miners were involved in the accident as the men were working together away from others on the third level, about 350 feet underground. The huge block apparently was dislodged by the digging, pinning both men in its fall.

Montreal, March 9—(CP)—Canadian fish producers can supply Great Britain with all the fish that she can take, said Major Hugh A. Green, a member of the Wartime Fishery Advisory Board in an interview here last night.

London, Mar. 9 (CP).—Butcher shops were piled high with extra supplies today to meet Britons' demands for their last unrationed week-end beef.

Political Campaign Gets Under Way Here at Beginning of Week

Prominent Speakers Will be Featured by Candidates —No Nomination Papers Filed Yet

RUMORS DENIED

While the election battle in this riding at least has consisted of a few fiery outbreaks and one or two prominent speakers outside of the respective candidates, it is reported from authoritative sources that the different forces will open operations on a large scale next week following filing of nomination papers.

While the Chief Electoral Returning Officer stated at a late hour this morning that no candidate had as yet filed papers, contacts with the various headquarters revealed that all three nominees for the candidacy of Hastings South will conform to this rule on Monday. The date for filing papers expires at two p.m. on that date.

Rumors that persisted yesterday and last evening to the effect that Mr. Harry R. Cory, Independent Liberal candidate, had withdrawn from the fight, were dispelled at Cory headquarters when Mr. Cory's representatives stated emphatically that nomination papers would be filed without fail either late today or on Monday.

George H. Stokes, Conservative standard bearer told the Ontario Intelligencer that his nomination papers were in the hands of his legal advisers and would be filed without fail.

Mr. McLean Haig, Liberal nominee, was out of town and could not be reached, but supporters stated that his papers likewise would be placed in proper hands in plenty of time.

The nomination meeting, scheduled for Monday, March 11th., two weeks prior to election date, will in all likelihood be held in the City Hall. According to the Chief Returning Officer, no arrangements had been made up to a late hour this morning regarding a regular meeting at which all candidates will speak, but it was inferred that this will probably happen.

Next week, when nomination wrinkles have been ironed out, the battle will get under way in real earnest. A number of prominent speakers for all sides will be brought into the riding and some exciting pre-election action is looked for.

STIRLING TEAM GIVEN A BREAK IN LOOP PLAYOFFS

EVERYONE SATISFIED

Stirling Will Play the Winner of the Madoc-Norwood Series Now in Progress

Stirling, Mar. 9 (Special).—At a special meeting of the Trent Valley Hockey League held in Campbellford Friday afternoon the Norwood difficulty of Wednesday last was surmounted in a few minutes to the satisfaction of all teams. Last Wednesday night Stirling journeyed to Norwood under orders of president Chas. Davidson to start the semi-finals, when Madoc refused to comply with regulations set forth early in the week. Things happened thick and fast and climaxed with both Madoc and Stirling arriving at the Norwood rink claiming the right to play the game. After an hour's debating Stirling was ordered from the ice and the game proceeded with Stirling apparently in the discard. President Davidson was miles from the scene and nothing else could be done.

Stirling All Steamed Up.

It looked real bad for the Stirling squad who tried in vain to find a reason for their sudden expulsion. But the next morning things began to happen. Stirling presented a formal protest of the action and demanded an immediate investigation with all teams present. President Davidson returned home on Thursday and learning of the difficulty called a meeting for yesterday. All teams in the league were represented at what was expected to be a noisy one. Instead it was brief and climaxed with all teams satisfied and Stirling back in the play-offs.

Stirling's Demands Met.

Stirling was ably represented by Earl Fox, Earl Wallace and Art Duncan, secretary of the Hastings Rural League. With the latter acting as spokesman for the offended team, they briefly presented their case and offered what they believed to be the only reasonable solution to the problem. The first suggestion offered by the Stirling group was immediately adopted with all delegates voting in the affirmative. It was at once put into effect by the following motion and Stirling is now definitely in a play-off position.

The motion:

It was moved by Mr. Rupert and seconded by Mr. Giffin that the winner of the Madoc-Norwood series play Stirling with the winners of this series to play the winners of the Campbellford-Tweed series for the league championship. If Norwood wins this (Friday) night the Stirling games to be played home and home on Monday and Tuesday with goals to count. If the Norwood-Madoc series goes to three games this game will then be played on Tuesday night on neutral ice (sudden death). In case of overtime the play will continue for ten minute periods until a winner is declared. Carried.

So it is the Stirling players and fans, who after driving all the way to Norwood now feel much better. The meeting lasted little more than an hour and all representatives left feeling happy about the whole thing thankful at last that an iron bound ruling had been made.

Wellington Wins Over Picton 5-4 To Force Third Game

Picton, March 9 (Special) — A third game will be necessary to decide the winner of the "A" group of Wellington and District hockey league. Wellington evened the series Thursday night by a 5-4 victory over Picton.

In the "B" group, West Lake and Mountain View are taking part in a two out of three games series, with Mountain View winning the first 3-1.

West Lake's lone counter came directly following the face-off in the first period, McQuaid driving in Platford's pass. They kept up a determined onslaught on the opposite net but goalie Singer was too good. Mountain View tied it up when Rowbotham scored on Mansfield's pass. In the final stanza, Amo scored twice, both times on Rowbotham's passes.

In the "A" game, Wellington took the lead. They took a two goal lead ford's. They took a two goal lead when Stinson scored on Goyer's pass. Two down at the beginning of the third, Picton responded to gang attacks and this resulted in Welbanks scoring on Cork's pass. Wellington rallied and Young and Burley scored on solo efforts. Picton bored in and netted three more, Bowerman getting two on passes from Grinrod and Welbanks one from Cork. With 55 seconds to go and the score tied, Goyer whipped a pass to Brimley to break the tie and win the game.

Glen Miller and Wallbridge Playoff for the Rural Championship

TWO SMART GAMES

Zion Hill and Mountain View bowed out of the hockey picture in the District Rural Hockey championship series at the Hume Arena last night with Wallbridge taking the lads from Zion in overtime 2-1 and Glenn Miller coming from behind in the second period to go on and pull out a 4-2 win over the Prince Edward County entry. Glen Miller and Wallbridge will now play off for the rural hoceky championship of the district with the winners copping the Dr. J. J. Robertson Trophy with the opening game getting under way on Tuesday next.

Zion Hill Lead

In the first game between Zion's Hill and Wallbridge, the lads from Thurlow seemed to have the "Townhallers" on the run with a goal by Simms in the second canto, but the Wallbridge lads tied it all up just as regular time ended on a nice goal as Green tallied on Rowbotham's pass. After two minutes and forty seconds of the overtime Rowbotham was creditted with the winning counter as the puck caromed off a Zion's Hill player and went into the net. Simms proved the best man on the ice for the Zion Hill lads with Alfie Rowbotham standing out for the winners.

Second Better Game

Fans were treated to far the best hockey of the night, when Glen Miller and Moutain View took the ice for what proved to be a real crowd thriller. The first period went scoreless with the play about even but, Mountain View went into the lead after five minutes of the second period when Rowbotham took Bundy's pass to beat Lonas in the "Papermakers" nets. Glen Miller came back hard, however, and before the period ended, were leading 2-1. Mountain View tied it up shortly after the final canto started, but two nice goals by Anderson, both on passes from Lamore, put the Mountain View lads into the discard. The summaries were:

CORNWALL TEAM DEFEATS ROYALS

Montreal, March 9 —(CP)— Cornwall Flyers have shown before this season that they are a dangerous crew when they are down and Montreal Royals can't afford to take them lightly if they hope to reach the finals of the Quebec Senior Hockey League playoffs.

Royals were favorites to end their semi-final series with the Flyers last night but the Ontario team, playing on home ice, turned the tables and handed the Montrealers a 6-4 beating that was more one-sided than the score showed.

The teams will return to Montreal Monday for the deciding game of the best-of-five series. Flyers won the first 2-1 and dropped the next two 7-4 and 8-2.

Meantime, two teams were shunted to the sidelines in Provincial Senior League play as Lachine Rapides defeated St. Hyacinthe Gaulois 4-1 and Boston Olympics edged out Verdun Bulldogs 3-2.

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

By the Associated Press

Pasadena, Calif., March 9—(AP) —Jimmy Dykes is optimistic about the hitting of his Chicago White Sox this year. Taft Wright, Mooe Solters, Mike Kreevich and Luke Appling have been swatting hard in training sessions. But Dykes has one complaint—the club is losing too many balls that are knocked out of the park.

x x x

Lakeland, Fla.—Frigid weather is delaying the appearance of the veteran Schoolboy Rowe in a game for Detroit Tigers. He was to have pitched yesterday, but the temperature was too snappy.

x x x

Avalon, Calif.—Manager Gabby Hartnett of the Chicago Cubs is tickled over the work of pitcher Bill Lee, who allowed the regulars only one hit in three innings yesterday in a camp game.

x x x

Fort Myers, Fla.—Delayed by a knee operation performed a month ago, infielder Oscar Grimes has arrived at Cleveland Indians training camp and will look on for a week or so before beginning strenuous exercise. He walks with a limp and brought with him his surgeon's instructions to the trainer for treatment of the leg.

Bradenton, Fla. — Eddie Miller, Boston Bees' brilliant young shortstop, has been posted as the club's only holdout. He had until midnight last night to report, but President Bob Quinn says he has heard nothing from him since he returned his unsigned contract Feb. 1 while in Boston to attend the baseball writers' dinner.

EXPECT BIMELECH TO GIVE BRADLEY HIS FIFTH WINNER

Kentuckians Believe Bimelech Has the Necessary Speed to Cop Kentucky Derby

$75,000 ADDED

Andy K and Robert E. Lee Expected to Provide the Competition

Louisville, Ky., Mar. 9 (AP).—The railbirds at Churchill Downs paired Bimelech and Bradley today as Col. Matt J. Winn announced 127 nominees for the 66th running of the Kentucky Derby May 4.

A long hard winter hasn't shaken the belief of Kentuckians in the ability of Bimelech to give owner Col. E. R. Bradley his fifth Kentucky Derby victory.

The black Toney-la Troienne colt headed the list of thoroughbreds qualified for the $75,000 added classic for three-year-olds.

The purse for the mile-and-a-quarter race was hiked this year to $75,000 added and the subscription list was up an even dozen over 1939, although short of the 140 entries predicted by Col. Winn, president of Churchill Downs.

Although unbeaten and perhaps the shortest price winter book favorite in history, "Big Bib" isn't the whole show. The cream of the American three-year-old is challenging and, in addition, he may expect a run for the money from Robert E. Lee, which has been racing under the colors of J. P. Byer in England. Another "foreign" horse is listed as Rufigi and owned by Lord Carnarvon, titled Irishman.

Andy B, owned by Tony Pelleteri and "Big Bim's" hottest rival last year, also is eligible for a crack at the Kentucky Derby glory. Andy K collected victories in the Arlington Futurity and Champagne Stakes last year.

Other nominees believed capable of giving Bimelech trouble include C. V. Whitney's Carrier Pigeon and Flight Command; Arnold Hanger's Roman Flag, winner of the Breeder's Futurity; Joseph E. Widener's Roman; Maxwell Howard's Victory Morn, and J. Y. Christmas' Rough Pass.

JENKINS DEFEATS TIPPY LARKIN IN FIRST ROUND

NOW WANTS AMBERS

Al Weil Says Jenkins Must Fight Davey Day Before He Earns Right

(By Bill Boni, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, March 9 — (AP) — Down Texas way, where Lew Jenkins hails from, they used to clean up whole settlements with a pair of six-shooters. But they couldn't have done the job any more convincingly than the lightweight from Sweetwater did at the Garden last night with a pair of boxing gloves.

Matched with Tippy Larkin, another long, lean kid from Jersey, Jenkins started cautiously enough. He danced around, flicked a few straight lefts into Larkin's astonished pan. Larkin hadn't expected that. Jenkins wasn't supposed to be a jabber. Then, abruptly, Jenkins fired with both hands. In two minutes and 41 seconds of the first round Larkin was left flailing around in his own corner like a fish out of water. Face down, he rolled and writh, kicking up a little whirlpool of dust and looking like a man who's coming up for nothing more than air.

Stood Wide Open

"He was so surprised by them he stood there wide open," said the former Texas cavalryman. "The right probably would have dropped him all by itself. But there he was, rockin' on his heels, so I let him have a couple more."

His ninth straight local victory and sixth K.O. should have boosted Jenkins into a lightweight title bout with champion Lou Ambers. Promoter Mike Jacobs thought it should, and set aside May 10 for the bout. Manager Hymie Caplin thought it should, and so informed one and all.

But Al Weill, Ambers' weskit-wearing pilot, had other things on his mind, notably the National Boxing Association's recent edict that Ambers, by March 22, must sign for a title defence against Davey Day of Chicago or the lightweight throne will be declared vacant.

"Let Jenkins fight Day, and then we'll talk," said Weill. Caplin screamed in outraged protest.

"So he's a match-maker now, that Weill! He's telling us who we should fight. Davey Day he's giving us! Tell him we fight better by night than by Day."

Glen Cunningham To Run Last Mile Race in New York

New York, March 9 (CP)—Eight years ago tonight a gangling farm boy from Kansas University stepped out on the boards of Madison Square Garden and ran to his first mile victory in a Knights of Columbus track meet. His time of 4:12 tied a world record.

The triumph launched Glen Cunningham on one of the most spectacular running careers in the history of the sport. But the old master has come to the end of the trail and tonight by his own decision, Cunningham will run his last indoor mile race in New York.

Next fall he plans to settle down to teaching. If the running urge should come over him in 1941, it probably will be as a two-miler that he dons the spikes again.

Galloping Glen will be trying for his seventh victory in his last joust with Chuck Fenske, winner of six straight major mile events and the United States champion.

John Borican, negro sprinter, will run his first mile race of the season in an attempt to pace the field to the fastest mile run so far this year. Gene Venske and Lou Zamperini make up the rest of the field.

Last Chance For Canadians

The meet also marks the last change this season for Canada's leading track stars, Larry O'Connor of the University of Toronto and Bill Fritz of Queen's University.

O'Connor will run against Allan Tolmich of Detroit in the 60-yard high hurdles. O'Connor beat Tolmich once this season in a trial heat of the United States Amateur Athletic Union meet two weeks ago in the Garden but lost by scant inches in the final as Tolmcih set a new indoor track record.

Fritz will compete in the Casey invitation 600 against a crack field that includes Charley Belcher of Georgia Tech, the National champion who beat out the Kingston, Ont., star by a few feet two weeks ago. Fritz has finished second in two of the fastest 600s this season.

"Y" Lassies Lose to Orfuns In L. O. B. A. Round

"Whiz" Cowan's Belleville "Y" lassies passed from the L.O.B.A. picture at the hands of the Peterborough "Orfuns" in successive games, losing the second game of the first round provincial basketball play-offs at Peterborough last evening by a 28 to 15 score, after having been on the short end of a 40 to 12 count here last week, losing the round by a margin of 41 points.

Trailing 20 to 12 at the halfway mark the Belleville quintette failed to rally and only scored three points in the second half. Lack of team competition throughout the playing season took its usual toll, the Belleville girls being forced to accept a bye into the provincial L. O.B.A. playdowns.

A. Craig, B. Blade and Ruth Thompson paced the Peterborough winners in scoring, while Marion Maclean, M. Miller, D. Mansfield and "Peg" Rowbotham accounted for all of Belleville's points.

The box score:

New York, Mar. 9 (AP)—Exclusive! Mike Jacobs will counter Joe Gould's $104,000 suit with a legal action of his own. . . . If and when it comes to court Mike will allege he was forced to okay the agreement giving Gould and Jim Braddock 20 per cent, of his profits from Joe Louis because if he didn't Braddock wouldn't have given Max Schmeling the go-by and laid his title against the Bomber.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

It is seldom a hockey team wins an entire district title with one mere victory, but that is exactly the position Pete Beach's Albert College senior Interscholastic pucksters find themselves today. When the Partridge - Lougheed-Christian sextette beat Norwood High School 3-0 a week ago last night, after losing at home 8-6, the Albert "tri-color" won the senior Bay of Quinte hockey championship in the C.O.S.S.A. However when the Albert squad notified the Central Ontario Secondary Schools Association they were group winners and ready to compete in the provincial interscholastic hockey playdowns, Pete Beach was surprised to learn his Albert College sextette had already been declared senior C.O.S.S.A. hockey champions, simply because no other secondary school in the C.O.S.S.A. was willing to enter the Association final playdowns. Other sections include Georgian Bay, Niagara Peninsula and Hamilton. As winners of the C.O.S.S.A. the Albert College senior interscholastic pucksters will enter the provincial-wide senior interscholastic hockey finals, that includes St. Patrick's College, (Ottawa Valley); North Bay C.I. (Northern Ontario), Assumption College (W.O.S.S.A. winners) and Albert College, winners of the C.O.S.S.A. In all probability the finals will be played in Ottawa.

However, Coach Beach would have much more preferred to see Alf Moulden's Albert College junior basketball team win the Bay of Quinte cage title in the C.O.S.S.A. this year. "You see we've won the hockey and senior C.O.S.S.A. basketball championships, but never a junior interscholastic group title," explained Mr. Beach as he shook his head in disappointment when the local B.C.I. juniors forced the Albert kids out in the group finals this week. George Laughlin's B. C.I. hoopsters, both juniors and seniors, won their group honors this year and the right to compete in the C.O.S.S.A. basketball eliminations in Toronto next week end. "We are going to enter our senior quintette from B. C.I., but not our junior team, as we do not feel they are strong enough," explained Mr. Laughlin as he pointed out to us the fact that the Belleville Collegiate has been out of the realm of C.O.S.S. A. sports for the past four years. "We are taking our junior squad to Toronto for the trip and then can perhaps pick up some good pointers by watching the stronger cage teams from western Ontario in action," explained Mr. Laughlin, which should prove music in the ears of the junior collegiate basketeers.

Did you know that while most of the members of the New York Giant players, now training at Winter Haven, Fla., are stopping at a resort hotel there, second baseman Burgess Whitehead lives at an automobile camp? Whitehead desires peace and quietness as he is studying for a college degree and knows right well there is little tranquility in the camp, where rookies are making merry on their first "big league jaunt."

Do you remember when most publicized of Babe Ruth's holdouts ended 10 years ago today when the Yankee hitter signed a two-year contract with the New York American League club for $160,000? Holder of most of baseball's slugging records, the portly outfielder retired from the game in 1936. During his colorful baseball career, that lasted 22 years, Ruth clubbed a total of 714 home runs. His greatest record for one season was in 1927, when he hit 60 circuit blows, after clouting 59 in 1921. Altogether Ruth received $896,000, plus $41,445.11 of world series cuts, during his baseball career. He also paid the largest fine ever tacked on a ball player when the late Miller Huggins fined him $5,000 for insubordination in 1925.

Judging from the Oshawa scribe's account of the Oshawa-Kingston junior O.H.A. series, the Belleville kids weren't so far off a championship after all. When Wally Elmer's Limestone City sextette pushed the local "Quintes" out of the O.H.A. picture, Coach Wally Elmer was quite happy about the whole thing and considered his charges quite lucky to hobble over Belleville. A little more intitiative on the part of the locals and it would have been Kingston that was rubbed out, but such wasn't the case. However, when Oshawa met Kingston at home, the Motor City scribe says Udall, Kingston's goalie, was nothing short of sensational and that there wasn't too much difference between the clubs. In reference to Goalie Udall, Scribe Campbell said: "He stood out like the proverbial sore thumb and earned the unstinted admiration of even the most biased home-town fans and his work ever reached the border of sensationalism, as he looked invincible at times."

It's Glen Miller, of the Frankford Town League, and Wallbridge of the Central Hastings League, in the District Rural hockey championships at the Hume Arena commencing Tuesday night. Last night it took the "packed Wallbridge sextette" overtime before they emerged winners over Zion Hill and then the losers scored on their own goalie in the excitement of clearing. Next along came Glen Miller to surprise Mountain View with a 4-2 win, the losers drafting Jack Bundy and "Bonnie" Gerow from the local junior squad. With the exception of finish around the nets, these rural teams play a fast brand of hockey and draw a heavy following of as rabid hockey fans as come down the hockey row. Already the eliminated teams' followers have selected their favourites, some contending that Glen Miller carries too much speed for Wallbridge, while others are of the opinion that the sturdy Wallbridge sextette will wear the "Millers" down.

SPORT SPICE—The R.C.A.F. basketball team from the Air Force headquarters in Ottawa are playing an exhibition game versus the Belleville hoopsters at the "Y" tonight ...... Belleville juveniles passed from the O.J.H.A. picture last night even though the local kids made a courageous stand....Minus their ace defenceman, Bill McBride, the local "juves" played Regiopolis College to a 3-3 tie on the fast Kingston ice, but failed to haul down the four-goal deficit lost here on soft ice...... Bennett, Stan Reid and May scored for the Dennis-Reid aggregation ......Exit the Belleville juveniles, but their effort was worthwhile as several good prospects were developed for another year, so let's hope the Belleville Juvenile Hockey Association is given more help another year...... Surprise—the Cornwall Fliers evened their series with the Montreal Royals last night...... The Boston Bruins are one point in front of the Rangers and should remain there over the week end at least......The Belleville "Y" lassies lost 28 to 15 in Peterboro' last night and passed out of the L.O.B.A. picture.

LEX CHISHOLM

Toronto Maple Leafs.

Lex Chisholm

Something new in major league hockey was introduced last fall when the Toronto Maple Leafs were training for the current campaign. Conny Smythe announced that the team would carry 20 players all season, juggling them around 15 per game, as the rules required. Considerable was heard about the new players who would make the N.H.L. jump—Billy Taylor, Wally Stanowski, Don Metz, Red Heron, Hank Goldup—and Lex Chisholm, although the latter probably drew fewer words than the others. And now with the season almost over he's proven to be about the best of the lot, other than the flying Stanowski. As a background for his efficiency in the big time Lex had a year with Oshawa juniors and three with the Oshawa seniors in the O.H.A., and last season with the latter team led the circuit in scoring. When his team concluded its work for the season he signed a pro contract and got into a few games with Syracuse in the Int.-Am League. This season he was given the choice of playing with the Leafs or being loaned to New York Americans, and confident of his ability to make good he chose to join the Toronto team. Most of his amateur career was spent as a centre but since entering the N.H.L. he's played mostly at right wing. Galt was his birthplace 24 years ago. His Lex cognomen is derived from Alexander.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Four Wives"

"Four Wives" sequel to last year's "Four Daughters," will have its local debut next at the Capitol. "Four Wives" in which Priscilla, Rosemary and Lola Lane, and Gale Page play the title roles, features the same cast as "Four Daughters," including John Garfield, who died in the original story. He returns in vision form in the new picture.

Others in the original family portrait who are prominent in "Four Wives" are Jeffrey Lynn, Claude Rains, May Robson, Frank McHugh, Dick Foran and Vera Lewis, the gossipy "gate-swinger" of "Four Daughters."

There's a new and very delightful addition to the family, too. Eddie Albert, the young comedy star of "Brother Rat," plays the young doctor for whom Rosemary Lane successfully sets her wedding bonnet in the film. Rosemary, you will remember, is the only one of the four daughters who didn't "get her man" in the earlier picture. Also added to the cast is Henry O'Neill, in the role of Albert's father.

Still other additions to the family tree are four girl babies. First of these to make her appearance in the film is the year-old child which is adopted by Lola Lane and Frank McHugh in the story. Then Priscilla gives birth to a girl baby, and Lola caps that by having twin girls.

"Four Wives" takes up the story of the Lemp family where "Four Daughters" left off. The two oldest daughters are already married, Priscilla, the youngest, widowed in the earlier film, is about to marry her first love, played by Jeffrey Lynn, when she learns that she's to have a baby by her dead husband. The fourth girl, Rosemary, puts on a matrimonial campaign, as mentioned above, with the help of all her sisters.

Suggested by the Fannie Hurst novel, "Sister Act", the script was written by Maurice Hanline, Philip G. and Julius J. Epstein, Michael Curtiz directed.

Select short subjects complete the bill.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Invisible Man Returns"
THE CAST

Characters Players
Richard Cobb-Sir Cedric Hardwicke
Geoffrey Radcliffe - Vincent Price
Helen Manson - Nan Grey
Dr. Frank Griffin - John Sutton
Inspector Sampson-Cecil Kellaway
Spears - Alan Napier
Ben Jenkins - Forester Harvey
Cotton - Ivan Simpson
Govenor - Edmund Fielding
Nurse - Frances Robinson
Tewksby - Harry Stubbs

Mr. Brink paused recently in his fight with the Invisible Man and took time out to propound a theory.

Mr. Brink, is, of course, the distinguished actor Sir Cedric Hardwicke, whose recent film delineation of "Mr. Brink" in "On Borrowed Time", was just one of his many unusual thespic roles. Hardwicke is currently playing the "heavy" to Vincent Price's title character in the amazing mystery film, "The Invisible Man Returns" coming next to the McCarthy Theatre. The occasion of this role provides the impetus of Hardwicke's theory.

Sir Cedric's 27 years of acting and publication of his informative and widely-read book, "Let's Pretend", stamp him as a theatrical authority.

Motion pictures must further tap their almost limitless "bag of tricks", the actor says. It is repeatedly cried that movies must be more diverting, and musicals and comedies are usually advanced as best examples of the "diverting" film.

Why limit ourselves to lighter entertainment? The way has been opened for genuinely "unusual" pictures. The best available special effects talent in the world is on hand to spring more surprises on film audiences and to utilize the unlimited camera scope that gives the screen its advantage over the stage.

"The Invisible Man Returns" traces the story of a convicted man who escapes from a death cell after being made invisible. "The Invisible Man's effort to trap the criminals actually responsible for the murder for which he was sentenced to death, is the important action and suspence factor in the film. The story was suggested by "The Invisible Man" written by H. G. Wells.

Nan Grey, John Sutton, Cecil Kellaway and Alan Napier, head the supporting cast to make "The Invisible Man Returns" Sir Cedric Hardwicke's most distinguished screen triumph.

Fox Movietone News"

Lowell Thomas describing the important world-wide events in "Fox Movietone News", an excellent musical comedy "Ice Frolics" and "Life Begins For Andy Panda" an amusing technicolor cartoon, precede the presentation of "The Invisible Man Returns".

"His Girl Friday"

Cary Grant and Rosalind Russell in the season's star comedy laugh hit "His Girl Friday" is now showing at the McCarthy Theatre and for entertainment which will long be remembered as great. we urge one and all to go and enjoy this fine motion picture.

AT THE BELLE

"LITTLE OLD NEW YORK"

The boisterous town of the good old days, when cows roamed Fifth Avenue and a barmaid—or a lady —could win a man like Robert Fulton, are brought vividly to life on the screen in Darryl F. Zanuck's production of "Little Old New York," the 20th Century-Fox film now on the Belle screen with Alice Faye, Fred MacMurray, Richard Greene, Brenda Joyce and Andy Devine heading a splendid cast.

This robust, romantic drama casts Alice Faye in her most colorful role as the fiery belle of the waterfront who fell headlong for handsome Robert Fulton—and went after him, while the whole brawling waterfront cheered her on.

MacMurray is seen as the burly shipbuilder engaged to build the Clermont, after Fulton's model for the first steamboat; Greene is seen as the dashing inventor himself; and blonde Brenda Joyce has the role of the lovely girl who loved him, helped him to attain his dream in the face of ridicule, and who later became his wife.

Directed by Henry King, "Little Old New York", offers the most spectacular production of the producer-director combination which gave to the screen such unforgettable films as "In Old Chicago", "Alexander's Ragtime Band," "Stanley and Livingstone", and "Jesse James."

Before the actual filming of "Little Old New York", began, Director King, his assistant, Bob Webb, and a camera crew spent a few weeks in the East photographing old New York backgrounds and scenes along the Hudson for production. They also did a vast amount of research on the history of the town and the career of Robert Fulton.

For the exterior sequences of the production, the studio built on its north lot the biggest harbor ever seen in Hollywood. The marine basin covered three acres. It was excavated to a depth of seven feet and filled with 5,000,000 gallons of water—a job that took three months in itself.

But that was only the beginning of a construction program without parallel in film history. There was first the matter of building the innumerable ships used in the picture and then re-creating the New York waterfront as it existed at the time the Clermont steamed up the Hudson to Albany to sound the death knell of the windjammers.

The popular Belle British newsreel, with flashes from all over the world and a swell color cartoon, "Two Headed Giant," will be exhibited on the same program.

SOUTH AFRICA BUSY

Cape Town (CP)—There is less unemployment in South Africa today than at any time since the beginning of the war, according to figures which show there were 1,089 skilled artisans unemployed in November and only 750 in December.

Richard Greene, Alice Faye and Fred MacMurray in the four-star romantic comedy-drama, "Little Old New York," featuring Brenda Joyce and Andy Devine, now on the Belle screen.

A Dash of Red

By HELEN ALPERT

Joe had thought it would be exciting to show them Red Jim's place out on the Philadelphia road. "And is it tough!" he had laughed. "Man, these are the dregs what am! Old workers out for sport—a slice of the lower depths—a week's pay blown like a shot—swell!"

"What fun!" they had shouted as they'd jostled their way to a table.

Joe looked uneasily at his tiny partner as they circled the floor. The air seemed menacing. "Maybe we'd better scram, Jackie" he said. But Jacqueline impishly tossed her head. "Joe. I've never seen such people before. Such types! My word, they look like pickpockets, kidnappers ,gunmen, forgers — even murderers!"

"Bob and Sara swept past them. "Hey!" Joe called, "somebody ought to sit at our table and watch the coats!" Bob and Sara obligingly danced off the floor.

"What a joint!" Joe exclaimed.

"What the whole floor, bud," a voice snarled. It did not ask; it stated; and Joe blinked.

"What a joint!"—out of earshot.

Jackie giggled. "Oh, Joe—your face—"

"Yeah—I thought he was going to plug me."

"Maybe we're too conscious in our evening clothes."

"And Bob and Sara ,too!" Jackie laughed and crept closer. "But really, Joe," soberly ,"these gimcracks I'm wearing are the only things left from the robbery last week."

"That was some job," said Joe. "Getting into a fortress of a house like yours and grabbing everything without leaving a trace."

"We've been stepping over police and detectives ever since—but all they can give is a bad guess." Jackie shrugged shortly. "There were some pieces we prayed we'd never lose—or forget. Dad's college photos—pins—" she broke off. "Oh, well. Swing her along, Joe!"

They flung themselves into a nimble step when a burly figure shouldered through to the wall. "Break, bud?" Again it was not a question but a demand.

Joe spluttered. "I—no—"

"That is, if the lady don't mind?"

"I don't mind," she said briefly. "In fact, I might enjoy it."

The man swaggered. He was big and dapper. His derby was pushed far back on his head and Jackie saw thick red waves of hair.

"Carrot top?" she asked smiling a little.

"Who, me? Oh, sure, kid. That's why they call me Red Jim!"

Her eyes flamed wide. "So you're Red Jim!"

"That's me, baby. Red's my favorite color. I go for red-striped ties. I like red." He expanded. A ruby red ring glittered on his finger. "Red's my lucky color ,too. Sometime I'm gonna get me a rug like I seen marchin' up some steps the same color exactly as my hair!"

"Impossible!" she breathed.

"Oh, yes!" she smiled bewitchingly.

The music blared to an ear-splitting crescendo and ceased.

Sara shrieked. "Red Jim!"

"Ye proud owner," explained Jackie. "Excuse me while I polish up for the maiden's next encounter with the gent." She sped off with her handbag.

"We want you for the Macrae robbery." Someone's voice was ice.

"Macrae? Say, that's a big joke on you. Last Wednesday night I was right here till morning. I can prove it, see?"

"Alibi Jim, as usual. But this time you're pickled."

"Says who?"

"Says Miss Jacqueline Macrae herself!"

Jackie appeared in the doorway, very quiet and white.

"Slick job. No fingerprints. No clues. No nothin'. A clean getaway, fella. But just a little too fond of red for your health!"

"I don't getcha."

Jackie spoke. "You said you saw a stair runner exactly the same shade of red as your hair. That was in my house. The runner was tacked down Wednesday morning and removed the next day. A tiny corner of it was missing. The house was robbed Wednesday night. The rug was taken away the following morning."

She stared intently at his red hair. "You see," she said, "we couldn't stand the color."

WALL STREET

New York, Mar. 9 (AP).—Prospects of important European developments over the week-end were blamed today for a spotty stock market. Declines of fractions to around a point were well distributed at the close.

Transfers were in the neighborhood of 350,000 shares for the two hours.

Bonds and commodities were mixed.

Checker Cab was an isolated strong spot, getting up to a new 1940 top, along with Packard, American Airlines and Eastern Air Lines. Supported also were Pennsylvania, Eastman Kodak, J. C. Penney, Montgomery Ward, General Electric, American Can and Standard Oil of N. J.

Canadian issues were fairly steady. Canadian Pacific and Dome and Lake Shore Mines advanced fractions. Hiram Walker was stationary. Canada 4s, in the bond market, was neglected.

FIRST GAVE UP

Stevens Point, Wis., March 9 — (AP)—Deputy Sheriffs, passing Adolfph Berent's farm late at night, rushed into the house to tell Berent that his barn and woodshed were burning. "I know it," Berent said glumly when they discovered him sitting in a chair. "It's been burning an hour and a half and there isn't much I can do about it."

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, March 9—(CP)— Gold stocks lost ground, industrials were a bit stronger and base metal and western oil groups were generally steady in the final session of the week on the Toronto stock exchange. Volume was normal for a two-hour session with about 150,000 shares changing hands.

Several gold shares touched new low prices for the year or longer. McIntyre sold off to 49 for broken lots, down a point from Firday and Dome, Hollinger, Bralorne and Buffalo-Ankerite posted minor losses, Hollinger going to a new low for the year. Wright-Hargreaves also hit a new low at $7.05, off 1 0cents over-night and recessions of 5 to 10 cents came through for Sylvanite, Pickle Crow and Northern Empire.

Steep Rock showed a minor net loss finally after touching a new high. Smelters lost some ground and International Nickel added a minor fraction. Silvers were slow and unchanged.

Steel, utility and bank stocks were inclined to firmness. Steel of Canada added 1-2. Senior oils held steady. In the miscellaneous list Standard Chemical stood out with a gain of 2 points.

Distribution of Costs

The article last week explained that the packer had $2.95 per hog to cover the cost of handling. The following table shows an approximate distribution of the costs based on data collected from the packing industry in Ontario, and as of Toronto to seaboard, in so far as transportation is concerned:

Item:	Cost per hog
Allowance for bruising and rejects	$0.21
Cost of buying, killing, cutting	.91
Cost of curing, holding and baling Wiltshires including plant supervision and overhead	1.46
Shipping, loading, paper, icing or heating	0.09
Freight Toronto to Montreal, including re-icing	0.42

With regard to the above expenses these may be greater or less as between one point and another, and will vary from time to time according to existing conditions.

For example bacon moves from various eastern points and as far west as Edmonton and Calgary and each point has a different freight rate. Another varying item is the credits from killing and cutting by-products. Fresh by-products may sell well in such cities as Toronto and Montreal, while at a number of other points in Canada, the quantity produced cannot be consumed locally. Such products have largely to be frozen and shipped to other markets.

The following table illustrates the difference in freight costs and by-product values at three representative points in Canada:

	Freight rate to seaboard per 100 lb.	Present value of by-products per hog
Toronto	$0.37	$1.60
Winnipeg	0.83	1.21
Edmonton	1.27	1.20

Therefore it is impractical to lay down any absolute schedule of costs as incurred by packers or any absolute table of credits, because of the varying value of by-products.

Baron Carl Gustav Mannerheim, leader of Finland's heroic defence against the Russian onslaughts, is reported near death. According to the reports the strain of the Russian campaign against Finland has been too much for the 72-year-old Finnish hero and he is confined to bed under the watchful eyes of personal physician.

PRIME MINISTER DEFENDS EMPIRE

The training plan now has made Canada, for the purposes of final victory in the war, "a pivotal centre of the British Commonwealth," he said. It would not have been evolved in peacetime and could not have been developed sooner than it was.

King Described as Idealist

At Charlottetown, Dr. Manion described Mr. King as an idealist and progressive when out of power and a politician and reactionary in power. The Prime Minister was "the man who talks national unity but who through his lieutenants fosters disunity."

Dr. Manion also attacked Liberal campaign methods and in a brief reference to Australia said that country had just formed "a national government such as I propose in Canada."

Speaking in support of Defence Minister Rogers at Kingston, Ont., Col. Ralston disclosed for the first time that the First Canadian Division went to England with a full outfit of light and heavy machine guns, 18 pounder field guns and medium guns, in addition to rifles and personal equipment.

He said "I think we did remarkably well," in equipping the Division.

Prepared for Three-Year Struggle

Mr. Rogers to'd the meeting that participation in the war involved careful organization and on the advice of the Allies, the government from the first prepared for a struggle lasting at least three years.

The Federal administration was described by R. L. Maitland, British Columbia Conservative leader, as one of "inaction and indecision, just drifting and going in and out with the tide." Speaking at Bracebridge, Ont., he also stated that the tourist trade is one of the most neglected businesses in Canada.

Mention of coalition government was made for the first time by any prominent speaker in this campaign at Winnipeg. Premier Thane Campbell of Prince Edward Island said that if the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation party obtains a balance of power in the next Parliament it would lead to a coalition government.

Answers Criticism

Answering Opposition criticism directed at the equipment of troops now in England, Finance Minister Ralston for the first time made public the quantity of arms sent with the Canadian troops.

Up to the present the only official information on the subject was the fact that the troops were fully equipped as to rifles, uniforms and accessories such as blankets, shaving kits and other gear.

Heavy and light machine guns, field guns and medium howitzers and chassis for field ambulances accompanied the first overseas division to England and transport vehicles are being made in Canada for shipment to the Division shortly, Mr. Ralston said.

With the field batteries went a full complement of 72 guns of the 18-pounder type converted to rubber tires. All were in good shape and some had only been fired for tests. Although the 18-pounder would be replaced by the 25 pounder as soon as possible it was not obsolete, was giving good service and was being used by the Allies.

Took Full Complement

The medium battery also took a full complement of guns but four Canadian 60-pound howitzers were being exchanged with the British for 6-inch howitzers .

The machine gun battalion have a full complement of the latest model of the Vickers heavy machine guns. The other battalions all took their full number of Lewis light machine guns, 50 per battalion. The Lewis gun was not obsolete. It was being used in France but would be replaced with the Bren guns as soon as possible.

Bren guns from the John Inglis Company in Toronto would be delivered soon. Instead of getting 1,000 guns from the factory in the year starting April 1, as the much criticized contract provided, the government would get 2,000.

Anti-tank rifles and anti-tank guns would be supplied in England, some wireless equipment would be supplied there and some made in Canada. Chassis for ambulances had been sent from Canada and the bodies were being fitted to them in England.

Of the 2,000 motor vehicles required for the Division 95 per cent would be supplied from Canada and of this all but the Bren gun carriers would be sent in time to go with the Division to France.

Canada's Task Heavy One

A long war lies ahead and Canada's task will be a heavy one, Mr. Ralston warned.

Canada and her allies must win the struggle or untold misery faces the world. "To make that victory decisive there is something I want to plead for: I think we should strangle on sight those twin offspring of wishful thinking which get in our way and hinder our effort," he continued.

"One of them is the idea that the enemy is likely to collapse, and that therefore the task will be easy; the other is that an early peace will be negotiated and the war will be short.

"I am convinced that no more dangerous fallacies and no more subtle menaces to aggressive war effort could be imagined. We have a big task and a long war ahead. What I am banking on is that we will recognize the magnitude and the length of the job and will plan and work accordingly.

"If we do that, I have no fear of the outcome. Success will bring the fresh gratitude of mankind and a new sense of security to those staunch hearts in the Old Land, and in France, who risk their all.

Introduced by W. Rupert Davies

Mr. Rogers linked the name of Premier Mitchell Hepburn with the names of Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, and Dr. Manion as critics of the government. On election day, he said, the people would have before them the record of leadership of the government and also the criticism levelled against it by Mr. Hepburn, Dr. Manion and Col. Drew.

W. Rupert Davies, who introduced Col. Ralston, said it had been alleged that Mr. Rogers was not a good Minister of Labor in his term at that post.

"I want to say he was the best and most humane Minister of Labor this country ever had," Mr. Davies said. "He was promoted to the position of Minister of National Defence because he was a good Minister of Labor."

Mr. Davies said he spoke from personal knowledge because he served on a board of conciliation appointed by Mr. Rogers to deal with a dispute between the Canadian Press and its telegraph operators. As a result of Mr. Rogers' sympathetic support the board was able to avert a costly strike and both parties became better friends than ever before.

Disappeared From Files Is Claim.

A charge that detailed plans for establishment of a complete government arsenal at Valcartier, Que., disappeared from the files of the Department of National Defence was made at Vancouver by Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative leader.

"The Valcartier arsenal was worked out in detail by Prime Minister (R. B.) Bennett," Col. Drew said. "The plans were removed from the Department of National Defence—to my own knowledge."

He said that when the commision investigating the Bren gun contract sought the plans "a memorandum was filed by the Department of Defence, that the plans referred to were not definite plans."

"That statement is not true. I have had those plans in my own hands."

Prime Minister Mackenzie King "ignores the necessity of all Canadians, irrespective of their party affiliations, uniting in a supreme national effort" to win the war, Hon. C. H. Cahan, National Government candidate in Montreal St. Lawrence-St. George said in a 15-minute broadcast from a Montreal radio station.

Mr. Cahan said that to "achieve the unity of members of the Liberal party, under its party standard, rather than to maintain the national unity of all Canada" appeared to be the "supreme ambition" of Mr. King.

Ignores Necessity.

"He and his colleagues in the government of the country have decided that under no circumstances will they associate in their war efforts with any Conservative member or members of parliament who may be elected in the pending elections," said Mr. Cahan.

"In this time of unprecedented crisis the prime minister ignores the necessity of all Canadians, irrespective of their party affiliations, uniting in a supreme national effort to bring this war to a successful conclusion, and he poses the succe[illegible] of his partisans as the supreme o[illegible]t which he and his colleagues have in view."

The "supreme issues" in the election are "concerned with the prosecution of the war," Mr. Cahan concluded. "They transcend all minor questions of domestic policy. This war is of tremendous importance to us all. This war will impose sacrifices and suffering upon all of us, yet we must maintain our courage and cheerfulness to the end."

Supplied Nickel is Claim

Canada would have done more than any other nation in the world to foster disarmament if she had refused to supply the world with 85 per cent of her nickel, M. J. Coldwell, national chairman of the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation, said at Halifax.

He charged that "big financial and economic interests" which profited from the nickel trade were responsible for Germany's rearmament. "It's time that we put in the House of Commons men who can protect us from profiteering out of the blood and agony of war," he said.

At Sydney Mines, N.S., Revenue Minister Ilsley said that the government's war effort "has been kept clear of politics." Fisheries Minister Michaud told an Atholville, N.B., meeting that the Conservatives have nothing to offer the Canadian people in the present campaign.

RIGA

It became known here that Russia had demanded fulfillment of her terms before even accepting an armistice.

That Sweden has acted to establish contact between the negotiators of Russia and Finland was confirmed by the Swedish Foreign Office, but authoritative sources denied that Sweden had urged the Finns to accept Russia's peace conditions, or that Sweden's actions were under pressure from Germany.

When the negotiations finally were begun between the two reluctant parties, each fearful of displaying weakness, the Finns expressed a desire for an armistice. The Russians refused, it was reported, contending peace conditions must be established in advance.

Unofficial Terms Given

These condtions, which drew gloomy expressions of refusal from Finnish citizens, have been described unofficially as follows:

Finland to cede to Russia the Karelian Isthmus, the city of Viipuri, the entire north coast of Lake Ladoga, Hanko Peninsula and its naval port, and at least part of the Petsamo district ffonting on the Arctic Ocean.

They are described as much more severe than the Russian demands which preceded the invasion.

(In Helsinki, some Finns saw in the Russian terms an effort to gain time for polishing a new offensive strategy, while others thought these were bargaining points, subject to reduction if Finland was in a mood to take them seriously.

(Officially Finland was silent concerning the peace moves, and a government spokesman said, "the situation has not changed" in reference to fighting in bitter progress on the Karelian Isthmus.

No Communique Released

With success or failure of the peace efforts pivoting on whether Russia will lower her demands to a compromise basis, it was generally held that Finland never could agree to yielding Hanko.

This peninsula in Southwestern Finland juts into the mouth of the Gulf of Finland and is regarded the key to the Gulf, and to Finland's independence as well.

(British newspaper commentaries and a French spokesman suggested that Finland would be unwise to give up essential defence positions lest she be vulnerable to any future Russian inroad, as Czecho-Slovakia was to Germany after the Sudeten concessions of September, 1938.)

Not Acting as Mediator

Although officially confirmed here that Sweden had acted as go-between for Russia and Finland in preliminary negotiations, there was strong insistance the Stockholm government was in no way acting as mediator.

It was stated further that the initiative toward negotiations came from Russia and not Sweden; that this Scandinavian country did no more, in effect, than to lend its good officer for establishing contacts and for presentation of Moscow's terms.

There was no evidence that negotiations were continuing here, and Sweden, in common with Norway and Denmark, now looks to Berlin and Moscow for further developments.

In some quarters here, Germany is regarded the actual "behind-the-scenes" mediator, and increasing attention is being directed to the question of to what extent Germany may make diplomatic capital in northern Europe, if the Finnish war is settled.

Try to Extend Influence

If some agreement can be reached it was assumed Germany will try to extend her influence in Scandinavia by arguing she had safeguarded this region's neutrality.

The extent of the Soviet demands for peace continued to attract attention. It was taken for granted that the Soviets' first demands were severe ,but this was believed to be in keeping with the apparent desire of both the Russians and Finns not to show weakness in seeking a settlement.

It was rumored that Moscow might be satisfied with only a section of the Karelian Isthmus and a naval base near the mouth of the Gulf of Finland, dropping any claims on Viipuri, Hanko and Arctic Finnish territory—but these rumors were without confirmation.

KING

Mentioned Challenge

Dr. Manion mentioned Mr. King's challenge that he name the men who would be appointed to his national cabinet. "How many ministers?" he asked, "did Mr. King name before the 1935 election?" In fact, he doubted if many people knew the names of half of them now.

Mr. King, he said, was "the man who talks national unity but who through his lieutenants fosters disunity.

"The man who advocates progressive social legislation on the eve of an election—but who is a real reactionary when he gets into a position to put the social legislation into effect;

"The man who promises to protect the common people—yet who lines up with the big interests;

"The man who preaches the rights of labor—yet who puts a lawyer or a professor in charge of that department and who appoints no representatives of labor on the war boards or commissions;

"The man who has been talking unemployment insurance since 1919 — but who falls back on the constitution as a reason for inaction;

"The man who is a disciple of the supremacy of parliament, yet who does not hesitate to scuttle that parliament for petty political purposes;

"The man who, on the night after the election of 1935, promised a 'new era' for the workers but who has since done nothing for the unemployed and the youth of our nation."

SATUR. MARKET PRICES STEADY

Broilers $1.00-$1.10, Potatoes $1.00 Bu. — Large Offering of Eggs With A-Grade at 25 Cents

There was a noticeable lack of produce at the Saturday market, although price levels remained generally firm. Roads of the district are reported to be in fair travelling condition, but for some reason, even some of the veteran vendors failed to put in an appearance.

However, as one vendor puts it, this is a "dead" part of the season with Fall stocks showing signs of depletion, while dairy produce has not reached anything like seasonal peak as yet.

However, this cannot be said about eggs, for there was a large variety to choose from. Prices were stable with Grade "A" selects selling at 25c the dozen. Mediums were quoted at 22c and 2[illegible], and a few pullets, or small size quality at 20c the dozen. Farmers' butter quotations were steady at 30c for single pound rolls, and 55c and 60c for "doubles."

Broilers $1.00 to $1.10

Young weighty broiler chickens, by far the best quality offered as yet featured the chicken offering which generally was light. The young birds offered by a Wellington poultryman were quoted at $1 and $1.10 the pair. June and July birds were steady at prices ranging between $1.10 and $1.30, while a few fowl moved sluggishly at from 60c and 70c each, according to size. Ducks were priced at $1 each, but no turkeys were offered.

Northern Spy apples were offered at $1.40 for ring-packed hampers and a few Starks Delicious at a few cents less. Standard varities of cooking apples in No. 1 and Domestic grades sold at from $1 the bushel. Apple stocks of the district are not showing any signs of depletion as yet, according to an Ameliasburg vendor, in spite of large shipments that have been sent to Ottawa and Quebec markets.

Potatoes $1.00 Bushel

Potatoes were fairly plentiful with good qualities offered at $1 the bushel. Other vegetables showed no signs of decline from the high prices that have characterized them during the past three or four weeks. Parsnips sold at $1 the bushel, with beets, turnips and carrots offered at between 80c and 90c. Winter cabbage moved slowly at 40c the dozen.

The first mullets or "suckers", as they are more familiarly known, were offered in the fish departments today, selling at four for 25c. Vendors, however, predicted no great runs of these fish until more favorable weather conditions set in.

A few whitefish were offered at 20c the pound, with mudcats in large quantities being available at two pounds for 25c.

Farmers of the district, still apparently of the opinion that it is more profitable to sell young pigs than to raise them owing to the increased price of feedstuffs, offered a large number of the five and six-weeks' old porkers for sale. Prices ranged between $5 and $6 each.

There was also heavy fighting along the Kollaa River, northeast of Lake Ladoga, where the Soviet invaders were said to have lost in dead and wounded during the week at least the equivalent of a division —15,000 to 18,000 men. According to official army headquarters figures, 4,200 Russians were killed in three days alone.

IF FINLAND

"The course of events cannot be certainly foreseen, but changes may be swift. If negotiations prove they will not give Finland peace with honor she will doubtless appeal to Britain, France and the rest of the world for help.

"She must have it swiftly and in ample measure. The Finns have fought with noble hardihood. Their bodies have been a rampart of the freedom and spirit of man against barbarism resurgent.

"From the Allies they must have all which can be furnished them for the honor of the crusade."

The News Chronicle said:

"This week end will be one of the most critical of the war. For within the next few hours Finland must decide whether to accept Russia's demand or go on fighting.

"The choice before Sweden is even more unpleasant than that of Finland. For she has to decide whether she will press Finland to accept terms which, in effect, will leave that country at Russia's mercy and will go to the length of barring help from the western powers, or whether she will stand by her Scandinavian neighbor and act in the spirit of the popular slogan, 'Finland's fight is Sweden's fight.'

Knowledge that the Allies already are in the field, the newspaper added, "should simplify Sweden's choice."

The Nazi prison ship Altmark is pictured fast in the ice of Jossing Fjord, Norway, after she was boarded by tars from the British destroyer Cossack in violation of Norwegian neutrality. The Altmark, which served as an auxiliary to the late German pocket battleship Graf Spee, carried 326 British seamen in her holds. The men, crews from the ships sunk by the Graf Spee, were freed and brought to Scotland by the Cossack. The action of the British brought about an exchange of notes by the three nations involved.

Six hundred plainclothes police patrolled the west end after thirteen people had been injured in two bomb explosions attributed to I.R.A. activity. The first explosion damaged a cloakroom at Marble Arch. Crowds were hurrying to the scene when the second one was heard, outside the Mount Royal building in Oxford St.

September, Switzerland has been keeping a vigilant eye on the border, just in case Germany may attempt to cross Switzerland in an attempt to outflank the Maginot line. Latest reports indicate a rising tension in Switzerland as 70,000 men were called to the colors ahead of time. The Swiss government is reported to be planning evacuation of areas the German army would likely cross should they attempt a blow at France by violating the renowned neutrality of tiny Switzerland. In this evacuation would be included the city of Zurich, which has a population of 331,000. Every able-bodied man in Switzerland belongs to the army and every Swiss man is a crack shot, training in rifle shooting being a weekly routine. London, March 11—(CP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain announced that Great Britain and France are prepared to help Finland "with all the available resources at our disposal" but declined to say whether it was proposed that regular troops should be sent.

Making a statement in the House of Commons, the Prime Minister said, in reply to a question as to whether further Anglo-French help would be tantamount to going to war against Russia, that "we have not arrived at that yet."

The Prime Minister spoke after it had been disclosed Britain had refused to relay Soviet peace terms to Finland. Foreign Office circles described these terms, relayed by Sweden after Britain refused, as "onerous."

Statement Given

Asked by Clement Attlee, leader of the Opposition, for a statement on the negotiations now in progress between Finland and Russia, Mr. Chamberlain said:

"The House will be aware that both the French and British governments have sent, and are continuing to send, material assistance to Finland. This has been of considerable value to the Finnish forces.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Clouds and gravitation! It is a commonplace to talk of clouds "floating along" which expression probably harks back to the days when it was thought that cloud particles were hollow and filled with warm air, each particle being a little balloon. That was just a fine theory made up to suit the observations. Clouds are composed of particles of water or ice which are not hollow and are drawn to the earth by the force of gravitation. They are so small that they present a large surface to the resistance of the air compared to their size and therefore they fall very slowly. As they fall they evaporate, which gives the illusion of their not sinking.

French Flier Makes Safe Landing After An Air Duel

Paris, March 11—(CP—Havas)—Although seriously wounded, a French flier made a safe landing behind his own lines yesterday after an air duel in which six French planes came to grips with an equal number of German machines over the fog-shrouded western front. Neither side lost any planes.

The battle was virtually the only sign of air activity during the day. A number of long-range reconnaissance flights had been carried out the night before both by French and German squadrons.

There was a spurt of land patrol operations in the zone to the west of the Vosges, where French outposts reported turning back several enemy detachments.

This morning's official communique advised that there was "nothing to report" in the way of war news.

CANADA NAMES COMMISSIONER TO NEW ZEALAND

BRILLIANT CAREER

(By J. C. Graham, Canadian Press Correspondent)

Auckland, New Zealand, March 11—(CP) — Canada's appointment of a high commissioner to New Zealand—Dr. W. A. Riddell, former Canada's permanent representative to the League of Nations—has met with universal approval here.

So far no move has been made to appoint a high commissioner from New Zealand to Canada but it is expected this step will be taken before long.

The appointment is regarded as evidence of New Zealand's increasing status in international affairs.

Celebration of the centennial of this island dominion, now under way, has helped to arouse national feeling. The present Labor government also has shown a more independent spirit in international affairs than previous administrations. It has not hesitated to take a course different from Great Britain at League of Nation assemblies and on similar occasions when Britain's views did not coincide with those of the Dominion

CAMPAIGN WARMS UP

Conservative Leader Manion Ends Tour of Maritimes on Saturday

(By the Canadian Press)

Political leaders watched the official nominations closely today and jockeyed for position in the stretch drive of the Dominion election campaign, following a heavy week-end of campaigning.

Six federal cabinet ministers gave election speeches Saturday and last night Revenue Minister Ilsley of Kentville, N.S., announced a new trade agreement between Canada and the Dominican Republic.

Mr. Ilsley said the new trade agreement, signed March 8, provided for an exchange of goods on a most-favored nation basis and for removal of Dominican internal revenue taxes on certain kinds of Canadian fish and Canadian seed potatoes.

The Conservative week-end campaign was led by three prominent party men and Dr. J. A. Robb, national organizer, charged in Ottawa that the government was attempting to discourage soldiers from voting. Both J. S. Woodsworth, Co-operative Commonwealth Federation leader and M. J. Coldwell, National Chairman, addressed meetings.

Concludes Tour

Concluding his Maritime tour in Halifax, Conservative leader Manion stuck to his claims that the present government turned down two years ago a British effort to establish British air training schools in Canada at Britain's ex-

CREW SCUTTLES GERMAN SHIP

British Cruiser Catches Up With German Freighter Near Puerto Rico

London, March 11—(CP)— The burning and abandoning of the 5,600-ton German merchantman Hannover by her own crew, when a British cruiser caught up with her, was announced by the Admiralty last night.

The incident occurred Thursday night in Mona Channel, a passage 75 miles wide between the Dominican Republic and Puerto Rico

Loaded with 6,000 tons of ore and lumber, the freighter had sailed from Willemstad, Netherlands West Indies, in an attempt to reach Germany.

A report from Ciudad Trujillo said the Hannover's crew had been landed on the Dominican East Coast.

Three losses were announced by Britain. The 1,918-ton Maindy Hill and the 2,719-ton Chevychase went down last night in the North Sea and the Borthwick, 1,097 tons, foundered off Flushing, The Netherlands, after hitting a mine. The Maindy Hill sank after an explosion and the Chevychase collided with an unidentified ship.

The Admiralty announced the names of eight prisoners from a German sumbarine. No details as to how or when they fell into British hands were given.

Airmen Dissatisfied Public Works Official States at Open Inquiry

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

St. Thomas, Ont., Mar. 11 (CP).—William H. Stringer, Commissioner of Ontario Provincial Police, today opened the public inquiry ordered by Premier Mitchell Hepburn and directed particularly to reports of a "violent disturbance" at the Royal Canadian Air Force training centre near this city.

Commissioner Stringer said he was directed to investigate and to report to Attorney-General Gordon Conant on the system of policing and the police needs of Elgin County. Investigation would be made also into the reported walkout at the Air Force school.

Premier Not Present.

It had been reported to the commissioner that "a substantial number of airmen left the school and discontinued their training in disobedience to their superior officers". This, according to a report to him, said the commissioner, resulted in numbers of airmen congregating on the streets and in the public buildings of the city, contrary to orders by their superiors.

Premier Hepburn was not present at the inquiry which he ordered under the provisions of the Ontario Constables' Act following a controversy with Defence Minister Norman Rogers as to what happened at the school.

About a dozen reporters and a handful of spectators were on hand as the inquiry opened in the Ontario government offices. Deputy Attorney-general Cecil Snyder is counsel for the commissioner. A number of uniformed Provincial Policemen were present.

Told of Dissatisfaction.

First witness was Angus Johnson, Inspector for the Ontario Public Works at the former hospital now housing the R.C.A.F. centre. Johnson, a former mayor of St. Thomas, said he left the school Saturday, Feb. 10, to drive to St. Thomas. He gave a lift to two airmen who said they had passes.

These men told him there was dissatisfaction at the school, that a number of airmen had walked out

TRANSCAUCASIAN STATES LOOKING FOR A FREE HOME

Confident Great Britain and France Will Become Involved in War With Russia

WAITING DAYS OVER

By CHARLES S. FOLTZ, JR.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Geneva, March 11—(AP)— The refugee anti-Soviet "government" of the three Transcaucasion states of Georgia, Azerbaijan and Armenia are becoming increasingly confident that Great Britain and France, by becoming involved in war with Russia will "free" their homelands.

For almost 20 years, absentee National "Government" have been maintained by Georgian, Azerbaijan and Armenian refugees, and now they feel their days of waiting are over, that with Allied assistance they will seibe the regions now grouped in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics as autonomous states.

Kana Chavichvily, a Georgian delegate at Geneva since 1921, told the Associated Press today that the Georgian Nationalist Government held a secret "rebirth" meeting in Paris last Thursday. Elected "Premier" was Euythyme Takaichvili, former Vice-President of the Georgian Constituent Assembly, who said: "We have reason to believe that we may soon get Allied support."

ANGLO-ITALIAN COAL DISPUTE NOW SETTLED

Chamberlain Expects That Trade Talks Will Again be Reopened

GREATLY PLEASED

London, March 11—(CP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain, reporting to the House of Commons on the week-end settlement of the coal dispute with Italy, declared "it may be hoped that the way now has been reopened for resumption of trade talks to the mutual advantage of the two countries."

Mr. Chamberlain said he was "sure there would be genuine satisfaction in this country in the solution of what might have been a troublesome dispute by application of common sense and good will."

Asked whether Britain had been able to arrange to supply more coal to Italy now, the Prime Minister said "that no doubt will be the subject of further discussions."

To a labor member's suggestion that the "common sense to which the Prime Minister referred should be applied to the general situation all over the world," Mr. Chamberlain replied amid laughter that "it takes more people than one to apply common sense."

AUSTRALIA WILL HAVE 222,000 MEN UNDER ARMS IN '41

Army Corps of 50,000 Men Will be Maintained Overseas According to Premier Menzies

COST IS $630,000,000

One-Quarter of Airmen Enlisted Will Finish Training in Dominion of Canada

(By J. E. Holdsworth, Canadian Press Correspondent)

Sydney, Australia, March 11 —(CP-Cable)—Australia expects to have a total of 222,000 men under arms in all fighting services either at home or overseas by June, 1941.

Prime Minister R. G. Menzies last week revealed the scope of the Australian war effort for the first time and announced that it is planned to dispatch an army corps overseas.

It was learned today that Australia's objective so far as overseas troops is concerned, is the maintenance on the war fronts of three modern "slimmed" divisions, of 16,000 men each, to be continually reinforced. This compares with five divisions of 20,000 men each in the first great war.

Hepburn Publishes Gov't Advertisement Over Banned Film

Toronto, Mar. 11 (CP).—A government advertisement appearing in Toronto newspapers today over the name of Mitchell F. Hepburn, Premier of Ontario, said the March of Time film "Canada at War" was banned in Ontario because it was being used for political propaganda elsewhere in Canada.

Mr. Hepburn announced a week ago that the Ontario Board of Censors had prohibited exhibition of the film for the duration of the Dominion election campaign.

The advertisement reproduced an advertisement published in Vancouver newspapers which linked the name of Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Federal Minister of Pensions, with the March of Time picture.

French, Italian Airlines in South America Ignore Their Nazi Partner

(By Devon Francis, Associated Press Aviation Editor)

New York, March 11—(AP)—Of all the anomalies in the war, none is stranger than the elaborate indifference with which French and German transport planes fly side by side in South America.

Moreover, in spite of the close political collaboration between Germany and Italy in Europe, the Italians eschew co-operation with the German airline in South America in favor of the French.

Airlines of the two countries share weather, radio and other facilities to the exclusion of Lufthansa, the German airline.

For more than 3,000 miles down the coast of Brazil from Rio de Janeiro, through Uruguay to Buenos Aires and across the Andes to Santiago, airliners of Germany and France have been flying their schedules regularly.

The Buenos Aires-Santiago leg of the German route now has been discontinued, but Lufthansa expects to resume service as soon as some larger, faster German-made planes are received. The British blockade has made the date indefinite.

The Germans abandoned one of their commercial airline operations in the western hemisphere when the war started—the south Atlantic airmail service.

Lately an Italian line has replaced the German on the south Atlantic run, flying by way of the Cape Verde Islands.

Foreign Affairs Committee of Finnish Parliament Has Reportedly Recognized Russian Peace Conditions but No Official Confirmation is Available

FINNS ASK GUARANTEES

One of the Conditions for Peace Would be on the Understanding That Finland Must, at Least, in No Way Hamper Russo-German Program

London, March 11—(CP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain announced that Great Britain and France are prepared to help Finland "with all the available resources at our disposal" but declined to say whether it was proposed that regular troops should be sent.

Making a statement in the House of Commons, the Prime Minister said, in reply to a question as to whether further Anglo-French help would be tantamount to going to war against Russia, that "we have not arrived at that yet."

The Prime Minister spoke after it had been disclosed Britain had refused to relay Soviet peace terms to Finland. Foreign Office circles described these terms, relayed by Sweden after Britain refused, as "onerous."

Statement Given

Asked by Clement Attlee, leader of the Opposition, for a statement on the negotiations now in progress between Finland and Russia, Mr. Chamberlain said:

"The House will be aware that both the French and British governments have sent, and are continuing to send, material assistance to Finland. This has been of considerable value to the Finnish forces.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Clouds and gravitation! It is a commonplace to talk of clouds "floating along" which expression probably harks back to the days when it was thought that cloud particles were hollow and filled with warm air, each particle being a little balloon. That was just a fine theory made up to suit the observations. Clouds are composed of particles of water or ice which are not hollow and are drawn to the earth by the force of gravitation. They are so small that they present a large surface to the resistance of the air compared to their size and therefore they fall very slowly As they fall they evaporate, which gives the illusion of their not sinking.

French Flier Makes Safe Landing After An Air Duel

Paris, March 11—(CP—Havas)—Although seriously wounded, a French flier made a safe landing behind his own lines yesterday after an air duel in which six French planes came to grips with an equal number of German machines over the fog-shrouded western front. Neither side lost any planes.

The battle was virtually the only sign of air activity during the day. A number of long-range reconnaissance flights had been carried out the night before both by French and German squadrons.

There was a spurt of land patrol operations in the zone to the west of the Vosges, where French outposts reported turning back several enemy detachments.

This morning's official communique advised that there was "nothing to report" in the way of war news.

CANADA NAMES COMMISSIONER TO NEW ZEALAND

BRILLIANT CAREER

(By J. C. Graham, Canadian Press Correspondent)

Auckland, New Zealand, March 11—(CP) — Canada's appointment of a high commissioner to New Zealand—Dr. W. A. Riddell, former Canada's permanent representative to the League of Nations—has met with universal approval here.

So far no move has been made to appoint a high commissioner from New Zealand to Canada but it is expected this step will be taken before long.

The appointment is regarded as evidence of New Zealand's increasing status in international affairs.

Celebration of the centennial of this island dominion, now under way, has helped to arouse national feeling. The present Labor government also has shown a more independent spirit in international affairs than previous administrations. It has not hesitated to take a course different from Great Britain at League of Nation assemblies and on similar occasions when Britain's views did not coincide with those of the Dominion

CAMPAIGN WARMS UP

(By the Canadian Press)

Political leaders watched the official nominations closely today and jockeyed for position in the stretch drive of the Dominion election campaign, following a heavy week-end of campaigning.

Six federal cabinet ministers gave election speeches Saturday and last night Revenue Minister Ilsley of Kentville, N.S., announced a new trade agreement between Canada and the Dominican Republic.

Mr. Ilsley said the new trade agreement, signed March 8, provided for an exchange of goods on a most-favored nation basis and for removal of Dominican internal revenue taxes on certain kinds of Canadian fish and Canadian seed potatoes.

The Conservative week-end campaign was led by three prominent party men and Dr. J. A. Robb, national organizer, charged in Ottawa that the government was attempting to discourage soldiers from voting. Both J. S. Woodsworth, Co-operative Commonwealth Federation leader and M. J. Coldwell, National Chairman, addressed meetings.

Concludes Tour

Concluding his Maritime tour in Halifax, Conservative leader Manion stuck to his claims that the present government turned down two years ago a British effort to establish British air training schools in Canada at Britain's ex-

CREW SCUTTLES GERMAN SHIP

British Cruiser Catches Up With German Freighter Near Puerto Rico

London, March 11—(CP)— The burning and abandoning of the 5,600-ton German merchantman Hannover by her own crew, when a British cruiser caught up with her, was announced by the Admiralty last night.

The incident occurred Thursday night in Mona Channel, a passage 75 miles wide between the Dominican Republic and Puerto Rico

Loaded with 6,000 tons of ore and lumber, the freighter had sailed from Willemstad, Netherlands West Indies, in an attempt to reach Germany.

A report from Ciudad Trujillo said the Hannover's crew had been landed on the Dominican East Coast.

Three losses were announced by Britain. The 1,918-ton Maindy Hill and the 2,719-ton Chevychase went down last night in the North Sea and the Borthwick, 1,097 tons, foundered off Flushing, The Netherlands, after hitting a mine. The Maindy Hill sank after an explosion and the Chevychase collided with an unidentified ship.

The Admiralty announced the names of eight prisoners from a German sumbarine. No details as to how or when they fell into British hands were given.

Airmen Dissatisfied Public Works Official States at Open Inquiry

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

St. Thomas, Ont., Mar. 11 (CP).—William H. Stringer, Commissioner of Ontario Provincial Police, today opened the public inquiry ordered by Premier Mitchell Hepburn and directed particularly to reports of a "violent disturbance" at the Royal Canadian Air Force training centre near this city.

Commissioner Stringer said he was directed to investigate and to report to Attorney-General Gordon Conant on the system of policing and the police needs of Elgin County. Investigation would be made also into the reported walkout at the Air Force school.

Premier Not Present.

It had been reported to the commissioner that "a substantial number of airmen left the school and discontinued their training in disobedience to their superior officers". This, according to a report to him, said the commissioner, resulted in numbers of airmen congregating on the streets and in the public buildings of the city, contrary to orders by their superiors.

Premier Hepburn was not present at the inquiry which he ordered under the provisions of the Ontario Constables' Act following a controversy with Defence Minister Norman Rogers as to what happened at the school.

About a dozen reporters and a handful of spectators were on hand as the inquiry opened in the Ontario government offices. Deputy Attorney-general Cecil Snyder is counsel for the commissioner. A number of uniformed Provincial Policemen were present.

Told of Dissatisfaction.

First witness was Angus Johnson, Inspector for the Ontario Public Works at the former hospital now housing the R.C.A.F. centre. Johnson, a former mayor of St. Thomas, said he left the school Saturday, Feb. 10, to drive to St. Thomas. He gave a lift to two airmen who said they had passes.

These men told him there was dissatisfaction at the school, that a number of airmen had walked out

TRANSCAUCASIAN STATES LOOKING FOR A FREE HOME

Confident Great Britain and France Will Become Involved in War With Russia

WAITING DAYS OVER

By CHARLES S. FOLTZ, JR.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Geneva, March 11—(AP)— The refugee anti-Soviet "government" of the three Transcaucasion states of Georgia, Azerbaijan and Armenia are becoming increasingly confident that Great Britain and France, by becoming involved in war with Russia will "free" their homelands.

For almost 20 years, absentee National "Government" have been maintained by Georgian, Azerbaijan and Armenian refugees, and now they feel their days of waiting are over, that with Allied assistance they will seibe the regions now grouped in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics as autonomous states.

Kana Chavichvily, a Georgian delegate at Geneva since 1921, told the Associated Press today that the Georgian Nationalist Government held a secret "rebirth" meeting in Paris last Thursday. Elected "Premier" was Euythyme Takaichvili, former Vice-President of the Georgian Constituent Assembly, who said: "We have reason to believe that we may soon get Allied support."

ANGLO-ITALIAN COAL DISPUTE NOW SETTLED

Chamberlain Expects That Trade Talks Will Again be Reopened

GREATLY PLEASED

London, March 11—(CP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain, reporting to the House of Commons on the week-end settlement of the coal dispute with Italy, declared "it may be hoped that the way now has been reopened for resumption of trade talks to the mutual advantage of the two countries."

Mr. Chamberlain said he was "sure there would be genuine satisfaction in this country in the solution of what might have been a troublesome dispute by application of 'common sense and good will."

Asked whether Britain had been able to arrange to supply more coal to Italy now, the Prime Minister said "that no doubt will be the subject of further discussions."

To a labor member's suggestion that the "common sense to which the Prime Minister referred should be applied to the general situation all over the world," Mr. Chamberlain replied amid laughter that "it takes more people than one to apply common sense."

Army Corps of 50,000 Men Will be Maintained Overseas According to Premier Menzies

COST IS $630,000,000

One-Quarter of Airmen Enlisted Will Finish Training in Dominion of Canada

(By J. E. Holdsworth, Canadian Press Correspondent)

Sydney, Australia, March 11 —(CP-Cable)—Australia expects to have a total of 222,000 men under arms in all fighting services either at home or overseas by June, 1941.

Prime Minister R. G. Menzies last week revealed the scope of the Australian war effort for the first time and announced that it is planned to dispatch an army corps overseas.

It was learned today that Australia's objective so far as overseas troops is concerned, is the maintenance on the war fronts of three modern "slimmed" divisions, of 16,000 men each, to be continually reinforced. This compares with five divisions of 20,000 men each in the first great war.

Toronto, Mar. 11 (CP).—A government advertisement appearing in Toronto newspapers today over the name of Mitchell F. Hepburn, Premier of Ontario, said the March of Time film "Canada at War" was banned in Ontario because it was being used for political propaganda elsewhere in Canada.

Mr. Hepburn announced a week ago that the Ontario Board of Censors had prohibited exhibition of the film for the duration of the Dominion election campaign.

The advertisement reproduced an advertisement published in Vancouver newspapers which linked the name of Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Federal Minister of Pensions, with the March of Time picture.

The large fawn and white collie dog, that kept a lengthy vigil outside the Belleville General Hospital for many weeks awaiting the return of its owner, who was believed to have been admitted to that institution, is in the custody of the city dog pound today. ANGLO-ITALIAN

Embargoed Exports.

Britain had embargoed exports of German coal to Italy. The Rome government lodged a strong protest, declaring Italy is dependent almost wholly upon foreign coal for her home industries.

Then on Saturday night came an announcement of settlement of the dispute, with Britain releasing 13 Italian ships loaded with German coal which she had seized and held at a contraband control point off southeast England, and Italy agreeing not to send any more ships to Rotterdam for German coal.

60 Per Cent. From Germany.

In 1939 Italy imported 11,000,000 tons of coal, of which 60 per cent. came from Germany. It is estimated that not more than 3,000,000 tons of this can be handled by rail across the German-Italian border.

Britain in demanding that shipment of German coal to Italy by sea must cease proposed that Italy buy British coal available for export, but was understood to have demanded heavy industrial goods in payment. Italy was reported to have insisted upon paying for any such coal mostly with agricultural products. There the talks ended and the diplomatic impasse followed.

Mr. Chamberlain said today that Italy's instructions for the sailing of coal ships from the Netherlands after March 1—the embargo deadline—despite the British announcement they would be stopped "was based on a misunderstanding".

"Recognizing this misunderstanding, his Majesty's government have agreed to release the ships which have been detained with their cargoes," said Mr. Chamberlain.

Boats Leave In Ballast.

"On the other hand the Italian government have undertaken on their side that the remainder of Italian coal ships now in port will leave in ballast and no further Italian cargo steamers will be sent to these ports to load coal."

The Times predicted in an editorial that the peaceful adjustment of the dispute over coal cargoes may lead Great Britain and Italy to "a reciprocally advantageous adjustment of trade exchanges."

"Other Italian ships sent to load German coal in Dutch ports will sail in ballast, and no more will be sent to those ports for that purpose.

"Meanwhile, the barbarities which have explained, justified and required control of German exports continue unabated wherever German bombers or submarines elude the vigilance of British defences.

Can Trade to Advantage.

"Only last week a German airplane bombed an Italian ship, setting her on fire and causing casualties among her crew, although there could be no possible doubt about her identity. And a week before, yet another Italian ship was bombed and machine-gunned.

"Negotiations for an Anglo-Italian trade agreement had reached an advanced stage when difficulties over the precise nature of the goods to be exchanged first arose. They should not prove to be insuperable. This country can supply much, including coal, which Italy has been obtaining elsewhere, and Italy can supply in exchange much that we can use.

"There is no lack of appreciation here for the economic necessities of Italy. The agreement over coal cargoes shows an accommodating spirit on both sides, and should lead to a general and reciprocally advantageous adjustment of trade exchanges, if this spirit prevails."

Brig.-Gen. A. E. Ross Retires From Campaign

Brigadier-General A. E. Ross, who was in command of the Canadian Medical Services during the last war, announced his withdrawal from the present Federal election campaign, a despatch from Kingston announced today.

General Ross had previously announced he would be an Independent candidate and would support any party which would prosecute the war with vigor. It has been expected he would have been nominated with Hon. Norman Rogers, Minister of National Defence the Liberal candidate; and the Hon. T. A. Kidd, National Conservative candidate for the riding of Kingston-Portsmouth.

Explaining why he withdrew, General Ross stated that he and some of his supporters did not like the Liberal party advertisements which appeared in local papers.

General Ross represented the City of Kingston in the Ontario Legislature and the Dominion House from 1911 until 1935 when he was defeated by the present Minister of National Defence.

CANADA NAMES COMMISSIONER

Government.

Need for Consultation

Typical of the changed attitude were the comments in the New Zealand Herald: "For the maintenance of empire unity it is obviously desirable that there should be machinery for effective liaison between governments," it said. "The High Commissioner system has been extended with this end in view and now its bilateral application is to be made multilateral as a result of Canada's inspiring determination to accept exceptional responsibilities in the conduct of the war.

"The war has emphasized the need for prompt consultation and co-operation between the units of empire, and Canada's decision has manifestly been made with that object in view. The other dominions must inevitably follow suit, with the result that there will be a framework for permanent empire conferences in every empire capital.

"Such a system has everything to commend it and for that reason, quite apart from personal considerations, a warm welcome will await Dr. W. A. Riddell. The choice of such a distinguished public servant as Dr. Riddell as first occupant of the office is equally indicative of the importance attached to it."

tacked, and the cargoes of all ships not moving under convoy, if they "comply with international law", will be checked before any action is taken against them.

The newspaper said orders to this effect already have been sent to all German submarine commanders. The German promise was said to have been given to T. Halvorsen, one of Norway's leading shipping men and former president of the Norwegian Shipowners' Association, when he visited Berlin recently to negotiate on behalf of the association.

Strained Relations Cause.

The opinion here is that Germany's move was prompted by the strained relations with Norway over recent numerous sinkings of Norwegian ships.

Germany previously had warned neutrals that she regarded as fair prey all ships touching at British ports, even though merely diverted by contraband control authorities. Neutrals also had been warned that all ships in convoy, and all vessels moving without lights or otherwise seeking to hide their movements, would be subject to attack.

Marmora Couple Mark 59th Wedding Anniversary

Marmora—Mr. and Mrs. George Wellman, both of a sturdy Rawdon stock, who have been residents of Marmora since 1909, quietly observed the 59th anniversary of their wedding on Saturday, March 9th. They were married at the Methodist Parsonage, Marmora by the Rev. Mr. Macaulay, who was the resident minister at that time. Mr. Wellman, who was eighty on September 13th, 1909 is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Wellman, of Rawdon Township. His father died when he was only three years old, but his mother lived to be an octogenarian for several years.

Mr. Wellman has lived a varied life. He has been a farmer and cattle buyer, and after eleven years proprietorship of the Bell View Hotel at what is now known as Bonarlaw, was proprietor of the Saint James Hotel, Marmora for about seven years. Mr. Wellman has been a public spirited man and is one of the widest known citizens of the village. He has been an active member of the Marmora Agricultural Society for many years, and he is also a past president of the Marmora Liberal-Conservative Association. He is still very active for a man of his years.

The name of Mrs. Wellman is also well known in domestic circles. Not only at the two hotels managed by the Wellmans, but she is one of four children of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Reid of Rawdon, who took up cheesemaking in their youth, there being eight other children in the family. Mr. Reid was a police officer in Ireland before coming to this country about two years after his marriage.

Mrs. Wellman made cheese at the Maple Leaf Factory on the 12th line of Rawdon, assisting her brother John, when she was only fifteen years of age. She also assisted her brother as he took over the Wiley Cheese Factory, later known as the Marmora Cheese Factory. Mrs. Wellman attained her 77th birthday on February 28th, and is still very active, still doing all her household duties.

A host of friends join in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Wellman many more happy anniversaries of their nuptials.

TONY

— BY ELIZABETH VERNON —

CHAPTER XXVII

The front door had shut noisily. Swiftly, Cheaveley strode through the little dark hall. The others followed slowly, uncertain of their steps. Now all three were in the sitting room. It was not a small room, but it seemed crowded by their presence, as if perhaps it were unused to strangers. Cheaveley closed the door.

Leaning against the chimneypiece, he looked down at the two women. When he spoke, his voice destroyed the pretense that this was an ordinary occasion. "You know my reasons for asking you here, Mrs. Querne?"

"No, no. I can't guess." Mrs. Querne still kept up bravely an atmosphere of triviality.

"Really? Hyacinth hasn't confided in you?" The words were dry. "Well, it's quite a simple matter. I want to marry your daughter."

Mrs. Querne's laugh tinkled, only mechanically. "But I can't speak for my daughter," she said.

"No. She must do that." He turned and looked down at Hyacinth.

She stared up at him as he stood there, his elbows on his hand, the other hand caressing his jaw. "Will you marry me, Hyacinth?" he asked now.

She shook her head, her mouth too dry for speech.

"I have compelling reasons, you know," he said gently. "Must I mention them?"

"Hyacinth!" Mrs. Querne's words came sharply. "Why not marry Major Cheaveley?"

"Do you call this a decent house —a decent home? Would you like me to enter it as a his bride?" Hyacinth's voice rose.

Cheaveley's voice, amused, fell like a dash of cold water. "But, Mrs. Querne, one of the reasons for this interview must now come out —Hyacinth has had the foolishness to commit a crime. She has taken jewels that were not hers—"

Mrs. Querne half rose from her chair.

"She has," he went on quietly, "sold those jewels. This, of course, may mean prison."

"Why do you tell this to mother?" Hyacinth's words were a harsh whisper. "She doesn't care. She could have given me the two thousand pounds months ago. Then we wouldn't be here now."

"Yes," Cheaveley said. "The situation is more dangerous than you may realize. Tony, I hear, has run away. If she has taken with her those jewels that she supposes to be real—if she has tried to sell them—then the police will begin to investigate.

Hyacinth glanced away. "And if I don't marry you?" she asked Cheaveley.

"Ah, there," he flicked his ash to the floor, "there you run into something solid. I am determined that if I can't have you, no one else shall. And I shall take those steps which will end for you in the Criminal Court."

"And if I—if I marry you?"

"Then I shall buy back the jewels. You see, I happen to know where they are."

"Mother! Mother!" Hyacinth seized her mother's slack hand. "Help me! Buy them back for me."

Mrs. Querne smiled down into her lap. "No, my dear." For a moment "I see no reason to do it. You have often been selfish towards me. You may not remember it. I do. I think that Major Cheaveley will make you an excellent husband. I always have thought so."

"I will marry you," Hyacinth said.

Three weeks. Not a long time. And one couldn't, Tony reflected, say that those weeks has passed slowly.

Jacky, kneeling on a chair, gazed down into the street. The sound of traffic, the noises of a great town to which she and Tony were so unused, beat up from below.

"I like London," Jacky said. "I like to see things happening all the time."

"Do you, darling? I wish I didn't have to leave you all day."

"Oh, that's all right. You see, I know you'll be here in the evenings, and so I'm quite happy."

Jacky came away from the window. Proudly she gazed around. "I do keep it all neat and clean, don't I?" she said. "Let's have supper now." Jacky seated herself at the little table. On it she had laid, tidily, the evening meal — a half loaf of bread, an end of cheese, a little butter, a pitcher containing milk, a paper bag of cherries.

"There was fourpence over, so I bought those." Anxiously, Jacky followed Tony's glance as it rested on that luxury.

Tony smiled, but her heart failed her a little. Fourpence, in this last month—ever since that day on which she had discovered that the jewels she tried to sell were worthless—had begun to seem a large sum.

She sat down opposite Jacky, poured out a cup of milk for her little sister, and cut a slice of bread from the loaf. Thickly she buttered it.

"You're giving me too much! What about your supper?" Jacky said. "It's not fair—"

Tony added cheese to the butter. "I couldn't eat anything," she said. "I had a big tea at the pub."

"But they don't give you tea there!"

Tony nodded. The lie came easily to her lips. "They're going to now. They're so pleased with my scrubbing—"

Jacky leaned forward to gaze at her sister. Ah, how pitifully large were her eyes. No one, Tony realized, could say that Jacky looked well—no, not even so well as she had looked a month ago. That thought came clearly. And yet in the luxury and loneliness of Oaken, would not Jacky have eaten her heart out? One hadn't brought her here just for selfishness.

"You don't look," said Jacky, "like someone who's had a big tea."

"You couldn't expect me to bulge, little goose."

"Tony, on your honor, have you had anything?"

For one split second Tony hesitated. "On your honor"—a solemn oath, never yet broken. She thought of the fifteen shillings a week which was all that she could earn, the eight shillings rent—

"Yes, on my honor, Jacky," she said gravely.

Tony, slowly drinking her milk, gazed out of the window, averting her eyes from the food on the table. One square meal a day, a cup of milk in the evening—surely one should be able to exist on that? But the midday deal provided for the "daily help" at the Cock and Bottle could, perhaps, hardly be called "square." A slice of bread and margarine and half a kipper, or a piece of bread and cheese, or a slice of fat bacon. That and a cup of strong tea didn't seem to carry one far. Somehow, when one spent the day in scrubbing, one's strength ebbed quickly. It left heavy fatigue, like a weight on one's chest—a weight that lay there all night preventing sleep.

Jacky had begun to eat with appetite. But now halfway through her slice of bread and butter she pushed the plate from her. "I don't want any more," she said. There was weariness in the words. "I though I did."

"Oh, Jacky, eat it up." Tony's voice was clear, cheerful. But her heart felt as if it contracted with fear.

Jacky shook her head.

"No bread and butter, no cherries," Tony warned.

"I don't mind," Jacky smiled. "I don't want anything, not even cherries."

"Darling, aren't you feeling well?" The words, weighted with fear, came with difficulty.

"Oh, yes. Only I'd just like to lie down and be quiet, and talk to you."

"Tell me one thing—" Tony took Jacky's hand—"is there anything you would like to eat if only I could get it for you?"

"Oh, well, I suppose if I was at Oaken," Jacky replied with the detachedness of childhood, "I might have a peach."

"And you would be there, eating peaches and cream and getting fatter if I hadn't brought you here." Tony tried to smile.

Jacky turned on her a grave glance. "No, Tony, I wouldn't be at Oaken. I would have run away too, somewhere. I couldn't bear the loneliness again—"

"You shall never have to. I promise that." Tony's voice was almost stern.

MR. WELLES' MISSION NEARS END

Mr. Sumner Welles, Under - Secretary of State, has heard a great deal in Europe of the present situation, to gather facts on which he was sent by President Roosevelt to bring back a report for the ears of Mr. Roosevelt and Secretary Cordell Hull alone. He has interviewed leaders in neutral Italy, he has been in Berlin, where he met Hitler and others of the Nazi leaders, he has talked with French public men and now he is nearing the close of his mission as he receives the information he seeks from the British leaders.

Who would not like to know what he has been told but the information is to be kept secret? The mission on which he was sent was not associated with any peace move or proposal. What is the information he has secured in France and will secure in Britain the world has a fairly good chance at knowing because Allied aims are not hidden but what he carried away in his notes about the situation as he saw and heard it explained in Berlin is something everyone would like to know, even the Germans themselves, who know less than the people of Allied and neutral countries of German trends.

From the mass of data which he has received there is no doubt that Mr. Roosevelt will have a more intimate view than was otherwise possible for him to have without these secret revelations.

From the mass of the information many things will stand out. One is the Allied determination to carry war on to victory however long it may take. Every public expression of British and French opinion has coincided in the one view—that there can be no peace that would be safe and lasting until Hitler's rule is ended forever, so that never again shall the world have to go through the horrors of such a war. The past has proven that trust in Hitler's promises is in vain and further trust in them would be but courting disaster for the Allies and the world.

BRITISH EXPERTS MORE THAN MATCH FOR ENEMY'S

British experts have taken the sting out of German science as applied to destruction of ships. The new British electric "girdle" strung around the side of ships makes the vessels non-magnetic and thus destroys the effectiveness of the German magnetic mine. The Admiralty is going to place the secret equipment on all British ships.

The Nazi Germans seemed to have a very effective device in the magnetic mine. The magnetic mine, if it could not be countered, might have wrought great havoc, though ingenuity would no doubt have overcome many of its effects. But the Germans are after British control of the seas—that agency which is one of the main points in British defence and an effective secret device such as the magnetic mine, if it could have been kept secret, would have been a grave menace.

But no sooner do the British face the magnetic mine, than they get one, experts proceed to take it apart at the imminent risk of being blown to pieces but they are so successful that they not only do not explode the mine but the secrets are laid bare—the secrets that the Nazis had hoped to help them on their way to world power.

Now an electric girdle does the trick, neutralizes the magnetic field of the ship and leaves the magnetic mine effectless.

British science is practical, hard-headed and reliable. British workmanship is unsurpassed. British brains are more than a match for the Teuton in invention.

The "Queen Elizabeth" brought the electric girdle as part of her protection against magnetic mines in her maiden voyage. That was another feature of her world-famous trip.

CHURCHILL SMILES AND COMMENTS

Winston Churchill knows how to smile and he knows how to use his native English tongue.

Readers have seen the picture of the First Lord of the Admiralty smiling as he greeted the heroic seamen who brought about the wrecking of the plans of Hitler and Admiral Raeder as far as the Graf Spee was concerned. He was then among heroes. The other day he had the glad news of the successful crossing of the liner "Queen Elizabeth," the greatest ship built in all the history of the world, from Clyde to New York without a single Hun knowing of it or being able to do anything to prevent the voyage. It was good news and Mr. Churchill must have smiled at this fresh proof of how free Britain has kept the seas from the pest of the Huns.

It was a dramatic moment as his words on that crossing were recorded, "Very good work indeed! Splendid!"

There spoke the great master of English, who has described the Nazis as they are in powerful words and then when he came to the good news he spoke those crisp words, which are better than a whole sentence or a paragraph.

He is the man who ought to know if the work was "very good." His comment is indicative of a man of immense reserve and great energy. Short snappy words—they tell a great deal. The many millions who speak English could not have used more fitting words, for in times of great emotion, men do not speak in long paragraphs but with staccato words and phrases.

OBSERVERS WARN

Opinion is more and more being expressed that the war between Germany and the Allies will be long. One speaker the other night ventured the view that it would last three or four years and another said the wishful thinking of some that the war might soon be ended by a peace and that the enemy might collapse could do much to hinder the effort of the Allies to bring a victory which will win the gratitude of the world.

The war has lasted over six months but the opposing land forces have largely rested in their mighty fortresses and fortifications, though on sea Great Britain has been called to face the menace of submarines and mines and has met them successfully, though there have been losses of some measure through the violation of the law of nations by the enemy.

The length of the war cannot be predicted. That rests on many factors. But the Allies are planning on the basis of a more or less long war for victory.

Noise Damages Nervous System and Lessens Hearing Ability

Now that flying has become such a part of every-day business life, it is bringing a health problem that must be overcome. I refer to the ill effects on the hearing made by the noise of the engines.

Noise is not just a nuisance, noise definitely harms not only the hearing but the whole nervous system.

I have had but one airplane flight and that was under favorable circumstances—an air trip from London to Paris at midday in bright sunshine. Yet until the noise of the engines becomes less I am not expecting to take another air trip, unless an emergency arises. For days afterwards I could hear the roar of the airplane engines.

That the noise of airplane engines definitely injures the hearing is reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association by some British investigators, Dr. E. D. Daziel Dickson, A. W. G. Ewing, and T. S, Littler, who state that noise produced by certain types of multi-engined aircraft has been measured and found to reach loudness levels which are injurious to human ears. Tests carried out by the Royal Air Force even after a few hundred hours of flying without helmets in enclosed cockpits showed a persistent loss of hearing for high tones. The tests were made by the usual methods—voice, tuning fork—and also by the hearing measuring machine, the audiometer. The flyers themselves were not aware that some of their hearing ability had been lost.

"Noise in connection with flying arises from three sources, the engine exhaust, the propellor, and the wind".

Tests were made to find the amount of protection of hearing provided by the standard pattern of flying helmet and other ear protector and also what protection can be afforded by simple ways of blocking the ear or packing the canal leading to the outer side of ear drum. They found that packing the ear with absorbent cotton smeared with vaseline was a quick, safe, and efficient method.

Why does noise affect more than the hearing and bring tiredness of mind and body?

Hearing was given primitive man to enable him to hear noise so that he could tighten his nerves and muscles and be ready for fight or flight. Constant or loud noise keeps him greatly tensed, hence the damage to the nervous system.

Convoys Prove Their Strength

London.—The news which was made public by the admiralty recently that one of His Majesty's destroyers—living up to the name by which that class of warship is known — had that day sunk two U-boats which were attacking the convoy she was escorting is one more proof of the truth that many writers on the art of war have ever deduced from their study of history—that every new weapon sooner or later provokes the evolution of its own antidote. Submarines were a new weapon in 1914, for, though they had then been in commission in more than one navy for over a decade, they had yet to prove their powers in actual war. Those powers proved disappointingly small against men-of-war; but when the Germans introduced at sea the method of warfare which seems to have an overwhelming attraction for the Teutonic nature—that of ruthless and unheralded attack on the defenceless — the U-boat seemed to have come into its own—and indeed very nearly won the war for Germany.

The peculiar strength of the U-boat lay in two qualities — its power of instant concealment at will, and its immunity from damage once it had dived below the depth at which a surface ship could ram it. The latter immunity vanished with the development of the depth charge and its supply to the submarine adversaries in adequate quantity; but up to the close of the last war the power of concealment still remained, though of course even the submarine of necessity reveals its presence at the moment of actually making an attack. Since at that moment it was open to counter-attack which had a fair chance of success, for this country the solution of the problem with which it was faced at sea lay in the historic expedient of the convoy system, which placed the defenders in the one place where they could be sure of making contact with the stealthy antagonist — alongside the latter's quarry. But there was still no method of locating the U-boat when submerged; and, though the convoy system provided adequate protection for British sea communications, many a U-boat, though driven off its quarry by instant counter-attack, escaped destruction and lived to perpetrate more murder on the seas. To-day, thanks to the ingenuity of the navy's experts who devised the Asdic, and the navy's tireless exercise in the use of that remarkable device, the U-boat's immunity from location when submerged is gone too. Once in touch with a U-boat, British destroyers need no sight of it to maintain contact.

It is of interest to note that history is in process of repeating itself in the case of the latest weapon "Frightfulness" at sea has become such an unhealthy pursuit for U-boats, when ships in convoy are made the object of attack, that their place is being taken by aircraft; yet aircraft have had to adopt the method of the submarine. In every report of air attacks on shipping, the statemen has been made, if the raider has not been destroyed, that he has availed himself of the concealment afforded by clouds to make his escape. Such successes as the Heinkels have achieved have been when they have attacked ships, chiefly neutral, sailing unescorted and thus defenceless. The moral would seem to be obvious. The convoy system, adapted to the circumstances of today, provides as effective an antidote to the sea-murderer of to-day as it did in 1917-18. Neutral seafarers would be well advised to note that conclusion. — London Times.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Diplomats scurried between European capitals during the weekend in an effort to straighten out the tangle of the Russo-Finnish war. Apart from the two parties directly involved, the Scandinavian neutral states are interested because the war is at their doors, it makes their people restless and they may be dragged in at anytime.

Nazi Germany is interested because the Reich needs Russia's undivided attention in the speeding up of the production and delivery of vital supplies to German industry and the German people.

Great Britain and France are interested because the principle for which they are fighting the larger war against Germany is at stake in the Russo-Finnish conflict. Russia is guilty of the worst kind of unprovoked aggression and if Russia gets away with spoils in the Finnish fight it will be an encouragement to further aggression elsewhere.

Simultaneously with the revelation that peace negotiations of some sort were under way between Russia and Finland and that Germany and Sweden were interested parties, the extent of the assistance already given by the Allies to the Finns was revealed. They have sent 400 aircraft, nearly 1,000 guns and great numbers of small arms, shells, cartridges and bombs.

At the same time talk of despatching an expeditionary force to aid the Finns was revived. Possibly the fear of such a force is one of the main reasons why Germany and Sweden are busying themselves to bring about a settlement and why Russia, while the Red army still is advancing, is willing to talk peace with the Finnish government.

The approach of spring will not only slow up or halt the mechanized Red army but will make practicable the despatch of a French force to Finland. The sending of troops from the comparatively mild climate of France and England into Finland in winter without giving them ample time to acclimatize themselves before going into action would be dangerous. When warm weather comes it will be a different story.

REVENUE MINISTER

The Prime Minister gave British aircraft purchasing agents the impression in 1938, Dr. Manion continued, that "Canada might be neutral if there was a war and, if it was neutral, their orders might not be filled if a war actually took place."

At Ottawa Transport Minister Howe said that Conservative Leader Manion's promise to abolish radio licence fees "can be nothing more than an attempt to bribe Canadian people with their own money."

In a 30-minute address over an Ontario network, Mr. Howe, who has jurisdiction over radio broadcasting, said victory at the polls for Dr. Manion would mean that "national radio as we now have it is likely to disappear."

Abolition of the licence fee of $2.50 a year for each receiving set would withdraw nearly $3,000,000 of the $3,500,000 it costs annually to carry on the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, the Minister said.

If the licence fee was dropped this money would have to come from advertisers and would be lost to newspapers and magazines, or it would have to be raised by taxation. If radio were turned over to commercial interests the 50,000 watt stations on the Prairies and in the Maritime Provinces would be abandoned, since they would not be profitable.

Specifically Named

Charging the government's political opponents with engaging a campaign of "vilification and abuse," Mr. Howe specifically named Premier Hepburn of Ontario, Lt.-Col. George Drew, Ontario Conservative Leader, Dr. Manion and a "former Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario."

Mr. Howe denied there was any censorship of political broadcasts beyond the necessary restrictions laid down in the Defence of Canada regulations. "I want to make it clear that criticism of the government is not an offence under the regulations," he added.

The Minister described the ban of the March of Time film "Canada at War" as "censorship in a new form exercised by the Premier of Ontario."

Those responsible for keeping this film off Ontario screens until after the election were "provincial leaders whose charge of lack of war effort precipitated the election," the Minister said.

Criticized New Regulations

Dr. J. M. Robb, National Conservative organizer, in a statement issued at Ottawa criticized the new regulation relating to soldiers on leave voting in the general election and charged that "the government wants to discourage the soldiers from voting, because they know too much about its restricted and bungled war efforts."

The new regulation announced last Friday by the chief electoral officer, Jules Castonguay, that soldiers on leave during the active service vote may cast their ballots at polling stations of local units where they happen to be "still leaves it difficult for soldiers to vote," Dr. Robb said.

It was indicated when the new regulation was announced that it was made necessary by granting of leaves for two weeks to those who had served with the forces for more than six months. Dr. Robb termed the leaves "the government's special election—time furlough order."

"No doubt the soldiers have been looking forward to this furlough with pay for some time and it is most unfortunate that this furlough should coincide with the period of voting. (Members of the Active Service Force in Canada may vote from March 16 to March 23, exclusive of Sunday and Good Friday).

"The government must have known when the furlough was granted that it would make it difficult for the soldiers to vote. There is no escape from the conclusion that the government wants to discourage the soldiers from voting, because they know too much about its restricted and bungled war efforts and because they know too much about lack of uniforms and lack of army equipment and other conditions of incompetency and inefficiency and half heartedness in the government's prosecution of the war."

Bloc Important Factor

The Quebec "Liberal bloc" has been one of the important factors in fostering national unity in Canada, Works Minister Cardin said at Montreal.

Mr. Cardin said the "solid" Liberal representation of Quebec province in the House of Commons is the "pride of the people of Quebec" and the instrument by which the province "extends a friendly hand to the rest of Canada."

Mr. Cardin said the Liberal party had been attacked by Conservative leader Manion for seeking to maintain the "bloc." The Conservative leader had accused the Liberal party of trying to "isolate" Quebec.

"Quebec province never was less isolated than at present," the minister contended. "Quebec never was better understood than at present.

"The Liberal bloc has never dishonored you. Mr. Manion thinks the bloc is wrong. It seems to show that all the people of the province are of the same mind."

Might Have Been Prevented

War might have been prevented if the Canadian government had declared it would support Britain at the time of the Munich crisis, Lt.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, said at New Westminster.

Advising Canadians not to be too "modest" about the strength of the Dominion, Col. Drew said Australia and New Zealand told Prime Minister Chamberlain at that time they would stand by Britain.

"If this country were properly organized, we would have far greater strength in peace or war, because of our natural resources, than any other 11,000,000 people in the world," he added.

He criticized Canada's preparedness for war and the relationship between the present Dominion government and Great Britain. He contended that Canada is not equipped to defend itself "against any country in the world."

Government Charged With "Cunning"

The Dominion government has resorted to "low cunning" in issuing war contracts, R. L. Maitland, K.C., British Columbia Conservative leader, charged at North Bay.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King and his Liberal administration have been cunning in an attempt to bribe the electorate with war contracts, Mr. Maitland said. The government was termed "lazy, patronage-loving and inept" and incapable of properly prosecuting Canada's war effort or conducting national affairs in peacetime.

"The low cunning" of the Dominion government was illustrated further when a bribe was offered to Premier Mitchell Hepburn to "shut him up," Mr. Maitland said.

"Nothing has ever been invented to shut up Mitch. But Mackenzie King thought perhaps that if he gave Mr. Hepburn the right to name Senators and Judges from Ontario the fire from Queen's Park might not be so warm. Mr. King didn't understand Mr. Hepburn any better than he understands anything else."

McLarty Answers Manion

Answering the criticism by Conservative leader Manion that he was "dumb" when parliament was dissolved on Jan. 25, Labor Minister McLarty said at Sault Ste. Marie that "if I was dumb on that occasion when parliament was in session but three hours, when there were but three speakers, then so also were the other 145 members present at that session.

"If I was dumb it was because Doctor Manion spoke so much as to preclude anyone else talking at that time. If I was dumb on Jan. 25 I was not more dumb than Dr. Manion on Oct. 25 when Duplessis was suggesting that Canada limit its participation in the war."

The Minister of Labor said that Dr. Manion would be well advised to refrain from personal attacks at this time that could only be construed as detremental to Canada, to Britain and France, her Allies in the present war, and as both "an aid and comfort to the enemy."

Mr. McLarty said of Col. George Drew, the Ontario Conservative leader, that the nearer the election approached the further away Col. Drew got historically.

Should be More Accurate

He said Col. Drew had compared the adjournment of the special session to Cromwell's dissolution of the "Long Parliament," and suggested that if Col. Drew was not more accurate in his public utterances than he was in his history he would have little to go on. There was no comparison, the special session having sat a few hours while the "Long Parliament" had been in session for 12 years.

Charges by Premier Hepburn of Ontario that a "violent disturbance" had occurred Feb. 10 at the Royal Canadian Air Force Training centre near St. Thomas, Ont., were broadcast by the Germans a few hours later, Mines Minister Crerar said at Dauphin, Man.

Mr. Crerar said that the Nazis broadcast Mr. Hepburn's charges as a sign that the Canadian people are not behind the government.

If Prime Mackenzie King's administration was defeated at the polls, the enemy would herald the government's downfall as indicating that the people of Canada are not behind the war effort made to date.

Require Friendly Leader Claim

Canada requires a Prime Minister friendly with the United States for efficient prosecution of the Dominion's war effort, Agriculture Minister Gardiner said at Vancouver.

Mr. Gardiner quoted Lt.-Col. George Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, as charging Prime Minister Mackenzie King had shown too much friendship for the United States — friendship which might ultimately lead to absorption of Canada in that nation.

"With Great Britain at war, with Canada at war, can you imagine the Canadian people choosing a war leader who is not friendly to the United States?" Mr. Gardiner asked.

"We require a friendly leader now, more than any other time in our history."

J. S. Woodsworth, national leader of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, told a Vancouver audience he is opposed to conscription and to the war, which he said was brought about by "the spirit of the Versailles Treaty."

Mr. Woodsworth said his party had opposed in the House of Commons, the sending of Canadian troops overseas. The C.C.F. party had sanctioned only economic aid by Canada in the war.

But now Canada is in the war, she must deal with war conditions. One of the most important of these was adequate provision for troops returning from the front.

AUSTRALIA WILL HAVE 222,000 MEN

1,200 Technical Troops

In addition, it is proposed to raise a force of 1,200 technical troops such as railway troops to serve overseas, while an air squadron will also be maintained at the front and a flying boat squadron will be maintained in England.

These army plans are all in addition to Australia's responsibilities under naval arrangements and the empire air training scheme. The naval task of the Australian commonwealth now is much greater than in the first great war.

The total of 222,000 men under arms will be composed of 90,000 in the Australian infantry force, 73,000 in the home defence force, 34,000 men for the local and empire air training scheme, 9,000 in the permanent militia and 11,600 in the naval personnel.

Effort to Cost $630,000,000

This effort is estimated to cost $630,000,000 in the first two years of the war, compared with an expenditure of about $300,000,000 in the first two years of the last war.

The magnitude of Australia's war effort may have lost some of its impressiveness overseas because up to now no picture has been gained of the effort in its entirety, and official announcements have been restricted to small parts of the whole. The government's announcements were purposely made in piece-meal form because of the earlier fears of possible hostile action by Japan.

It is only since it has been recognized that the Japanese navy is unlikely to help the Germans that Australia's military effort overseas could be fully stated. Even so, large forces are being maintained locally against the remote possibility of an attack on Australia, in which regard the situation here is totally different from that of Canada.

Started Effort Before War

Australia began her army effort before the war started, expanding the regular militia from 30,000 to 78,000. The stipulation of a minimum of six months' training means a compulsory training system with the calling up of men between 20 and 22, but it is confidently expected that a partially-trained militia will supply volunteers for overseas service.

One old-time division of 20,000 men has already enlisted for overseas service. Part of this force is now in Palestine and the remainder is almost ready to join them.

Now it is proposed to enlist another 70,000 men by June, 1941. Whether this will end the army's task in Australia depends of course on the length of the war.

15 Vessels in Fleet

So far as naval responsibility is concerned Australia's fleet now consists of 15 vessels, including five modern cruisers, and there are also crews ready to man an additional cruiser and several smaller ships besides several armed merchantmen.

Australia's munitions effort has also been enormously increased over that of the last war. The commonwealth is already turning out a larger quantity of munitions than Canada, according to official sources here. Britain has ordered $10,500,000 worth of munitions from Australia and other shipments are going to New Zealand, India and South Africa.

Planes are already arriving from the United States and about 1,200 more are coming from Britain for the commonwealth's share in the empire air traning plan. Enlistment and training of air recruits has begun but progress has been somewhat slow to date since the majority of airfields needed are not yet ready.

One-Quarter to Come to Canada

Australia's total obligation under the empire air plan is estimated at 26,500 airmen plus about 50,000 ground staff. The proportion of the ground staff that will be sent overseas is still unknown, but two-ninths—or slightly under a quarter—of the airmen will receive advanced training in Canada and the first batch will soon be in the sister dominion for this final training.

The biggest difference between Australia's war effort in the present conflict and in the first great war is the increased industrialization that has taken place. This has enabled Australia to take over much munition and aircraft construction work that was formerly concentrated in Britain.

The maintenance in camp of large drafts of militia for the increased permanent forces however reduces the available labor for production of foodstuffs that are sent to Britain yearly during the war.

Legion Campaign at Marmora Receives Splendid Support

Marmora—Members of Marmora Branch Canadian Legion are much pleased with the support they have received in connection with the campaign to raise $500,000 to enable the Veterans Association to carry on their work on behalf of soldiers who have enlisted in the Canadian Active Service Forces. The allotment for Marmora, Deloro and Cordova was $250.00. Havelock Branch of the Legion canvassed Cordova but the money all goes to the same fund. Marmora and Deloro contributed over $300.00. Any further donations will be appreciated as all the money raised will be used in the splendid work being undertaken by the veterans.

Last Sunday night the roofs of the garages belonging to Messrs. G. B. Airhart and H. E. Vansickle caved in due to the weight of the wet snow which fell that day.

Miss Dora Lawrence Reg. N., left Wednesday for Parry Sound where she will be in charge of a patient.

Mr. W. J. Cottrell who has been very ill in Nicholls' Hospital, Peterborough, appears to be gradually improving these last few days. His friends hope he will soon be able to return home.

Messrs. Ed. Lummiss and Harry Black spent the week end in Toronto.

Group I of St. Paul's Church held a very successful euchre party at the home of Mrs. George Kerr on Tuesday evening.

Prizes were won by Mrs. R. Bonter, Mr. Henderson and Miss Keith Cronkwright. Lunch was served by the members of the circle.

Wrong Heading

In news from Marmora on Saturday, March 2nd, an incorrect heading appeared over an article concerning a presentation to Mr. Tom Foley. The heading referred to "Mr. and Mrs. Tom Foley" which was a regrettable error. The young man in question is not married.

RIBBENTROP VISITS POPE PIUS TODAY

Rumors Say Hitler Seeks Revision German Concordant With Vatican

Further political conversations with Premier Mussolini were to follow later in the day.

The German diplomat arrived at the Vatican City at 10:50 a.m. (4:45 a.m. EST) and a few minutes later he was ushered into the presence of the Pontiff for a private audience.

Only strong indication as a result of von Ribbentrop's first meeting with Premier Mussolini yesterday was that the Fascist Government intends to remain non-belligerent, at least until there is some upset in Europe's military stalemate.

Liberal credence was given in foreign circles to rumors that Hitler seeks revision of the German Concordat with the Vatican.

(The Concordat was ratified Sept. 10, 1933, before the German expansion, and prescribed the separate fields of the church and government in Germany. Church-State friction has led to belief on several occasions that relations between Germany and the Vatican might be severed.

(Newly-acquired German territory, furthermore, is in an uncertain status. The Concordat between the Vatican and independent Austria, for instance, became void after Germany's annexation of Austria in March, 1938, and the German-Vatican Concordat was never extended there.)

Aside from serving as a friendly gesture which might impress Germany's 30,000,000 Catholics, von Ribbentrop's visit to the Pope was expected to settle the question whether a Papal investigator would be allowed to look into church conditions in German-occupied Poland, where mistreatment of Catholics has been reported.

Since nothing was known of the nature of Von Ribbentrop's talk with Mussolini, foreign reports that they concerned themselves with a guaranteee of Finland's frontiers if Helsinki accepted Russian peace terms lacked confirmation.

But authoirtative fascists said that if a proposal for the joint guarantee were made, it was out of the question for Italy to become a guarantor because of geographical difficulties.

Mr. & Mrs. Hydro User..
see how the cost of Electrical Living has gone DOWN these 25 Years

	1914	1919	1924	1929	1934	1939
Average family's monthly consumption of Hydro power in Kilowatt-Hours:	21.0	35.2	80.2	122.5	143.3	165.0
Average cost (in pennies) per Kilowatt-Hour:	5.08 cents	2.82 cents	1.89 cents	1.67 cents	1.51 cents	1.28 cents

. . . thus, the average Ontario family today uses 7½ times as much electricity as the average family of 1914. But due to the steady reduction in Hydro cost, the average domestic Hydro bill has increased over this period NOT 7½ times—but only from $1.06 to $2.12.

Today 7½ Times More Electricity for Only Twice the Cost!

MR. AND MRS. AVERAGE HYDRO USER: Through the past quarter-century, your cost for Hydro service has become lower and lower.* While the cost of almost everything else has gone up, the cost of Hydro power has come DOWN. Today, Hydro service is your BIGGEST BARGAIN!

The chart above tells you the story. Just a glance will show you that as the use of Hydro power has increased, the cost has steadily decreased. Compare what your money buys today with what it bought 25 years ago—and you'll quickly see that today's family enjoys more than 7½ times as much electrical service for only twice the 1914 cost.

So, today, due to the efforts of The Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario—and your own Municipal Hydro System—it costs you less money to live better. Remember, Hydro is your public utility service . . . a service that costs only pennies a day to use and enjoy to the full!

Hydro BRINGS YOU BETTER LIVING —and lowers Living Costs!

What Do Your Shoulders Say?

BONITA GRANVILLE. . . . . has trim, beautiful shoulders.

By HELEN FOLLETT

HAIR, complexion and fingernails get plenty of attention. Home work is done on them, and they get professional care often. The average girl pays heed to her figure; she weeps if hips take on a spread or the armlets are skinny, worries over fatted calves or an overdeveloped upper story. But one item she is likely to overlook, and that is the pair of shoulders she's carting round with her.

The body speaks with the shoulders. Square them and you look fighty. Let them droop and you look sad. Shrug 'em and you are supercilious and haughty. Lazy girls too inert to keep their back bones strong and steady, get plump shoulders that make them appear chunky.

If, because of lack of exercise, the shoulders have become muscle-bound, do this for five minutes night and morning—

Stand erect, tummy flat, chest expanded, hands at the side. With wrists free and fingers separated, bring the hands above the head, slapping the backs together. Send them out at the sides with a good old muscle pull and bring them down at the sides to first position. It is a sort of flying movement. Use the arms as if they were wings; make a full, wide sweep of each movement.

After ten swings, pause, take three long deep breaths. Way down to the soles of your shoes. Then at it again.

Liver spots and moth patches are enough to drive one crazy. Fortunately, they come late in life when a woman has learned to bear burdens with courage and fortitude. If that's any help.

They are caused by changes in the skin pigment; just why these changes take place nobody knows. The best means of getting after them is to use a proprietary bleach. We cannot give formulas for such preparations because they cannot very well be compounded by the amateur cosmetic mixer.

Exposure to wind and strong sunlight makes these blemishes more pronounced, so follow a policy of protection.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Her Child or Her Fiance—Which?

Dear Miss Fairfax,

When I first knew George and we went around and had good times, dining and dancing together, I did not think it necessary to tell him all about my past life. He knew I had been divorced, but I didn't say anything about my little daughter, aged seven, who was living with my mother. Her father pays $5.00 a week for her support. In the meantime, my mother died and Clarice my little girl, is now living with me.

My fiance objects to her sharing our future home and says that with her father's allowance she can be placed in an excellent school. In fact he has made an issue of this and says if Clarice lives with us the engagement must be broken, as he will not tolerate another man's child under our roof. I'm worried to death about the whole matter and don't know what to do.

Miserable

It seems to me it wouldn't take you long to decide to send away such a lover as the one you describe. A man who makes no allowance for the maternal instinct will make few allowances for anything else in life. And no woman is really happy with a jealous man.

Even if you decide to put your little daughter in school, I hope you'll marry a man of another type.

His Mother Never liked Her

Dear Miss Fairfax,

I'm a girl of 21 years, and have been going steady for four years with a boy 24 years old. A few months ago he began to get moody and now says we are not getting on well enough to be serious, and he says he is doubtful if I am the right girl. I don't drink or smoke, and have been true to him.

Another girl is trying to get him, and she is well aware of the fact that we've been going together all these years. However, I have broken up with him and am miserable over the whole thing. I feel that if he is still interested he will come back. He is inclined to be selfish and says it isn't another girl, but I wonder. His mother never liked me, but why, I don't know, because I never see her, and I know I've never done anything to be ashamed of, and have really kept him straight.

Bette

It seems to me your problem with this young man comes under the heading of a blessing in disguise. You tell me he is moody, that his mother never liked you, and he's doubtful whether you're the right girl. All of this looks to me as if he were working up a case against you.

Well, my dear, what's the matter with showing him you're the right girl for someone else? When a potential mother-in-law begins acting up before there has even been a marriage, it's certainly time for a girl to watch her step.

"Oh, I Could Be Happy With Either"

Dear Miss Fairfax

I am a boy of 20 years just starting to make my way in the world. I recently came here from another state; have a fairly good job and a chance to get ahead. Back home I have a girl friend, and we have always thought the world of each other. We went together five or six months and never tired of one another. When we parted, we swore we would be true.

Now I've met another girl, and we care for each other. I'm lonesome when I'm not with her. But when I receive a letter from my back-home girl, I'm also happy. I really don't know which one I love most. Both are lovely girls, either of whom I would be proud to marry. Please let me know what you think I should do.

Worried and Lonesome

You're only 20, which is pretty young for a man to make as vital a decision concerning his future happiness as marriage. The fact you're partly in love with both of these girls is proof how unwise it would be to marry either until your affections have become more set. I wouldn't be at all surprised to get a letter from you in a couple of months saying you had decided to marry girl-on-the-spot, for there is no force under the heavens like propinquity, or "thereness", as someone has definited it, for convincing a person he or she is really in love.

Beautifying Healthy

By HELEN FOLLETT

THE GRAND thing about beautifying as it goes on these days is that it makes a woman healthier, stronger, happier, in better spirits. She knows that if she gives way to tears because the papa doesn't come home to dinner, she will look like a wreck, and that's no fun. If she doesn't keep to wise eating habits, her figure isn't going to retain the youthful lines, so she looks after the grocery intake.

The daily bath, necessary for the normal functioning of the skin, is a part of the beauty routine. She lubricates her complexion faithfully because that keeps the skin smooth, acts favorably upon the capillaries that pump up good coloring.

Posture is dinned into her ears and, if she has any sense at all, she practices it, not only because she will wear her clothes with flair, but because it tends to strengthen muscles, helps her attain grace and agility.

Her regular appointments for shampoo, finger wave and manicure are stern duties not to be neglected. Piles of money are dumped into the cash registers of beauty shops, but in return a lot of loveliness and self-respect walks out after making payments. We must keep to a high standard. Fall out of line and it will be difficult to get in step again.

If the lady who is still addicted to spiked heels could get a glimpse of the rear of herself when she walks, she'd come down to earth, be content with the boulevard style, which is smarter and better for her little footies.

Because of the small base of the spiked pattern, there is not a firm foothold; the ankle wobbles from side to side in a horrid fashion. That condition tends to make ankles large and ungainly. It strains the muscles of the legs. Hips sway, and that's terrible. Let the wearer of spiked heels go on wearing them for years and she'll develop the dowager's waddle. It will serve her right.

DOLORES DEL RIO. . . .realizes the value of constant beauty care.

"Kin-Mother" is Another Mother-in-Law Joke

"Kin-mother" — I imagine that most of the mothers-in-law in the country are smiling wryly at this fancy name that was adopted for them by the 600 members of the Mother-in-low Association! At the second annual meeting of the Mother-in-law Association! At the were several hundred entries of names to take the place of mother-in-law. Some of the names were maudlin! Could you, for example, imagine your mother-in-law's expression if you attempted to call her "Motherette" or "Mother-link"? Some of the names were downright terrible—"Blitzkrieg Mother" will give you the idea. All of them gave me the impression of being apologetic, and I don't except "kin-mother".

Even Mr. Funk one of the judges and a renowned authority on words, admitted after the adoption of the word "kin-mother", that "these synthetic words seldom catch on".

And Mrs. L. O. Thompson of Amarillo, Texas, first president of the National Mother-in-law Club, made up her mind that she would take definite issue with the "kin-mother" absurdity. This word was not going to "catch on" with her, as she proved by carrying a sign reading—Mother-in-law is good enough for us!

The first annual meeting of the Mother-in-law Association, held last year, was, I think, far more constructive in its crusading for "improved mother-in-law conditions". A mother-in-law was called a mother-in-law, and the association didn't dodge the issue of relationship between mother-in-law, daughters-in-law, and sons-in-law.

You may remember that, at that meeting, prizes were given for the two best essays on "Five most important rules for being a successful mother-in-law". The first prize was awarded to Mrs. Mitchell's five wise rules—"Do not meddle, show preference, argue, criticize, or lose your temper".

The second prize was given to Mrs. Schlesinger's advice, "Be a pal, a good sport, do not manage, do not criticize, and . . . keep smiling".

I should think the word "kin-mother" would keep them laughing!

Marrying Again

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I was married eighteen years and my husband died four years ago. I am contemplating marrying again and I would very much like to still wear my old wedding ring as it has meant so much to me.

Would it be all right for me to continue wearing my first wedding ring and also wear my new wedding ring? If so on what hand should each be worn?

Reader,

Your first consideration about this should, of course, be the feelings of your fiance. The custom is, for obvious reasons, that a woman never wears her first wedding ring after the second marriage has been performed. As soon as she becomes engaged, she takes off her first engagement ring and her first wedding ring. She should do this in fairness to her second husband.

1939 brought about changes in conditions which necessitated great increases in the amount of work accomplished by the Chapter.

The annual scholarship was presented to a third year student in the Collegiate. Donations were made to the Girl Guides, the Self-Sacrifice Fund, and the Endowment Fund.

2 dozen diapers were given to the V.O.N. A wreath was placed on the cenotaph on November 11th.

Further funds were advanced for the room in the new wing of the hospital. Several families were supplied with Christmas baskets and otherwise looked after during the winter months. A knitting machine was purchased by the chapter.

In April a tea was held and the ticket was drawn for the electric mixer on which the members had sold tickets.

A bridge and tea in September supplied funds for clothing and blankets, sent to children evacuated from English cities.

A bazaar and bridge was held in December and was very successful. In February a pot luck luncheon was well attended.

The War Convener's Report shows that 51 pairs of socks were presented to the Belleville men in the H. and P.E. Regiment, as were also 96 packages of cigarettes.

Four pairs socks and 2 sweaters were given to the guards on picket duty at the Armouries.

Five pairs socks, 1 pair wristlets and 2 sweaters were given to a Finnish man returning to aid his country.

Lieut. Jack Morgan and Lieut. Max Porritt were each presented with two pair socks and one sweater.

Donations to the Finnish Relief included 41 pairs socks, 20 pairs wristlets, 19 sweaters, 7 scarves and balaclava helmets.

Besides this gift, the members have been sewing and knitting, using materials supplied by the Red Cross. The articles that have been returned to the Red Cross include 22 sweaters, 27 pairs socks, 5 pairs wristlets, 37 T binders and 5 hospital gowns.

Attaching Wings To Imagination

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

THE GREAT creative geniuses of the world were fed in early childhood on fiction, not fact. Their imagination was put on wings, not bound with chains. There were no "philosophers of education", when they were little children, to sell the baby's birthright (fairyland) for a mess of pottage (realism).

Without the elves, brownies and fairies, could there have been a Burns, Lamb, Coleridge, Dickens, Stevenson or Milne?

You know how Stevenson, when a mere baby, listened for hours upon hours as his nurse read to him wild tales of fancy. We have it from Milne, in his recent autobiography, that he was read to from Uncle Remus and Pilgrim's Progress before the age of four.

"Uncle Remus was read aloud to us by Papa, a chapter a night . . . Papa also red The Pilgrim's Progress to us . . . ."

Debt to Magazine

Milne tells us that his success as a writer for children he owed chiefly to Aunt Judy's Magazine, whose pages presumably were not filled with facts but with fiction. To quote—

"I have mentioned Aunt Judy's Magazine. I hope that she meant something to some of my contemporaries, for she meant Heaven to us. We had all the bound volumes; but never knew, nor know why, whether the components were till in circulation. Was Mrs. Ewing Aunt Judy? Who were the other contributors? Any poor laurels which I have won as a writer for children I strip from my head and distribute apologetically, leaf by leaf, to those of them who have remained unknown. To us the volumes of Aunt Judy's Magazine were friends as familiar and well-loved as were (in this more practical age) the volumes of the Children's Encyclopaedia to my own child. Aunt Judy was not practical. She entranced us, but never told us how to make a tricycle."

Do you realise that in some of the outstanding universities of this continent, little children in the nursery school and kindergarten are given only facts and denied the fanciful; that parents are being told to read only of the real to their babies; that little children, under the guise of "modern psychology", are having their imaginations gagged and chained?

No Appeal to Fancies

Have you observed that modern school boys for young children to longer appeal to the child's creative fancies and that brownies, fairies, and animate animals have disappeared from them?

Remember this—No one yet has proved conclusively that folk lore and fairy tales that are not frightful are harmful to the personality of the child, if properly balanced with social play and use of tools. This time when your child should be fired with appeals to his imagination is before he enters school; and he should not have to feed thereafter wholly on the fare of realism —not if he is going to be happiest and learn most creatively.

Solving Parent Problems

Q—Should a parent ever apologize to a child, say between three and 20?

A—Yes, indeed;; and before the sun goes down on the wrong done to the child.

A.—Not much, except for the child who lacks normal balance or sense of rhythm.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Convulsions

I know of nothing more terrifying to a mother than to see her baby go into convulsions.

The name convulsion has been popularly applied to a bodily seizure which usually comes on rapidly, lasts for a few minutes, and then either disappears or begins over again. The patient suffering from such a condition loses consciousness and usually makes violent twitching movements. Sometimes these twitchings are localized in arms or legs, but more often the whole body is involved. It writhes and twists with uncontrollable muscular activity. As most of the muscles are affected, those controlling respiration will be interfered with, breathing will become spasmodic and difficult, and the child will turn blue in color.

A convulsion means that the brain is abnormally irritated, and this irritation may be due to any one of a number of causes— indigestion, teething, the onset of fevers, fright, foreign bodies in the nose or ear, hot weather. Poisons in the body will cause them, and I have found that many children who have such seizure have eaten paint off toys or off the furniture until they get lead poisoning. This is very serious indeed, for the child will go on having one convulsion after another. In some cases death will come during one of these seizures.

The most direct cause of convulsions is an injury to the brain. An artery in the head is torn or ruptured, blood passes over the brain and creates an irritation, and spasms are a result.

Injury to the brain in the passage through the birth canal is the most common cause of convulsions in babies in the first days of life. Convulsions may eventuate from this cause later on if only a small amount of blood escapes the torn artery. For example, a few weeks later this small amount of blood may form a scar which presses on a vital spot, producing a spasm.

Of course, convulsions may be caused by brain injury any time in life. A fall on the head, a motor accident in which the body receives a violent enough shaking up to burst a blood vessel in the head, or any similar accident may be followed by spasms arising in the manner described above.

But it is in children that we encounter them most. In conditions when adults have chills, fever or delirium, infants have convulsions. Children develop much higher temperatures than adults do, and often a convulsion may be brought on in them by high temperature produced by the onset of infection in ears or throat. Such spasms produced by high fever do not usually return when the fever is reduced. It is only when there is chronic disease of the nervous system that convulsions are apt to become persistent or chronic, similar to epilepsy.

Convulsions are rarely fatal in themselves, however terrifying they may appear to the parent. Many children go on having convulsions with the onset of every infection. Then suddenly they stop having them and go through life in normal fashion.

Pork Is Plentiful And Palatable

It's Fine at This Season and Appeals to Both Appetite and Pocketbook

There are many homemakers who serve pork the year around, but there are others who feel that the very richness of this meat makes it more acceptable during the winter months when its added energy is needed.

Somehow we have come to use the term pork when we refer to the fresh meat and to say ham, bacon, smoked butts, or pickled pork. Fresh cuts are commonly baked or fried because the meat does not lend itself well to boiling or to broiling. The first is apt to be tasteless and the latter is not so desirable because of the longer time required for the cooking of pork. It must be thoroughly done, always.

As to cuts, we have quite a variety from which to choose. We may want the succulent spareribs with their partner sauerkraut, we may choose the fresh shoulder or leg roast: the family may vote for chops or tenderloins, or they may prefer a roast loin. The loin, which extends from the shoulder to the ham makes a delicious roast. When the part in the middle, or toward the rear (with the tenderloin) is chosen we have a roast that carves easily and is most attractive as a company meat. The upper end of this cut toward the shoulder, tastes just as good but is more chubby and has more flat bone so that it does not carve as attractively at the table. This end, however, has the advantage of being less expensive per pound.

For a real party roast it is nice to buy two of the choice parts of young pork loin and have them tied together, rib side out to make a circular crown roast. The centre is filled with a rather highly seasoned bread or apple stuffing and the finished roast garnished around the base with spiced cranberries and boiled onions arranged alternately in small piles.

In selecting pork, the best meat is pinkish gray, with a faint sheen to the surface, while the fat is a clear white and lies in a layer about one-half inch thick on the upper side of the loin. The texture of the meat, like that of any variety, should be fine with a marbling of fat through it but this fat should not be in excess. The best loin roasts will generally weigh about four to six pounds for the entire middle and loin section together and will measure from eight to ten inches in length. The larger and heavier animals are apt to be older and therefore less tender and juicy.

In cooking pork roasts, use a temperature of 350 deg. F. and allow about 30-35 minutes per pound. If you use a meat thermometer you will see that the internal temperature of the roast must be higher than usual for meat, for it must be thoroughly done, without any traces of pink. Pork roast does not need any basting and should be cooked uncovered. The fat on the top will seep down through the meat and will later brown to an appetizing color and crispness. Chops, which have a tendency to dry out, and spareribs, are better covered during their cooking, whether this is done in the oven or on top of the stove. The slight steaming that they get in this way tends to keep the meat soft.

Chops Superb

Six lean pork chops, 6 thin slices lemon, salt and pepper, 1-3 cup brown sugar 1-2 cup catsup.

Method: Place pork chops in baking dish. On each lay slice of lemon and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Sprinkle with sugar, add catsup, and bake 40 minutes covered and 10 minutes uncovered, at 350-375 degrees F.

Barbequed Fresh Leg

One small hind leg of pork, salt and pepper, 3-4 cup vinegar, 2 tablespoons prepared mustard, 1 to 1 1-2 cups catsup, 2 tablespoons brown sugar.

Method: Skin leg and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Combine remaining ingredients and pour over meat, in roasting pan. Bake 3-4 hours at 350-375 degrees F., depending on weight of meat, basting occasionally with sauce. Remove meat and thicken sauce. This sauce is also good served hot over cold pork.

Creole Pork

Method: Cook noodles 8 minutes in boiling salted water. Drain. Fry chops until nearly done, then salt. Add onion, catsup and water to noodles. Place chops in baking dish, cover with noodle mixture and sprinkle well with bread crumbs. Bake 30-40 minutes in moderate oven, 350 degrees F.

Cold Pork Deluxe

Six or eight slices cold roast pork, 1-4-1-2 inch thick, 1 cup catsup, 1 cup crushed rice or corn flakes, inch-deep fat for frying.

Method: Dip pork slices into catsup then into crumbs. Fry in hot fat until well browned on both sides. Salt and pepper to taste.

Chops and Beans

6 pork chops, 1 large can baked beans, 2 tablespoons chopped pickle, 1 teaspoon brown sugar, 1-2 cup catsup or chili sauce.

Method: Dry chops until nicely browned. Place in baking dish and cover with combined beans, pickle, sugar and catsup. Bake 20 minutes in moderate oven, 350 degrees Fahrenheit.

Cold Slices With Mustard Sauce

2 tablespoons shortening, 2 tablespons flour, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon dry mustard. 1 cup milk or stock, 1 teaspoon prepared horseradish, 10 slices cold pork.

Method: Melt shortening, add combined flour, salt and mustard. Add milk or stock stirring constantly and cook until thickened. Add horseradish and stir well. Place pork slices in sauce and simmer until well heated. Serve with toast points.

Pork Loaf

2 pounds ground pork, 1-2 pound ground ham, 3 cups rice flakes, 2 eggs, beaten, 1 cup tomato juice, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon mustard, 3-8 teaspoon pepper.

Method: Combine all ingredients well. Pack into loaf pan. Bake 1 1-2 hours in hot oven, 400 degrees Fahrenheit, pouring off fat as it accumulates on top.

Crown Roast With Cranberries

6 pounds crown roast, salt and pepper, 12 soda crackers, crumbled, 1 cup raw cranberries, 2 cups diced and pared apples, 1-3 cup sugar.

Method: Place roast in pan, sprinkle with salt and pepper. Combine remaining ingredients and pile in centre of roast. Roast in moderate oven 350 deg. F., uncovered, allowing 40 minutes per pound. Garnish with pumpkin rings.

Pumpkin Rings

Remove canned pumpkin, chilled in one piece. Slice 1-2 inch thick, sprinkle with fine crumbs and place on greased baking sheet. Brown in hot oven.

Style Harmony

By ALICE ALDEN

MADE-FOR-EACH-OTHER is a catch phrase we've been using frequently to describe the color and fabric tie-ups in new fashions. A tailored suit has its matching sailor, a soft wool frock is shown with hat, gloves, bag and shoes all in one shade. It isn't necessary, these days, to depend on a made-to-order source to look well turned out, so exacting are the matches in the shops. Evening will bring forth as many harmonizing accessories, including the glamorous gloves shown today, of electra-metallic kidskin exactly like the trimming on the slippers. Absinthe green is the shade of the stiff, jewel-like kid, with fourchettes and palm of black suede. Petals on the black satin shoe are vari-colored.

Mrs. Walker Wins Beauty

By HELEN FOLLETT

BE A MRS. Walker. A brisk walk on a cold day when there's moisture in the air is grand for the complexion; it hustles up the circulation, makes the blood streams scuttle along, reacts upon the skin giving it a good color. Walk fast enough to get into a mild sweat. Go home, take a shower, lie down and catch 40 winks. You'll awaken as fit as a fiddle.

Women who go ploughing along the street, head forward and step heavy, might as well stay home and darn their socks. It's the vibrant little hoofer who carries herself splendidly that gets beauty results. Walking is the perfect exercise. It is not tedious like calisthenics. It's fine for brushing depressing cobwebs from the mind.

Keep the head balanced. Don't throw the shoulders forward, a practice that contracts the chest, keeps the lungs from getting thoroughly ventilated. Let the arms swing easily. Don't come down on the heels, don't walk on the toes. Carry your weight evenly on sole and heel. Walk with a spring. Inhale for five steps, exhale for three. You'll be doing your breathing exercises, and they're fun. Make you feel snappy and full of ginger.

Thin girls count their ribs; fat one count their calories. Lucky is the one who doesn't have to do any counting. When the weight is normal, it should be kept that way by hygenic living habits. Eat just enough food to meet the requirements of the body, no more. Eat a variety of foods. The dumplings get too much food containing fat, starches and sweets; the skinnies don't get enough.

JUNE DUPREZ . . takes a brisk walk daily for the sake of beauty.

Every girl needs sunshine, fresh air, daily exercise, eight hours of sleep. Loss of sleep is sometimes responsible for a state of emaciation. Worry can keep one down to flesh and bones because worry interferes with nutrition.

Pain Accents the Meaning of 'No'

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

PSYCHE did not hear the word NO from her parents until she began to climb and creep. The first time she heard it was at the moment when her hands were slapped as she was about to seize the handle of the gas jet. It was no accident that her mother was present. The father and mother had forseen that Psyche would examine this alluring object. They together had planned exactly what was to be done by the parent who would be nearest to the child.

Little Psyche's heart was almost broken. So was her mother's, but she was calm, and she began at once to talk about the little elephant which she lifted to the child's wagon. Immediately Psyche turned to the wagon and elephant, and the mother to her work. When the mother had occasion to spend some time upstairs, the father went to the kitchen with Psyche. Pretty soon the child reached again for the gas jet, and immediately her hand was slapped by the father's right hand as he held hers in his left. At the same time he uttered NO just once.

She Was Cured

Psyche cried, but only for a moment, and then turned to her toys, while Dad moved some dishes from the table to the cupboard, as if nothing at all unusual had happened. From that time on through the next several weeks Psyche never was alone in the kitchen. But she has never touched the gas jet since, and she is now five.

From other dangerous things Psyche merely had been kept. The next thing the parent agreed to teach this baby to avoid was reaching above her for things on the kitchen table or work shelf.

The program was launched on Saturday noon, so that Father would be home, with Sunday also ahead, for the constant presence of one or both parents. Their slogan was "Immediate pain on the first offense, and no exceptions."

Let Her Choose

During the day Psyche reached above her in the kitchen for objects on the table or work shelf just four times, and four times she got immediate pain as she heard NO clearly and distinctly. They had planned deliberately to let her choose and bear the consequences.

Never were they concerned about immediate prevention only, else she would have just been gently seized and pulled away or distracted from the dangerous object, or the dangerous object would have been pushed beyond her reach. They wanted Psyche to desist from reaching above herself in the kitchen so that she would acquire the habit permanently.

The purpose was to connect pain, certainly in her nervous system, with the act to be avoided automatically. They had set out to teach Psyche to keep herself from reaching up in the kitchen. In like manner they later taught her to keep herself from running into the street. And eventually NO alone sufficed as a deterrent and served as a foundation in Psyche's nervous system for regard for constituted authority.

Solving Parent Problems

Q.—Would you ever try to force the child to confess after you had all the facts necessary to prove his guilt?

A—I should count myself a bully if I did. While a voluntary confession might be good for the soul, a forced confession is bad for the forcer and forcee.

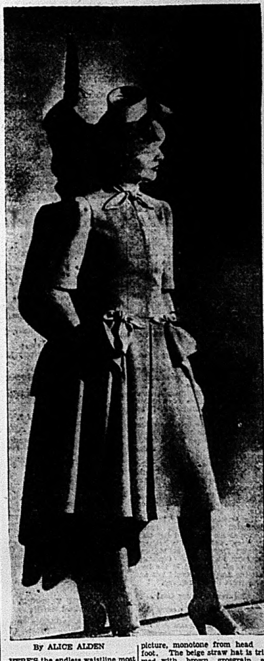
Endless Waistline



By ALICE ALDEN

HERE'S the endless waistline most of you have been hearing about, in a beige frock to go with any color coat—blue, brown or black. The coat may be one you already own, or the more expensive half of a dress-and-coat ensemble you're considering purchasing. At any rate, it won't quarrel with anything in this picture, monotone from head to foot. The beige straw hat is trimmed with brown grosgrain and brown feather. Beige kidskin sandals have small toe openings but closed heels, and are suitable for next summer's linens as well as March wools. Note the big pockets of the frock and the bows, details used more frequently than not on both dresses and jackets.

RANGERS ON TOP

Boston's Chances for N.H.L. Leadership Hampered When Clapper Sustains Broken Cheek-Bone

(By Jack Calder, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

All the hot feuding that arose in the Stanley Cup finals of 1938 seems about to come to another head when Toronto Maple Leafs and Chicago Black Hawks tangle in the first round of this year's cup series.

The Hawks won that war of '38 after four of the scrappiest, wordiest engagements in the history of hockey's world series.

The feud broke out with renewed fury during the week-end, when the Maple Leafs defeated the Hawks 5-2 at Toronto Saturday and Paul Thompson's aggressive youngsters beat the Leafs 2-1 at Chicago Sunday. Teddy Graham, the former tough Detroit defenceman, refereed both battles and handed out 116 minutes in penalties, including two majors at Toronto and eight in the Windy City.

Sylvanus Apps and Gordon Drillon, whose scoring partnership has suffered all season through injuries, looked like the old reliable firm in the Toronto game. Apps scored twice and assisted Drillon in a goal, while Drillon aided in three scores as well.

Turned on Cooper

Apps, who missed two months of the schedule through injuries, showed he isn't anxious to be pushed around again by turning on Joe Cooper of the Hawks in the third period as the defenceman gave him a combing. Apps swung back and they dropped their sticks to fire fists. In the melee, big Bingo Kampman of Toronto threw Cully Dahlstrom of Chicago into the laps of front-row customers.

Doug Bentley gave the Hawks a lead 10 minutes after the game opened but Apps tied the score less than a minute later. Chicago was a man short through one of the string of penalties when Captain Red Horner, put Toronto up 2-1.

George Allen tied the score in the second but the Leafs turned on heat in the hectic third. Drillon, Apps and Nick Metz scored in that order, the last goal coming while Cooper was serving one of three penalties he drew during the period.

A Fierce Fight

Bentley opened the scoring again in the first period at Chicago and Dahlstrom got a goal for the Black Hawks and Red Heron one for the Leafs in the third. Between the first and second goals, however, the fiercest fight of the week-end took place.

Murph Chamberlain of Toronto and Cooper were serving major sentences for one scrap, when the big one broke out. Dahlstrom and Bill Mackenzie of Chicago and Wally Stanowski and Pep Kelly of Toronto drew majors for piling in. Allen and Bob Davidson of the Leafs got the same for another display of fisticuffs in the third.

New York Americans played a big part in letting their fellow-townsmen, the Rangers, regain first place in the standings. The Americans drubbed the Bruins 4-2 at Boston Saturday. Then the Rangers stepped over the Americans 4-2 at New York last night, to take a one-point lead over Boston.

Assured of Playoff

Lorne Carr scored twice and Murray Armstrong and Johnny Sorrell twice each to lead the Americans in their Saturday triumph, which assured them of a playoff position. Bobby Bauer and Bill Cowley got the Bruin goals.

But it may have been more than just a defeat for Boston. Captain Dit Clapper emerged with a broken cheek-bone from a melee in a desperate last-minute attack.

The Ranger success was scored despite the best efforts of Charlie Conacher, who got both the Americans' goals. Neil Colville grabbed two for the Blueshirts and Kilby MacDonald and Muzz Patrick one each.

The Americans' victory Saturday eliminated the Canadiens from a chance at the sixth and last playoff place, although the habitants defeated Detroit 3-0 at Montreal the same night. The Canadiens made a gallant stand in the hops that the Americans would lose and leave them in the running.

Figures in Enemy Goal

Toe Blake figured in every Canadien goal, scoring once and assisting Cliff Goupille and Ray Getliffe in the others. Meanwhile Goalie Claude Bourque played brilliantly in the Frenchmen's nets.

The starch was out of the Canadiens last night and the Red Wings whipped them 5-2 at Detroit, when Blake again scored and assisted Bill Sands in his team's other goal. Mud Bruneteau, Ken Kilrea, Syd Howe, Ebbie Goodfellow and Jack Stewart scored for Detroit.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz, Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, March 11 — (AP)—Jack Doyle, Broadway betting commissioner, will send the Reds out favorites over the Cards. . . . Bad news: Jack Miley wired his paper (The New York Post) the Giants are the worst-looking bunch of ball players he has seen in Florida . . Johnny Paychek has decided on Pompton Lakes as his training camp for the Louis bout. . . .

Today's guest star: Nixson C. Denton, Cincinnati Times-Star: "Arturo Godoy's style must be catching . . . a lad by the name of Crouch fought in Los Angeles the other night."

Connie Mack is predicting a first division finish for the A's and isn't just talking for the news reels. . . . Coach Dean Cromwell teaches his Southern California track stars to run pigeon-toed, theory being a runner gets more drive out of all five toes than just the big one . . . Sonja Henie's 10-week skating tour netted $250,000 as her end.

So the Tigers are using dead balls in training . . . we had an idea they'd be eight balls.

Ki-Y League

Two games of hockey were played in the Ki-Y midget group at the Hume arena on Saturday, when the Thunderbolts triumphed 2-1 over the Scrappers, while the Supermen lived up to their monicker and downed the Goal-getters 6 to 5.

McIntyre and Belnap scored two each for the Supermen, with Hannah and Turner getting one each as the Supermen downed Goal-getters 6-5. Rankin with two, Hewson, Rollins and Evans scored for the losers.

The lineups:

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

By the Associated Press

Sarasota, Fla.—Officials of the Boston Red Sox were relieved today to find that an injury suffered by rookie Dominic DiMaggio in yesterday's exhibition with the Cincinnati Reds was nothing worse than a sprain. At first it had been feared a small bone in his ankle might have been broken sliding into home plate.

x x x

Pasadena, Calif. — Defying the recollection of some observers of last year's campaign, manager Jimmy Dykes of the Chicago White Sox is enthused about the outfield play of Taft Wright. He declares Wright is a better fielder, thrower and hitter than Gerald Walker, who went to the Washington Senators in exchange.

x x x

Fort Myers, Fla.—Manager Oscar Vitt of the Cleveland Indians is keeping his fingers crossed on Johnny Humphries, a promising pitcher who was too wild for the Tribe last year. In three innings of a Regular-Yannigan game yesterday Humphries didn't give a single base on balls. Catcher Rollie Hemsley bruised his leg in a baseline collision and may be out of action for a couple of days.

x x x

Lakeland, Fla.—The way Barney McCosky is rapping the ball indicates the sophomore jinx of the major leagues isn't going to stop the Detroit Tigers' outfield star. He had a big hand in helping crush the Brooklyn Dodgers 11-2 yesterday.

x x x

Avlon, Calif.—All of the Chicago Cubs will be watching anxiously today as pitcher Clay Bryant gives his arm a test in an intra-squad game. The ailing pitcher, who sat on the bench most of last season, will be making his first appearance in a practice contest this spring.

x x x

Miami Beach, Fla.—Morrie Arnovich, one of the National League's leading hitters last season, is starting off fast again this spring. He socked a homer, double and single and drove in three runs in an intra-camp struggle.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

Ken J. Colling

So seriously do these rural hockey teams take their sport, that during the Wallbridge-Zion Hill game at the Hume Arena last Friday night, coach Roblin Dulmage withdrew his sextette from the ice during hostilities. It seems Skipper Barton Hinchliffe, of the Wallbridge squad, had out-manoeuvred and out-smarted the other teams in the tournament when the original playing rules were drafted and had dressed Leo Goyer, leading scorer with the Belleville juniors this year. The Zion Hill aggregation refused to play if Goyer took to the ice. Finally Goyer was withdrawn, with the understanding, that he would be permitted to play in the final series, which opens Tuesday night. City slickers, who allege they know all about hockey, are favouring Glen Miller to beat Wallbridge in the rural tournament series for the Dr. J. J. Robertson trophy, but with Goyer's scoring ability on their side tomorrow night, Barton Hinchliffe's chances of victory are exceedingly enhanced.

The "merry mix-up", that prevailed out in the Trent Valley League last week, has reached more calm waters, but only after the Stirling team is said to have threatened legal action if their cause was not upheld. Apparently Art Duncan, the fluent Stirling arbiter, carried sting as well as potency in his address to the league heads. At any rate the Stirling team, which finished last in the league schedule with but nine points gained in the season, now find themselves in second place, while Campbellford are safely perched on the top rung and assured of a berth in the Trent Valley finals for the the Cobley Trophy. Tonight Norwood and Madoc meet in a sudden death game to determine the third slot position, while on Tuesday the winner of the above game will meet Stirling in a saw-off at Campbellford, where a capacity house is expected. The ultimate winner of this last-mentioned game will then meet Campbellford in the league finals and today we find the Trent Valley loop imbued as of old.

Harold Reese, 20 - year - old Brooklyn shortstop who was purchased from Louisville last fall, is recognized as the most likely looking rookie of the coming major league season. Reese plays 'em close to the ground and is a natural-born infielder. His success as a major leaguer depends primarily upon his hitting ability. However, there is another phase along the major baseball front this spring, that sees several veteran players gallantly seeking a comeback. These "washed-up" hopefuls are pitchers Wes Ferrell and Tex Carleton with the Dodgers, catcher Bill DeLancey is battling hard in the Cardinals' camp, while "strike-out Vince" DiMaggio, of the Bees, is also on the spot. Ferrell was once a top-ranking hurler in the American League, having won 20 games or more for four consecutive seasons. Si Johnson, Cincinnati and Clay Bryant of the Cubs are two more hurlers who are getting their last chance with major leagues and facing that dreaded "down the river" shunt if they fail and DeLancey is battling two fine receivers in Owen and Padgett of the "Gas-house gang."

Ed Barrow, president of the New York Yankees, claims night baseball is a fad and will have nothing to do with it, but Larry MacPhail, pioneer of the majors with the lights, retorts: "Night baseball has been successful for years. If it's a fad—so is the Yanks' winning world's championships." Admitting that night ball is a money-maker, Barrow adds, "But so were mah jong and ping pong." He continues: "Night ball ruins the routine of the fan, who has to get up at 7 o'clock the next morning for work, and of the player who has to read-just his living continually. Our success is built upon harmony on the field, harmony in the clubhouse and harmony in the home. Night baseball is a terrible disrupter." Asked whether a prolonged Yankee reign might not kill attendance, Barrow emphasized: "No. We'll draw our 2,000,000 a year. The falling off at home will be made up by increasing road attendance."

Do you remember when—Major H. O. D. Seagrave, famous British racing driver, set a new world speed record at Daytona Beach, Fla., 11 years ago today. The major drove his 12-cylinder Golden Arrow over the sands at 231.36 miles an hour. That mark was eclipsed by Sir Malcolm Campbell and later by Capt. George Eyston, who set a mark of 309 miles an hour at Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, last summer.

Im Jimmy Foxx expects to catch up with Babe Ruth's homerun total he will have to play many more seasons. Ruth quit baseball with 708 to his credit. Foxx, at 32, now has 464. Gehrig stopped at 494 homers.

Sport Spice — There is a movement on foot to revieve Industrial League Hockey in Belleville, more tomorrow. . . . Belleville used to boast of a good factory puck loop years ago when the manufacturers took a keen interest in sports. . . . "Punch" Bott, Montreal skier who we spoke of some weeks ago, won the Eastern Canadian ski championship at Montreal Saturday. . . . Meaford High won the Georgian Bay C.O.S.S.A. senior basketball title and will meet Belleville Collegiate next Friday . . . . Roy Covert scored for the Washington Eagles last night, as they lost to Atlantic City 6-5, but the Eagles are in second place in the U.S.A. amateur (?) puck loop . . . . Lex Robson has been appointed professional at the Peterboro golf links. . . . Believe it or not the Smith's Falls "Combines," the team the Redmen had little difficulty with in the Van Horne series beat the Hull Volants 7-1 in the Ottawa Valley playdowns Saturday. . . . Trenton's good bantam team is in the Ontario finals today.

Trenton Bantams Advance to Finals

Trenton, March 11 —(Special)— Trenton's bantam hockey sextette in the O.J.H.A. advanced to the provincial finals by beating the St. Georges bantams 2-0 here on Saturday, thus winning the round by a 4-3 score. The local bantams were brilliant in victory and after knotting the round count early in the second game of a home and home series, played a clever brand of defensive hockey to wait for the breaks.

Lesperance tied the score for the homesters in the first period while Fitzpatrick sank the winning counter in the last stanza.

In the other game played the Trenton midgets defeated the St. Georges midgets 3-2 but lost on the round by a 9-4 score. The Trenton bantams expect to meet London in the provincial midget O.J.H.A. finals.

Bill Atwood, first string catcher for the Philadelphia team of the National League, receives an "assist" from his wife, who helps him get into his playing "armor" for a practice session at the Phillies' training camp in Miami, Florida.

WEEK-END N.H.L. STARS

(By the Canadian Press)

Lorne Carr, Americans, scored twice in a 4-2 Saturday night victory over Boston Bruins.

Neil Colville, Rangers, got two tallies as the Rangers trimmed Americans 4-2 Sunday night.

Syl Apps and Gordie Drillon, Toronto, paced Leafs to a 5-2 Saturday victory over Chicago with the former getting two goals and an assist and the latter a goal and three assists.

"Our results justify the continued use of the LOCAL DAILY . . . as an effective, profitable advertising medium."

"My firm belief in the value of the local daily newspaper as an advertising medium has been thoroughly substantiated by the excellent results obtained through the Timmins Daily Press.

As you are of course aware, the Workers' Co-operative of New Ontario Limited, has been purchasing a considerable amount of advertising space in the Timmins Daily Press. And with regard to this, I am pleased to state that a careful check-up on the part of our advertising department has shown that the returns therefrom thoroughly justify the continued use of the Timmins Daily Press as an effective and profitable advertising medium.

When nationally branded goods that we sell are advertised in the local daily, they benefit from the same excellent results and we benefit from the increased sales of these products."

German Socialists Fight on Against Nazi Regime

London, March 11 — (CP) — Through secret channels the Independent Labor Party has received from German Independent Socialists a message promising they will never give up their fight against the Nazi regime.

Addressed to British and French workers, the message says in part:

"We love our country as you love your country. If our homes are going to be attacked we shall defend them. But no peace for us with the present German government. No political truce for us with the Hitler regime.

"In peace our war work goes on —the fight for the human rights of the German population, the fight against the Hitler regime and the Nazi war. In the trenches and in the munitions factories, on the markets and in the farmyards, we spread our leaflets demanding food, higher wages, peace and an end of the Hitler regime.

"If Hitler's ruthless warfare strikes your country in the same way as Poland, remember, the German workers do not want this war. If we remain silent, it is because at our backs there is an armed force of bayonets. If we do not attack now, realize that our hands are chained."

Toronto, March 11 — (CP) — George A. Allen, 28, died from suffocation early today as fire swept the interior of his home in north Toronto, Firemen said it was evident that Allen tried to escape from his smoke-filled bedroom but collapsed.

The fire, which started in the basement, was discovered by Allan Warnes, 19, and Ian Macdonald, 15, newsboys. Warnes tried to raise Allen while Macdonald went to his home nearby and called the firemen. The boys saw smoke coming from the house and saw that the living room was ablaze when they peered in the window.

Campbellford Defeats Tweed In Two Straight

Tweed, March 11 (Special) — Campbellford found the heavy going very much to its liking at the local arena and easily defeated Tweed by the score of 8-3 for their second straight victory in the quarter-finals. The loss eliminates the locals for the season. After holding the league leaders to a 6-5 margin in Campbellford on Wednesday evening, local supporters looked for Tweed to knot the series and force a third game. The largest crowd in years, some six hundred strong, was keenly disappointed when the locals failed to come through with a victory.

Play was fairly even in the opening stanza with the visitors having whatever advantage there was in the play. McIlraith and Godden scored for them to gain a lead which they never lost. Elsbury, who skated himself into a state of exhaustion, tallied the locals' only goal.

Tweed tied the score early in the second frame with Elsbury again the marksman. Both goals were individual efforts as heavy ice nullified attempts at combination. Kelly gave Campbellford the lead shortly afterwards, and from there to the end they were never headed.

Tweed faded badly in the last period, while the visitors appeared to gain strength outscoring the locals four goals to one. Robinson and Couch scored one goal each while Blake bulged the twine twice. Turner in the Campbellford goal was practically unbeatable, only Tummon breaking through his guard for Tweed's last marker. Final score Campbellford 8; Tweed 3. "Toots" Holway handled the game, handing out twelve penalties seven to the locals, six of which came in the fatal last twenty minutes.

The Stars Say

For Tuesday, March 12

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A DIFFICULT day is presaged from the strongly adverse planetary aspects. There are likely to be tenacious obstacles which will take much tact and diplomacy to remove. The stubborn opposition seems to have its source in deep roots, probably in connection with groups or organized bodies, with whom much discrimination should be exercised.

Those whose birthday it is may have to draw on a reserve fund of patience, fortitude and prudence during the year in order to sidestep or vanquish obstinate and difficult situations. Many obstacles and frustrating circumstances arise, probably from old organizations or new and ambitious groups.

A child born on this day may be fairly clever, with deep, subtle and shrewd traits of character, which should enable it to transcend frustrating circumstances by prudence, clear thinking and strategic tactics.

S. A. CAMPAIGN GETS UNDER WAY

Canvassers Begin Work To-day—Payments May be Extended Over Eight Months

The Red Shield War and Home Service Campaign sponsored by the Salvation Army, of which the local objective is $3,500, and which is scheduled to run from March 11th to March 20th, got under way this morning with the different campaign teams representing the various social and business interests of the city starting their alloted rounds for making collections. No actual house to house canvass is being made however, as the matter of collections has been greatly simplified by all families listed in the telephone and city directories being classified and all householders have been mailed appeal pamphlets with the donation cards also enclosed. In order that all potential donors may be contacted a complete listing of all factory employees, office and business workers has been made, and when possible one person in each business has been made responsible for collections.

All donations may be made by the deferred payment plan if the donor so wishes, with the payments extending over a period of eight months. As each payment is made to the local campaign officials, the donor will receive an official receipt from Salvation Army headquarters.

Options Taken for Airport at Kingston

Kingston, March 11—Possibility of an airport, in connection with the Commonwealth Air Training scheme being established in this district grows brighter daily.

The Department of Transport has taken options on several farms, about five miles west of this city.

The options have been taken on the Walker, Henderson, O'Neill, Graham and Van Luven farms on the Lemoine Point Road and facing Lake Ontario as well as other properties, north of these farms and facing the Bay of Quinte. Engineers have been working on the survey for several weeks and after they completed the work, representatives of the Department of Transport called upon the owners of the farms, which take in over 800 acres, and gave them options on their property. It is understood the farm owners were told they might hear something within a month.

The farms, held under option, consist of some of the best agricultural lands in Kingston Township. They are thought to be ideal for an airport on account of their location on two bodies of water. In rough weather seaplanes could land on the quiet waters of the Bay of Quinte near Collins Bay.

ONTARIO

March of Time Picture "CANADA AT WAR"

THE Board of Censors, acting under the authority of The Theatres and Cinematographs Act, Chapter 319 of the Revised Statutes of Ontario 1937, has prohibited the exhibition of the film "Canada at War." In the opinion of the Board the picture is capable of being used—and is, in fact, presently being used in Canada—not for purposes of entertainment or education but for political propaganda. In proof of this, a copy of an advertisement published in Vancouver, B.C., papers under the sponsorship of the Vancouver Liberal Association is shown hereunder.

IAN MACKENZIE

(Facsimile)

Moreover, the film "Canada at War", No. 8 in March of Time features, was released for exhibition in advance of No. 7—which is a picture with an American appeal. The release date of "Canada at War" was said to have been advanced three weeks apparently to permit of the display of the film during the Dominion election campaign.

The action of the Board of Censors in prohibiting the exhibition in Ontario of the March of Time picture "Canada at War" follows the precedent adopted in the Ontario provincial election of 1937, during which time the Liberal Government of Ontario refused to permit the exhibition of films and pictures which gave vivid accounts and displays of C.I.O. activities and scenes of violence in American industrial centers. The showing of the pictures would have been to the undoubted advantage of the Liberal Government which was opposing C.I.O. activities in Ontario. Yet the Ontario Liberal Government banned the exhibition of the films and pictures.

The Board of Censors of the Province of Ontario would be false to its duty if it interfered in the wartime elections campaign by placing its stamp of approval on a film such as "Canada at War," which in this time of grave national peril is being used and exploited for purposes of political propaganda.

M. F. HEPBURN,
Treasurer of Ontario.

Tweed

Tweed — Mr. Evan Tummon, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Tummon of Tweed, has been transferred from a Queen Street Branch of the Bank of Montreal in Toronto to Fort Erie.

The new St. Carthagh's Separate School is rapidly nearing completion. Two classes have already been transferred from the Convent and the others will take up their new quarters as soon as other classrooms are ready.

Miss Audrey Dales entertained a number of her girl friends at a birthday party at her home one evening last week.

Mr. Ralph McGuire, formerly employed at LeSage Motor Sales, has been engaged as mechanic at E. W. Jones' garage.

Grades 7 and 8 of Tweed Consolidated School held an enjoyable sleighing party on Tuesday night. Teams and sleighs driven by Scott Bateman and Ernest Reynolds gave the children a ride to Lodgeroom. On their return the children enjoyed lunch served in the Household Economics room, and supervised by Principal S. H. Connor and the staff. A motion of appreciation to the drivers and the teachers was made by Jack Beatty and seconded by William Ward.

The Salvation Army Red Shield War and Home Service Campaign is already well underway, although the dates of the canvass are from March 11th to March 20th. Already the canvassers, engaged in soliciting advance gifts, have collected $100 in cash and have received pledges amounting to nearly $200. This, in spite of a canvass made but a few months ago, when Tweed alone contributed nearly $1700 in cash and pledges to the Red Cross.

As the objective for the whole district which included Bancroft, Madoc, Marmora, Stirling, Tweed and smaller adjacent communities is $1000, there is every prospect it will be over-subscribed.

Farnsworth entered the finals in the East Hastings Rural League for the Dr. Welsh trophy by defeating Tweed by a score of 3-2 in ten minutes overtime. The winners' goals were scored by Meraw and Baker. Both of the losers' goals were scored by Prout.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating supper, being liver and onions in pop's honor, and pop said, Was there a package deliver and onions in pop's honor, and in it?

Why no, where was it suppose to be from? ma said, and pop said, Poppaloppo's the florist. I was on my way to luntch and I met Wood Meedson just about to pop into Poppaloppo's, and he told me he was going to send his wife some flowers for their wedding anniversity, and he said to me, The little woman is going to be mitey pleased you can imagine the reception I'll get when I get home, he said, and I said, That's nothing to the reception you'd get if you forgot to send flowers, you self styled devoted husbands can't fool me, I said to him. And I told him as far as I was concerned I didn't wait for any wedding anniversary to send my wife flowers. I told him my wife thinks of some way to please me 365 days of the year so why should I wait 12 months to return the compliment, and I told him I was going to do a little popping myself and send you a flock of roses just for deviltment, pop said.

It's mighty funny they didn't come, ma said, and pop said, Well it is and it isn't, I mean just then Sam Manders rushed up to speak to me and the flowers left my mind in a buntch. But I was so determined to send them that I'm almost surprised that Poppaloppo didn't get my intention by mental telepathy and send them anyway. Anyhow I knew you'd be pleased at the thought, he said.

Do you realize that today really is our anniversity? ma said, and pop said, The dooce it is, why it's not even the month, what's the idea of scoring me like that?

I didn't say it was our anniversity of our own wedding, it's the anniversity of our daughter's wedding, it's Gladdis's anniversity, and you know I set great store by Gladdis's anniversity and I must confess I'm hurt at not receiving any flowers from you, ma said.

The result being pop had to take her to the movies after supper to make her feel better.

WALL STREET

New York, March 11 — (AP)—Quiet strength among Aircrafts and Specialties was offset by lagging tendencies of most leaders in today's stock market. Spotty price trends at the start remained near the fourth hour and dealings were relatively light throughout. Bonds and commodities were a shade irregular.

Packard was the fastest mover on the home front, stepping to a new 1940 top. New York Tractions also were lively. Ahead at one time or another were Celanese, Douglas Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Curtiss-Wright, United Aircraft, Allied Chemical, General Motors, Montgomery Ward, N.Y. Central and General Electric.

Among Canadian issues Canadian Pacific and McIntyre eased trifles and Lake Shore and Dome Mines came back as much while Distillers Seagram and in the bond market, Canada 4s rested unchanged.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, March 11—(CP) —Gold shares took small losses on Toronto Exchange today. Other groups were steady. Trading was again on a small scale.

Hollinger weakened to 14, its low mark for the year and losses of 10 cents were boarded by Sylvanite and Sigma. MacLeod-Cockshutt weakened 8 cents to $1.90. Naybob at 20 cents was the weakest of the Junior issues. In the Base Metals, Noranda and Steep Rock were down slightly and Smelters was firmer.

Hamilton Cottons Pfd., advanced 1 1-2 to 36 1-2 and Langley's Pfd. firmed 3 points to 27. Most changes were in small fractions. Utilities, Foods and Liquors were unchanged to narrowly higher and the Steel Stocks weakened minor fractions. Western Oils showed no change. Home holding at 2.50 and Calgary-Edmonton at 1.95.

POLICE COURT

Patrick Farrara of this city, was fined $25.00 and costs after being convicted of being found in the possession of home-made wine, contrary to the regulations of the L.C.A. after the accused pleaded guilty before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C.

Acting Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson charged Farrara with being found in possession of home-made wine in excess of 100 gallons, as provided under the L.C.A. "The police found six 40-gallon barrels of wine besides other quantities, amounting to some 310 gallons in all. The government analyst reported the wine to range in strength from 10 to 14 percent", revealed Mr. Robertson as he asked for the confiscation of the spirits.

Counsel Protests

"This act only came into force on Jan. 1st, 1940 and the government did not advertise it nor were the public informed through the press of this new legislation," pleaded Frank Cushing local barrister who appeared on Farrara's behalf and sought the minimum fine possible. The fine and costs amounted to $36.05 in all and was paid.

Guilty of Theft

William Lusk, 16 of this city, pleaded guilty to the theft of a roll of linoleum, the property of Wray's furnishing house. His Worship remanded the accused for sentence.

Additional Charges Laid

Daniel Mullins, Tyendinaga township appeared for sentence after being convicted of charges of violations of the L.C.A. in last Friday's court. Today Mullins faced an additional charge of the destruction of property, namely the breaking of a plate glass window at the Globe Cafe recently. Frank Cushing, local lawyer appearing for the accused, told the court his client had no knowledge of the incident.

"I see him come, lock door and callee policee station after he kick glass out," stated Thomas Wong, proprietor of the restaurant. The accused was given three months on the L.C.A. charges and three months, to run concurrent on the property destruction count.

HEAVY FALL OF SNOW AT SOUTH BAY, P.E.

While residents of this immediate district awakened today to frosty temperatures, those living in other parts of the section had a further taste of old-fashioned Winter.

Snow originating in the Pickering district, according to travellers, swept in a south-easterly direction along the lake-front, filling sideroads and isolating rural residents in many sections.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Hughes residing in South Bay, Prince Edward County telephoned friends in Belleville yesterday that they were "snowed" in. Large drifts left in the wake of a strong wind filled sideroads and concession lines, they said.

Snowplows were in action in various sections of the district where traffic had been impeded by heavy drifts. As far as can be ascertained the snow only affected traffic in the southern areas.

TWO TRUCKS ARE IN COLLISION

Property damage resulted to two motor trucks at the intersection of Pine St. and McDonald Ave., at noon today when the vehicles skidded into collision as the result of icy ruts on the streets. One truck was driven by Donald Brown, 60 Albion St., while the other was in charge of C. J. Shannon 34 Strachan St Fender and headlight damage was found to have resulted when Plain-clothes Constable Fred Isard investigated. Less than $50.00 damage resulted and no personal injuries were reported, however.

Produce Prices Generally Steady

While quotations held former levels, the undertone of the butter market was firmer, with offerings of first grade Ontario creamery solids at 27 3-4c per pound absorbed. It was doubtful if supplies could have been obtained below 28c near the close, and an odd sale was reported at this figure.

Fresh receipts arrived in ample volume on the egg market. Supplies cleared fairly well, however, and prices maintained Friday's levels. Government-inspected lots of graded eggs remained at a premium.

"As His Majesty's Government and the French Government have already informed the Finnish Government, they are prepared, in response to an appeal from them for further aid, to proceed immediately and jointly to the help of Finland, using all available resources at their disposal."

Asked if he could say anything regarding the question of a settlement of the Russo-Finnish conflict, Mr. Chamberlain said "I am afraid I have no information which is sufficiently reliable to give the House at the present moment."

Certain Terms Mentioned

Replying to a question about the earlier disclosure of a Soviet approach to Britain with proposed peace terms for Finland, Mr. Chamberlain said:

"It would be untrue to say the British Government have been asked to mediate, but there was an occasion on which the Soviet ambassador mentioned certain terms which his government would be prepared to offer to Finland and His Majesty's Government did not feel able to pass those terms on to Finland."

The statement was greeted with loud cheers.

Mr. Attlee asked if any aid sent Finland would be in "fulfilment of our obligation under the covenant of the League of Nations and in co-operation with other states similarly bound."

Act According to Covenant

The Prime Minister replied: "It will certainly be in accordance with our obligations under the covenant. As to co-operation with other states, I have already mentioned that France is in association with ourselves. Of course I cannot say what other states might feel bound to do."

"Does this not mean that it is tantamount to us going to war with Russia?" asked David Kirkwood, Labor.

"We have not arrived at that yet," Mr. Chamberlain replied.

The Prime Minister refused to answer a question whether Britain is "proposing to send troops to Finland" and "if so, are they preparing to violate the neutrality of Norway and Sweden in doing so."

The Russian peace terms, it was disclosed, were transmitted Feb. 22 by Ambassador Ivan Maisky to Richard Butler, Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs.

Foreign Office circles said they would have left Finland "helpless and defenceless" and the British Government informed Finland later it had refused to act as intermediary.

Terms Announced

The terms were said to have included "cession of territory covering Lake Ladoga, Viipuri, the whole of the Karelian Isthmus, islands in the Gulf of Finland now occupied by Soviet troops, the western half of the Rybachi Peninsula and a long lease of Hanko as a Russian naval base."

Authoritative sources said similar terms were submitted to Sweden about the same time, and she conveyed them to Finland.

A source close to the British Government asserted Sweden apparently had "not the same scruples as ourselves" about agreeing to mediate on such terms.

The Russian demands, London sources said, did not include cession by Finland of the Petsamo region in the far north where the Canadian - operated nickel mines are located.

It was emphasized there were "no compensating commercial or territorial factors" in the terms submitted by Maisky. The impression in government circles here was that the present Russo-Finnish negotiations in Moscow were opened on the basis of the same terms.

Authoritative sources reiterated the British government's desire to give Finland "expanded and ample" assistance.

Stockholm, March 11—(AP)—The Finnish delegation was reported to have left Moscow this morning with peace conditions to be submitted to the Finnish government.

A Swedish telegraph agency dispatch from Helsinki said "the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Finnish Parliament has reportedly recognized the Russian peace conditions but no official confirmation is available."

The report was withdrawn almost immediately, apparently at the request of the Finnish legation which said it could be denied.

The issuance and withdrawal of the dispatch created a stir of excitment despite the Stockholm evening newspapers' compliance with the request.

The Bellen was emphasized in informed quarters that the whole question of peace or continued war now has reached a point of final decision and that an announcement can be expected at any time.

The possibility that Germany and Italy might guarantee a Russian-Finnish peace was reported, meanwhile, in the Scandinavian press.

Finland's negotiators were generally assumed to have asked guarantees and it was expected that the Finnish public, fearful of a "Finnish Munich," would insist on assurances against renewed Soviet attack if the present hostilities are ended.

The newspaper Aftonbladet published an unconfirmed report that Foreign Minister Christian E. Gunther of Sweden was en route to Berlin.

This revived rumors that the German-Russian partners were seeking greater influence in Scandinavia in return for a Finnish settlement and it also bolstered the report that Germany wanted guarantees.

The usually well-informed Stockholm Socialist newspaper, Folkets Dagblad, said editorially that the main point of the Moscow talks dealt with "widening of the Soviet-German pact to include Finland in the direct zone of German-Soviet interests."

According to this theory, any concessions made for peace would be on the understanding that Finland must, at least, in no way hamper the Russo-German program.

Finnish Delegate in Berlin

Berlin, March 11—(AP)— Pehr Evind Svinhufvud, former President of Finland, visited the Foreign Office today presumably to inquire whether it would be opportune for Adolf Hitler to receive him. There was no immediate disclosure whether he would see Hitler.

The Finnish statesman was accompanied by Aarne Wuorimma, Finnish Minister to Germany, and was received by aBron Ernst von Weiszaecker, States Secretary in the Foreign Office.

Finnish sources said Svinhufvud would not leave for Italy while Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop was in Rome. He did not want to arrive there while Italian Premier Mussolini was busy with the German Foreign Minister.

The prevailing impression in Berlin was that Germany would mark time on any move of her own in connection with the Finnish Russian peace talks pending definite word on the course of the Moscow negotiations.

AIRMEN DISSATISFIED

and they would be seen on the road, Johnson aPaid. He then passed a small party of airmen walking toward the city. Further on he passed "about 150 airmen marching in an orderly manner without non-commissioned officers or officers, but with airmen acting as non-commissioned officers." The men were singing and some carried kit bags.

Permitted Men To Pass.

Later on, said Mr. Johnson, airmen told him the guard at the school had permitted the men to pass out. He also learned the military police had peen ordered to go to St. Thomas that afternoon and notify all airmen to return for muster parade but that a number were still in town late that night.

James Arthur Ship, a war veteran, now in business on the Main Street of St. Thomas, said he saw a body of airmen pass his shop on Feb. 10. He thought it was a route march until he saw the rear section break up in an "unmilitary manner". Later he heard the men marched out "because their leaves were cancelled".

J. A. Telfer, an airman in uniform, said he appeared voluntarily, was not subpoenaed and gave evidence on his own responsibility.

Mr. Snyder, speaking as a representative of the Crown, said he was not responsible for the airman's appearance or testimony

Telfer said he was having lunch when the walkout took place and had no part in it. On the afternoon of February 10, there was a muster parade and the men were given to understand that for the afternoon they could come and go as they pleased. About 150 men walked out, came to St. Thomas and then went on to London, Toronto and other places. He did not know if any discipline was imposed as a result.

Training as Mechanic

Mr. Snyder said he was interested only in the walkout, but Telfer might tell the Commissioner anything he wished. Witness proceeded,—

"I have been here for two months and haven't done anything in the line of training yet. I was never unemployed before I enlisted and I expected to train as an aero engine mechanic. I have done nothing but small jobs, such as mopping floors".

Dalton Higgs, manager of a tire shop, said he saw 125 to 150 airmen pass his shop, Feb. 10. He learned later there was a walkout. Later he inquired of an airman whom he knew—"Did you round up all your culprits?" The airman appeared to resent the question but said that all but 40 or 50 were back at the school.

None Responded to Claim

"The walkout was the chief topic of conversation around town for days," said Mr. Higgs. "Residents of St. Thomas to my knowledge have accepted this walkout as a fact".

Harold Preston, manager of a St. Thomas theatre, said that on the afternoon of February 10, two men in uniform asked him to flash a slide on the screen to tell all airmen to go back to the station. He did so. None of the airmen, of whom there were about 16 in the theatre, responded.

Ontario Mineral Production Reaches an All-Time High

Value of $231,945,539 Set on Metal Yield—Many New Mines Opened

GOLD INDUSTRY UP

Toronto, March 11—(CP)—Value of Ontario mineral production reached an all-time high of $231,945,539 in 1939, it was said today in a preliminary production report released by Mines Minister Paul Leduc. Production value in 1938 was $219,950,476, the increase in 1939 being 5.4 per cent.

Production of metallics increased 5.5 per cent, non-metallics 13.5 per cent and structural materials 1.87 per cent. There was a 2.6 per cent drop in clay products output.

The gold industry surpassed all former records. Fifteen new mills were in operation. Southeastern Ontario re-entered the list when the Cordova property resumed work. Value of production was aided by the 10 per cent increase in the value of gold in Canadian funds.

Another boost was given the total value of production by the resumption of iron ore mining at Michipicoten.

Production records were shattered by the nickel-copper industry, but the value of nickel produced showed a drop. Platinum metals had a higher value despite decreased yield. Silver, selenium, cobalt and lead were up in both quantity and value.

Sunday Night Band Concert Features Local Amateur Talent

Fred Stone, Belleville's contribution to the amateur stage and radio fame, was loudly acclaimed by a capacity house at the McCarthy Theatre last night, where he was billed as guest artist at the second of a series of Sunday night band concerts given by the Belleville Municipal Band.

The youthful artist who has already won numerous prizes at amateur shows throughout Canada, thrilled his audience with a series of clever imitations including bagpipes, a canary, and the immortal Rubenoff of Eddie Cantor program fame. With his violin he was called back on numerous occasions and generously responded with encores. He will appear at the theatre next week with a group of talented local amateurs.

Another artist who received a fine ovation was Eric (Jimmy) Corradi, scenic artist of the Capitol Theatre, whose mastery of the piano brought him well deserved plaudits.

The band was in its usual splendid form and the many ensemble and instrumental numbers that made up the program were well received. The band was under the baton of Lieut. Fred Jobson. Harold Barrett's fine baritone, heard in selections, rounded out a highly enjoyable program. President Jeff. Marvell, of the Belleville Kinsmen Club, acted as chairman.

In the United States today is a handsome, mustached young man who hopes to win American support for a "United States of Central European States." He is the Archduke Otto von Hapsburg, scion of what was once Europe's most powerful ruling family and heir to the vanished throne of Austria. Despite the breaking up of the old Austro-Hungarian empire, the reduction of Austria to a mere city of state, the establishment of a republic and its subsequent absorption by Adolf Hitler into the expanding German Reich, Otto's mother, the former Empress Zita, continued to hope for a Hapsburg restoration and seeing Otto as emperor.

FINNS ADMIT REDS MEET SUCCESS IN A FEW PLACES

Hostilities Continue Bitterly Despite 'Peace Rumors, Finnish Command Reports

6 TANKS DESTROYED

Pendulum Swings Back and Forth Between Peace Prospects and Indications of Continuing War

Helsinki, March 11.—(AP)—With Finland in anxious suspense regarding peace negotiations in Moscow, the Finnish High Command announced today that the invading Red Army continued attacks on the shore of Viipuri Bay "and met with success in a few places".

The communique, covering yesterday's military activities, indicated plainly that hostilities were continuing while Finnish Premier Risto Ryti and three aides were in Russia discussing a possible cessation of hostilities.

Between the City of Viipuri, threatened from the rear by shore attacks, and the Vuoksi River near the centre of the Mannerheim Line the Finns repulsed many local attacks, the communique said. Six red tanks were reported destroyed.

Pendulum Swings

The pendulum swung back and forth between peace prospects and indications of a continuing war.

First, official disclosure of peace talks in Moscow suggested that her defence of independence was almost over. Then, within a few hours, bitter words from the Moscow radio hinted it might be far from ended.

Perplexed Finns gathered that the Moscow negotiations might have hit a snag.

On one side was the surprising news of the Finnish peace delegation on the other, reports that Finnish forces still were battling a Russian army hammering with undiminished fury at Viipuri.

On one side, the Finns were told that Soviet Russia had named her price; on the other, they learned that Red Army bombers again had bombed civilian populations.

Terms Not Disclosed

Terms of the Russian proposals were not disclosed and the Finnish announcement made clear that "no decision has been taken up to the present."

The government merely told the warring republic yesterday that a four-man Finnish delegation was in Moscow at Russia's invitation and had begun direct negotiations "to find out whether possibilities exist for a cessation of hostilities and a restoration of peace."

But early today, after a two-day silence regarded as significant, the Moscow radio turned oral guns on Premier Risto Ryti, head of the Finnish negotiators, and renewed appeals to Finnish soldiers to revolt.

(Attacks on the Finnish government continued also in the Russian press yesterday. Although the invitation to discuss peace implied recognition of the Helsinki government an article in the Moscow Trade Union Organ, Trud, again hailed the Communist Terijoki regime which Russia had called Finland's only legal government.

Take Part of Line

(In Stockholm, informed sources said Russia had offered Finland a new Karelian Isthmus frontier, leaving Viipuri to the Finns but taking a large part of the Mannerheim line.

(These sources said the proposed new line would run from Taipale, on Lake Ladoga, to Summa. Russia they said, wanted islands in the Bay of Finland, but would leave the Finns Hanko, Southwestern port they regard as vital to their independence, and the Petsamo district, their ice-free outlet to the Arctic).

BROWNLEE APPEAL OPENS IN LONDON

Appeal is From Judgment of Supreme Court of Canada

(By Harold Fair, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, March 11—(CP-Cable)—The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council today began hearing the appeal of J. E. Brownlee, former Premier of Alberta, from a judgment of the Supreme Court of Canada in the seduction suit of Vivian MacMillan.

Their lordships at the outset caused a narrowing of the grounds of appeal by refusing Mr. Brownlee's counsel, Frank Gahan, leave to argue that the verdict of the trial jury was against the weight of evidence that the judge misdirected the jury.

At the trial in 1934 Miss MacMillan, who since has become Mrs. Henry Sorensen by her marriage to a druggist of Edson, Alta., alleged she was seduced by Mr. Brownlee on a number of occasions during 1930 and 1931 while she was a stenographer in the Alberta government service. Mr. Brownlee at that time was head of the United Farmer Government.

Verdict at Trial in 1934

The jury returned a verdict of $10,000 in favor of Miss MacMillan and $5,000 in favor of her father, Allan D. MacMillan, railway employee who was associated with his daughter in bringing suit. The trial judge, Mr. Justice Ives, refused to enter the verdict and dismissed the case on the grounds that damages were the gist of an action for seduction and that Miss MacMillan had not proved damages.

An appeal by the plaintiffs to the Alberta Court of Appeal was unsuccessful. The case then was taken to the Supreme Court of Canada which in March, 1937, allowed the appeal and restored the jury's verdict of $10,000 in Miss MacMillan's favor.

Grounds of Appeal Limited

After limiting the grounds of appeal today, the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council agreed to listen to counsel for Mr. Brownlee on the following reasons contained in the appellant's case:—

That special damage is necessary to support a seduction action and that no special damage was proved in that the respondent was never pregnant and had not proved any incapacity for service or other damage caused by the carnal knowledge which she alleges;

That the Supreme Court of Canada misconstrued the Alberta Seduction Act;

That the reasoning of Mr. Justice Ives, of the majority of the Alberta Appellate Division and of Mr. Justice Davis was to be preferred to that of the majority of the Supreme Court of Canada.

Mr. Gahan informed their lordships that he had obtained general leave to appeal, but this was challenged by the Lord Chancellor, Viscount Caldecote.

"Speaking for myself," the Lord Chancellor declared, "I am not much inclined to allow your general leave to appeal to be used so as to open all sorts of questions relating to the jury's verdict and I should be inclined to think that under the order-in-council it is quite plain that the only point on which you obtained leave to appeal was to discuss the important question of law raised by section V of the Seduction Act of Alberta."

After private consultation their lordships made the ruling on what it would be possible to argue.

Mr. Gahan spent the rest of the day reading the judgments of the Alberta Appeal Court and the Supreme Court of Canada.

The hearing will be resumed tomorrow.

War Strips Nudism as Money-Maker

Head of Nature Colony Finds Income Shattered —Some Members Sign Up

London, Mar. 11 (CP).—It turns out that the war and its accompanying blackout has stripped nudism of its money-making possibilities.

Mrs. Denyse Bedingfield's nature colony in a 20-room house at Frien Barnet, North London suburb, was a thriving business with nearly 600 members until the war broke out. Summoned for £38 taxes the other day she said her colony now had only one tenant who paid 30s a week. Her yearly income before the war had been nearly £2,000.

Allies May Purchase New Fast U. S. Plane

The United States War Department is considering the release of its latest model 400-mile-an-hour fighting planes for sale to France and Great Britain, it was reported authoritatively.

Aircraft trade circles heard that the plane is the Curtiss P-40, which France especially has sought since an earlier and slower model of the same type demonstrated its worth in actual combat.

Ordered less than a year ago, the first P-40 fighters are only now being completed for the Army Air Corps, which must approve foreign sales.

Under War Department official policy willingness to permit foreign Governments to buy would mean an even more promising craft is ready for production.

Persons familiar with the negotiations said efforts by Britain and France to obtain release of two new highspeed fighters other than the P-40 had been refused.

These were said to be the Lockheed P-138 two-motor interceptor pursuit, which attained a 420-mile-an-hour speed in a trial transcontinental flight, and a Bell P-39 which is armed with a small cannon.

Police Blotter

Apprehended at the rear of the Wray's furnishing store, Front St., William Lusk, 22 Charlotte St., was held by police over the week end. Lusk was taken into custody by P. C. Taylor, who was patrolling his beat at the time. The officer reported to his superiors that Lusk was in possession of a roll of linoeleum, said by store heads, to be worth $30.00. Charges have been laid Chief Kidd stated today.

"Speeder" Chased

P. C. Wright gave chase to a speedster on East Bridge St., early Sunday morning, but the motorist being sought crowded the police cruiser into the curb and fled under the cover of darkness. The officer obtained the licence plate number of the vehicle, he reported, and subsequent investigations are being carried out.

Fred Croft, 153 West Moira St., reported the theft of a first aid kit, stolen from his automobile at the rear of the family residence, some time over the week end.

Charges Withdrawn

The charges preferred against four local billiard room operators relative to the alleged failure of the observance of closing hours, as provided by by-law, were withdrawn and the matter dropped over the week end. A more recent corporation legislation permits billiard rooms to remain open until midnight on week days, and 11.00 p.m. closing on Saturday night.

Seventeen transients were given warm sleeping quarters at the police station over the week end, nine of which were accommodated Saturday night.

3 CANDIDATES

Officer W. R. Rierdon declared nominations officially closed.

Names of Candidates Read

He named the three candidates and stated they had filed the necessary qualifications.

He appealed to the audience to give all candidates a fair hearing and to "dispense with such heckling that at times is disgraceful." "You have three of the finest men in South Hastings before you, and I ask you to give each of them your serious attention. If not this meeting will be spoiled."

A minute later a loud outburst of cheering broke out as Messrs. Cory, Haig and Stokes appeared on the platform followed by stalwarts.

Col. W. R. Rierdon was nominated by Geo. Stokes for chairman. The motion was seconded by Mr. Cory.

Speeches by the candidates followed.

Aldershot, England, March 11—(CP Cable)—A verdict of accidental death was returned today at the inquest into the death of Lieut. H. R. Corey of the Carleton and York Regiment, Canadian Active Service Force, who was struck in the stomach last week by a ricocheting bullet on the rifle ranges.

Evidence showed that the cartridge was fired accidentally when it jammed in the breach of the rifle. Corey was from Woodstock, N.B.

Sidney, Australia, March 11 — (CP)—Experiments here show that a special kind of Australian wood offers twice as much resistance to incendiary bombs as steel plates of the same thickness. The fire-resisting qualities of the wood are to be utilized in production of war material, it is announced.

London, March 11 (CP)—A ray of sunshine in the blackout: The council of the Malden suburb of London estimates it will save 6,000 pounds ($20,000) a year on street lighting costs for the duration. The same holds true for every part of the United Kingdom, no doubt, and the money saved will go a long way toward paying costs of air raid precautions services.

Forty-eight years old and a member of the government since Mr. Hepburn formed his first Cabinet in 1934, Mr. Nixon frequently served as Acting Premier during Mr. Hepburn's absences from Toronto. In many quarters he was regarded as the likely choice for Premier in the event of Mr. Hepburn's retirement.

Text of Letter

Following is the text of Mr. Nixon's letter of resignation (150)—

Dear Mr. Hepburn—

It is with great regret I advise you I find myself so completely at variance with your recent policy, statements and acts, that I am convinced it would not be fair or honest to you as head of the government, to the people of Ontario who have honored me so greatly with their confidence during my 21 years in the legislature, or to myself, to continue longer in my position in your government.

In asking you therefore to accept my resignation as Provincial Secretary, Registrar General and Minister in charge of Game and Fisheries may I express the sincere hope that this step, the serious consequences of which I fully appreciate, might not end the warm friendship which has existed between us personally and between our families for so many years. Needless to say I will give your government all possible support in the legislature.

Please believe me to be, with kindest personal regards, sincerely yours,

(Signed) H. C. NIXON.

Press Statement

Mr. Nixon gave the following statement to the Press—

The Premier's alliance with Col. Drew (Lt.-Col. George Drew, Ontario Conservative leader) which has been so obvious for many months and which seems to exist for the sale purpose of concentrating every possible attack and embarrassment upon the Federal government, has been particularly repugnant to me and when this culminated in the motion of censure in the legislature I realized the time had come for the parting of our ways.

I have no apologies to offer anyone for my vote on that occasion. The resolution was precipitated upon the House without a moment's warning, the Premier stating if it did not carry he would at once resign, which meant the province would be immersed in the throes of a bitter provincial election on the issue of Canada's conduct in the war.

In addition, all the instincts of loyalty to my leader and friend and party—loyalty which has been instilled in me by a score of years in public life—prompted me to support him rather than to speak and vote against the resolution in the House, which I believe would have meant the defeat of the government.

Loyal to Supporters

But there is another loyalty in party government besides that which a member owes his leader, and that is the loyalty a leader owes to his supporters and the Premier was not fair to his supporters in forcing this resolution upon them, knowing as he did that everyone was opposed to the introduction of such a motion and intended to support the Liberal government of Mr King in the approaching Federal election.

I immediately afterward wired my Liberal executive at Brant assuring them I would support the election of the candidate they selected in convention.

Since the House has prorogued, matters have rapidly gone from bad to worse; continuous attacks have been directed against the Federal government and the conduct of the war by the Premier and Col. Drew. It does seem to me that if Col. Drew desires to dominate and dictate in Canada's war he should either be in the army, for which service he undoubtedly has great qualifications, training and experience, or he should be a candidate in this election for the House of Commons, which has the responsibility and jurisdiction for carrying on the war, not the legislature of Ontario.

Work For All

In properly looking after the affairs of this great province, which has one-third the population of Canada and one-half its wealth and industries, there is a work important enough for any government, its supporters and opposition.

I for one am content to leave the conduct of the war in the capable hands of the Federal government, and all matters pertaining to the military, whether it be disturbances by soldiers, "A.W.O.L.," or what not ,to military authorities and army discipline.

In the matter of the banning of the March of Time film, "Canada at War" as acting Premier I saw this screened two weeks ago and would not have hesitated one moment in ordering its release had the Premier not sent word to the Board that it was to be held for his inspection.

Astounded at Ban

I was astounded to read in the papers that it had been banned and still believe it to be a splendid picture and one which citizens of Ontario should be permitted to see now while it is being shown everywhere else in America.

But it is the present situation at St. Thomas the Premier's charges of violent disturbances at the school of the R.C.A.F. that has convinced me the break must come now and I must associate myself from his actions, the gravely serious consequences of which I need not now discuss as they are apparent to everyone, but I must protest emphatically against involving the Commissioner of the Provincial Police service as has been done.

It seems to me that this action strikes at the very foundations of the impartial effectiveness of that great branch of the public service and of the fair administration of Justice in this province. Indeed no member of the legislature, who either supported or opposed the passing of the Constables Act two years ago ever dreamed it would be prostituted to such a purpose, namely, to prove who is correct, the Premier who said there were violent disturbances, or Mr. Rogers who said there weren't.

This inquiry will seriously discount the future usefulness of two valuable public services and nothing but harm can come of it.

Returns to Farm

For myself, while I am not resigning my seat in the legislature, I intend to return to my farm in Brant and devote my energies literally to make two blades grow where one is growing now.

I honestly believe I made my greatest possible contribution in the last war by carrying on my farm when I was of military age. Probably I can make as great a contribution there in this war as if I sat at a desk in Queen's Park.

Admittedly the old farm, which has been in my family for nearly a hundred years, my son now being the fourth generation to farm, has suffered because of my many years of absence, but I like to think I can again be a good farmer. I aspire to no greater distinction.

I intend to vote for the return of the government of Mr. Mackenzie King, so also will my wife, my aged father now nearly ninety year who lives with us, and my son and daughter who are over twenty-one. My only regret is that the other two are not old enough to vote likewise. If anyone does not like this I will be in the happy position to tell them there what they can do about it.

St. Thomas, Ont., March 11 (CP)—Informed by newspapermen of the resignation of Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon, Premier Mitchell Hepburn said today the resignation would be accepted.

"I regret that my colleague didn't wait until he had all the fact before him," said Mr. Hepburn.

Referring to Mr. Nixon's dissent from the banning of the March of Time film, "Canada at War," Mr. Hepburn said the picture had been advertised in Vancouver as a political film. In Montreal it had been advertised as filmed under the auspices of the Dominion Government.

Mr. Hepburn said the showing of the film was advanced one month "in order to accommodate Mr. King (Prime Minister Mackenzie King)." It was number eight in a series yet was being released ahead of number seven.

His charges regarding trouble at the St. Thomas Royal Canadian Air Force training school were proved at the morning session of the inquiry and there was still more evidence to come, said Mr. Hepburn.

"I want to make my point clear," he said, "I believe there was lack of preparedness before the outbreak of the conflict and I do not believe that the Dominion government has exerted every effort in order to prepare for the fury which lies ahead.

"I would rather have my political record in this regard known than to falsely bolster up Mr. King for political reasons."

PATCHED-UP PEACE 'BREATHING SPELL' FOR NAZIS—TIMES

London Newspaper Says Ribbentrop's Visit to Rome 'To Promote Nazi Ascendancy in Europe'

BALKAN SITUATION

Germans Use Visit of Welles to Weaken Resolution by Talk of Patched-up Peace

London, March 11—(CP) — The true Nazi war aim is to destroy the British and French Empires and any "patched-up" peace would merely give Germany a breathing spell before renewing the war, the Times said today in commenting on the European visit of Sumner Welles, the United States Under-Secretary of State.

The Times also interpreted Reich Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop's visit to Rome as an effort to reconcile German, Italian and Soviet interests in the Balkans in order "to promote German ascendancy in Europe."

"Welles has come to Europe," the Times said, "not to make any peace proposals on President Roosevelt's behalf, but to learn the view of the British, French, German and Italian governments as to the possibilities of peace and report them to his government.

Allies Have "Nothing to Hide"

"The Allied governments have nothing to hide from him for they have not taken up arms lightly. He may be sure of all the help and evidence that the British government can give him. Meanwhile, his own government have furnished the four powers concerned with a statement of their views on economic settlement which should follow the conclusion of peace. Its value, however, will depend entirely on whether that peace will be durable.

"What is clear is that the Germans are using the visit of Sumner tempt to weaken the Allied resolution by talk of a patched-up peace. In almost every country they are saying privately that they are willing to establish, in vaguely defined and diminished territories, a puppet Poland or Czecho-Slovakia, they say, to satisfy the British and French Governments.

"To End Recurring Menace"

"The Allied governments are pledged, as Sumner Welles will be told, to end the recurring menace of German aggression and to restore full freedom and full security to the Poles and Czechs. Those are minimum aims dictated alike by honor and security.

"Unfortunately for their own ends, the German leaders spoil their own Ppropaganda for their patched-up peace by revealing to their own followers exactly how they would regard such a false peace—simply as a breathing space. They say—A pause to gather fresh forces for their work of destroying the British and French Empires. There are no illusions about such a peace in responsible quarters here.

"To fit the new policy of Nazi Germany to the old conception of the anti-comintern axis is therefore one of the main and most difficult tasks which the German foreign minister faces in Rome.

Balkan Problem

"Another delicate application of the same process of reconciling aims which are fundamentally opposite or competitive may well carry the Ribbentrop talks into the region of the Balkans, where the threat of Russian influence is steadily and unequivocally opposed by the Italian Government.

"Neither Russian and Italian, nor German and Italian, nor Russian and German aims can be altogether easy to fit in with one another in Southeastern Europe. No doubt, in the time at his disposal Ribbentrop's inventive and versatile mind will suggest plausible proposals to his hosts in the Palazzo Chigi.

Ribbentrop's Visit to Vatican

"The visit Ribbentrop is paying the Pope will also presumably have as its purpose to excuse as best he may the outrageous treatment of the Roman Catholic church in conquered Poland, and perhaps to hold out compensating plans for the future.

"He will certainly need more than persuasive eloquence if he is to make the slightest impression upon Pius XII.

"It is not hard in any case to sum up the main objective of his descent on Rome. It is, as always and everywhere, the consolidation of ill-gotten gains in central Europe and the promotion of German ascendancy in Europe.

Falsehoods Larger Than Ever

"The same objective is unconcealed in the falsehoods, larger and more positive than ever, to which Hitler, yesterday gave an unpleasantly sanctimonious setting. More and more he protests the defensive character of his war, and by consequence his sole right to dispose of weaker nations with whom, rightly to apply the words he misapplied yesterday, he refused agreement upon equal terms.

"His aim, in short, is to hold without war what he has gained by aggression."

BOWING TO OLD "KING COAL"

Leslie Burgin, British Minister of Supply, is shown bowing his head over a dish of camphor balls at the Supply Ministry's exhibit of coal by-products. Britain has an ample supply of coal and from it gets much of the sinews of war through carbonization. Among these by-products are toluene, ammonia and sulphur, ingredients for high explosives.

FORCED LANDING IS MADE IN U. S.

Ottawa March 11 (CP)—Conversations are going forward in Washington today between Loring Christie, Canadian Minister, and United States authorities over the fate of two members of the Royal Canadian Air Force who made a forced landing Saturday at Alexandria Bay, N.Y.

External Affairs Department officials said they had provided the Canadian Minister at Washington with all the facts concerning the forced landing and were waiting to hear the outcome of his conversations with United States authorities.

The landing was made at Alexandria Bay, just across the international boundary of the St. Lawrence River a few miles below the new Thousand Islands International bridge which President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Mackenzie King jointly dedicated a year ago last August.

Defence Minister Rogers Praises Work of Navy at Nomination Meeting at Kingston

By the Canadian Press

Spectacular political developments in Ontario almost overshadowed the Dominion election campaign itself today with the vote exactly two weeks away.

Federal party chiefs sought to gauge the potential effect on the campaign of Provincial Secretary Nixon's resignation from the Hepburn cabinet in protest against the Premier's criticism of the Federal government's war effort.

They also kept a weather eye on the special meeting of the Ontario cabinet in Toronto where it is expected the attitude of the other ministers will be discussed.

Official nominations yesterday placed 672 candidates in the fight for 245 seats and as the electoral battle narrows down Prime Minister Mackenzie King addresses a meeting in Montreal tonight and Conservative Leader Manion speaks at Cornwall, Ont.

ITALY, IL DUCE UNINFLUENCEABLE SAYS NEWSPAPER

Von Ribbentrop Leaves for Berlin to Report to Adolf Hitler

EXPERTS LEFT IN ROME

Rome, March 12.— (AP)—Having given Premier Mussolini an outline of Adolf Hitler's intensions, Germany's Foreign Minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, is returning to Berlin with the word that Italy will stay out of war as long as Mussolini considers it advantageous, informed sources said today.

Noting reports that von Ribbentrop's two days of conferences here might have been to "question and persuade Italy and its Chief," Il Telegrafo of Leghorn, Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano's newspaper, declared—

"Neither Italy nor Il Duce is influenceable. When Il Duce thinks of changing the attitude assumed last September, he will do it on the basis of absolutely his own evaluation of events".

Von Ribbentrop, after his weekend talks here with Mussolini and Pope Pius XII, was seen off for home last night by Ciano and other Fascist leaders.

His path crossed that of Finland's former President Pehr Evind Svinhufvud, bound for Rome, presumably to see Il Duce after a visit in Berlin which was linked with the drive to settle the Russian-Finnish war.

GERMAN SHIP TAKEN AS PRIZE

Hannover Scuttled by Its Crew but Salvaged by British Warship

London, March 12 (CP)—The Admiralty announced today that the German steamer Hannover, set afire and abandoned by her crew when intercepted by a British warship off Puerto Rico March 7. has been salvaged and towed to port as a prize.

(The Dominican government suggested yesterday that the American Republics protest the case as a violation of the Pan-American neutrality zone. Thirty-seven of the Hannover's crew reached Ciudad Trujillo, the Dominican capital, in boats, and 55 others were believed taken prisoners.)

The Admiralty's report on the 5,600-ton Hannover was included in its weekly review of shipping losses, which listed five British and no neutrals sunk by enemy action in the week ending midnight Sunday.

They totalled 18.673 tons, bringing to 640,000 the British merchant tonnage lost since the war began.

They were the Pacific Reliance, 6,717 tons; Thurston, 3,072; Counsellor, 5,068; Chevychase, 2,718, and Borthwich, 1097.

BANK'S CLERKS BUSY WITH LOAN

Officials Expect "On to Victory" Loan in London to be Oversubscribed in Day

London, March 12 (CP)—Subscribers eager to obtain a share in Great Britain's £300,000,000 "on to victory" loan caused a "run" on the Bank of England early today.

From 8.30 a.m., when the bank's clerks already were busy at their desks, there was a long stream of stockbrokers' clerks and others waiting to hand in applications. The lists for the three per cent. bonds maturing in 15 to 19 years opened today and will close tomorrow.

On the third floor of the bank a small army of workers dealt with stacks of letters piled high on green baize tables. Advance orders had assured the success of the loan last night, it was believed.

When announcing the loan a week ago today the government said that "the amounts which the government will need to borrow during the next 12 months will. of course be considerably greater than that figure."

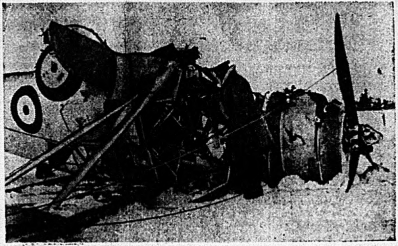
R.C.A.F. PLANE CRASHES IN U. S. TERRITORY



A United States' customs officer is shown guarding the wreckage of the Lysander plane which crashed on the American side of the border near Alexandria Bay, N.Y. Piloted by Pilot Officer A. E. Cannon and Leading Aircraftsman J. Duguid of Winnipeg, the R.C.A.F. plane was forced down when its fuel supply became exhausted. United States' officials are pondering the question as to whether or not to intern the fliers, neither of whom were injured by the forced landing, which badly damaged the plane. This picture was transmitted by Phone-photo and passed by the Canadian censor.

Eventual Mediation of War by Holy See, Italy, U. S., Reported Sounded Out by Ribbentrop

Rome, Mar. 12 (CP).—The Havas News Agency in its account of Joachim von Ribbentrop's visit to Pope Pius XII yesterday says the German foreign minister "reportedly sounded out the latter on eventual mediation of the European war by the Holy See, Italy and the United States."

The Havas story said: "Vatican official circles said the Pope made direct representations to von Ribbentrop against Nazi persecution of Catholics. The German foreign minister replied with a pledge that Catholic rights, especially in conquered territories, would be respected, they said. The audience, they said, was held at the formal request of the German government.

"Vatican circles said that in addition to discussing the German Catholic situation, von Ribbentrop suggested that Pius might participate in eventual mediation of the European war, perhaps with the cooperation of Italy.

"With Mr. Welles (United States Under-Secretary of State) due back in Italy Thursday for a final talk with Mussolini, it was reported an effort might be made to bring the United States into the mediation project.

"The fact that German newspapers carefully refrained from mentioning von Ribbentrop's audience with the Pope was held here to lend credence to the belief the Nazi envoy talked peace."

Candidates Discuss Issues At Quiet Nomination Meeting

Driving home their points with firm eloquence and using rebuttals that were sincere, yet flecked with splashes of humour, Messrs. McLean Haig, who is the official nominee of the Liberal Convention; Harry R. Cory, who is in the contest as King Liberal, and George H. Stokes, Conservative nominee as National Government candidate, three nominated candidates, who will carry the political banners in the forthcoming Federal election, and R. D. Arnott, K.C., M.L.A., addressed a large and enthusiastic representative audience of the riding of South Hastings in the City Hall auditorium Monday afternoon.

Stalwarts of both parties mingled with candidates on the platform and in the large crowd estimated at seven hundred people, that jammed the hall to overflowing. Many were forced to remain in the corridors, where they could hear but not see the speakers.

Following the filing of official documents, all three candidates were declared officially nominated by Chairman Colonel W. R. Rierdon, chief returning officer. Speakers were allotted forty-five minutes in which to make main addresses, with a ten-minute rebuttal.

All speakers received ovations from their supporters in the hall as they rose to speak. At no time, however, was there any heckling, and only on one occasion did a good-natured remark emanate from the gathering.

Intense interest was evident throughout the addresses. .. Spontaneous applause greeted remarks of the various speakers as they brought out various points. The large crowd remained seated until Mr. Sandy Burrows led the National Anthem at the conclusion of the addresses.

G. H. Stokes

"I am facing two Liberals here today," George H. Stokes said opening his brief address. "What is the matter, is the Liberal load so heavy that it takes two horses to draw it" he added amid Conservative laughter.

Referring to Mr. Cory's reference to he was a "fine old gentleman" the speaker humorously told his audience and Mr. Cory that "he respected old age—and out in the riding he was known as one of the boys."

In serious vein, the speaker charged the King Government with refusing the people their democratic rights in dissolving parliament, and calling an election before the business of parliament had been tabled. The privilege he took away is one of the rights our boys are fighting for in France, he said.

Mr. King arbitrarily suppressed the rights of the Canadian people, he said, "but, as in days of old. kings' heads fell when they did things of this nature, so will Mr. King's political head fall into the

McLean Haig

"I had a deep responsibility in filing my nomination today", Mr. McLean Haig, the first speaker said in his opening remarks. He paid tribute to former members who had represented the riding, making especial mention of the late Sir Mackenzie Bowell.

Declaring the forthcoming election is one of the most serious held since Confederation, he stated that no more serious duty has ever rested upon a people than rests upon Canadians today.

"The issue is too serious, and people are too serious about it to have political candidates deal in personal recrimination", Mr. Haig declared, adding that "there was only one issue at stake, the successful prosecution of the war."

Upon the outcome of the war, he continued, depended the future of the world, whether we as a people shall have freedom or bear the yoke of despotism and brutality as exists in Germany and Russia today.

Renewing his sharp attacks on what he termed the "Tammany Hall Machine" Harry R. Cory in his address charged that propaganda has been spread in the riding by the machine candidate. "It's too bad," he said, "that this propaganda had not been kept on the same high plane as the speeches had been in this hall."

He charged that word had been spread that Mr. McGaughey, his nominator had left his side, and that "if soldiers who are getting pensions vote for me, the pensions will be taken away. I say to those soldiers, 'Vote as you like' they can't take your pension away."

"Soon" said Mr. Cory amid laughter, "they will be holding me responsible for starting the war."

Form Letter

Referring to a letter published in the press purporting to have come from the Prime Minister to Mr. Haig, the speaker charged it was a "form letter" and one that had been received by 244 other candidates. "The Deseronto paper published a

No Reply Made To French Offers Says Daladier

50,000 Allied Troops and Transports Were Ready to Go to Aid as Early as Feb. 26 Had Helsinki Appealed for Help

ALLIES STILL WAIT

Foreign Office Sources Disclose Britain Has Sent Number of Offers to Finland of Aid on Large Scale—No Appeal Received From Finland in Past Twelve Hours

Paris, March 12—(CP—Havas)— Premier Daladier announced in the Chamber of Deputies today that an Allied Expeditionary Force of 50,000 men had been ready for dispatch to Finland since Feb. 26.

A transport fleet has been standing by since that date ready to carry the troops to Finland immediately following request for such aid by the Helsinki Government, the Premier said.

He emphasized, however, that Great Britain and France could not go to Finland's assistance unless asked. He had warned Harri Holma, Finnish Minister to France, that the Allies could assume no responsibility for Finland's postwar territorial status unless Helsinki appealed for aid.

Transports Were Ready

The French Government has received no reply from Helsinki to its offers of help, Daladier said.

"As early as Feb. 26," he said, "a considerable number of vessels were assembled—notably by England—to transport an expeditionary corps to Finland."

"France and England are still awaiting an appeal from Finland," Daladier added. "Why is this appeal from Finland necessary? Because the Swedish and Norwegian Governments with all their strength oppose the passage of Allied troops through their territory."

"To overcome this opposition it is necessary that we should have with us the complete support of a major part of the Swedish and Norwegian populations.

"I desire that my country shoul dnot, even amidst war, trample on international law."

Waits For Several Days.

The premier said that last Thursday he wrote to the Finnish minister here, Harri Holma, saying that for several days France had awaited an appeal from Finland, reiterating that France was ready to give immediate aid to Finland, and warning that if no request for allied intervention came the allies could not assume responsibility for the territorial status of Finland after the war.

Debate Postponed.

After the premier's statement the chamber, by a show of hands, agreed to postpone debate on aid to Finland until next Tuesday. The government proposal for such action was supported by Leon Blum, Socialist leader, and Camille Fernand-Laurent, Rightist.

Recalling in his statement to the Chamber that Finnish civil and military leaders have warmly thanked France for help so far given, Daladier said:

"France leads the powers which have furnished war material to Finland. Figures on this material aid have been published. In addition, at the request of the Finnish government, we have just supplied ultra modern bombing planes."

British Offers.

London, Mar. 12 (CP).—The British government has sent a number of communication sto Finland offering assistance on an enlarged scale, Foreign Office sources disclosed today.

These sources refused to say when the first note was sent, but they emphasized that the communications began "well before" the start of the Russian-Finnish peace negotiations.

Government sources disclosed that no appeal had been received from Finland in the past 12 hours, and that, "so far as we know", peace talks were continuing in Moscow.

672 CANDIDATES ACROSS DOMINION ENTER CAMPAIGN

Liberals Have 240 Candidates and Conservatives 213 in the Field

NO MAJOR SURPRISES

(By the Canadian Press)

The battle pit of Canada's general election was crowded today with 672 candidates, the majority of them supporters of either of the two major parties aspiring to conduct the Canadian war effort.

In 243 constituencies, a new membership to the House of Commons will be elected March 26 by the votes of between 70,000 and 90,000 soldiers in Canada and England and between 4,500,000 and 6,000,000 civilians.

When nominations closed across the country yesterday, the stake of government lay between the Liberal party led by Prime Minister Mackenzie King and the national government supporters of Hon. R. J. Manion. No other group nominated enough candidates to obtain a majority in the next house.

The Liberals nominated 240 candidates and the national government party 213 for the 245 seats. Two members will be elected in the Prince Edward Island riding of Queen's and in Halifax.

C.C.F. Names 96

The Co-operative Commonwealth Federation named 96, concentrating its strength in Ontario and the Prairie Provinces. Twenty-eight New Democracy candidates, 17 of them in Alberta, composed the fourth substantial group which included many Social Credit members of the last house.

It was a nomination day without major surprises. Party leaders

An R.A.F. plane also attacked 'and probably sank' a German submarine in the same area on March 4.

WANT REPRESENTATIVE ON CANADIAN BOARD

A resolution urging the appointment of a representative on the Canadian Chamber of Agriculture who would be in close touch with any legislature affecting cheese and other farm products, was passed by the Northumberland Cheese Producers' Association at their meeting on Saturday. The executive added that the Patrons' Association of Ontario was ready to spend $500.00 towards establishing and carrying on this office.

"DOPEY" FINDS OWN WAY DOWN TREE

Such humanitarian tasks as rescuing pet dogs and cats from precarious positions which their activities sometimes get them into seems to be all in the day's work for the fire brigade. Yesterday afternoon they were called to an address on N. Front St to rescue "Dopey" the family pet from a tree-top, where she had been chased early in the morning by a neighbour's nasty doggie. All day she had clung to the branches high above the sidewalk, afraid to venture down again although the source of danger had long since given up the chase, and having visions of puss roosting in the tree all night her owner called the brigade to the rescue. Placing the ladder against the high branches, a fireman climbed almost to within reach of puss, when "Dopey", suddenly became frightened again, rushed down the bole of the tree and disappeared into the woodshed.

Dr. Welsh Addresses Women's National Conservative Club

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's National Conservative Association was held at the Club rooms on Monday night, with the President, Mrs. Harry Naylor in the chair and was largely attended. The guest speaker of the evening, was Dr. Welsh, M.P.P., for East Hastings. He was introduced in a capable maner by Mr. R. D. Arnott, K.C., M.P.P.,

The subject of Dr. Welsh's address was "Win the War". He more than excelled himself in bringing out the present condition under which the government is operating.

Other speakers were Mr. Frank Cushing and Mr. George H. Stokes, National Conservative candidate for South Hastings. Mr. Cushing gave a very timely and sound address in which he reviewed the events leading up to the present contest and gave a very concise exposition of it.

Other contributions to the program were a vocal duet by Mrs. Percy Cornell and Mrs. Harry Rollins and readings by Miss A. LaRue which were greatly enjoyed. The meeting closed with the singing of "God Save the King" after which lunch was served.

DISTRICT KINSMEN MEET AT BANQUET

Members Pay Tribute to District Executive for Fine Administration

MUSICAL PROGRAM

In one of the jolliest meetings held here since the inception of the local club, a meeting that exemplified to the fullest the fine fellowship and camaraderie that exists in clubs throughout Canada, over one hundred Kinsmen of District No. 6 gathered here last night to pay tribute to their District Council executive.

From Peterborough, Kingston, Oshawa and Cobourg they came, while the guests of honor were the twenty-five members of the newly-formed Marmora Club, which attended in a body. There was music, mirth and a mingling of good fellowship that well bears out the proud Kinsmen boast of being one of the finest service clubs in existence.

There was excellent food and splendid entertainment. The "Snake Room" resounded to the conversation of "Hail Fellows Well Met" and throughout the whole meeting there was a genial undercurrent of sincere enjoyment at the meeting with men bound by the common bond of service to the nation and community in which they live.

District-Governor Welcomed

In the long beautifully decorated banquet room of the Queens Hotel, they uproariously greeted each other when they stood up in "club formation." They gave vociferous salutation to District-Governor Austen Peters, National-Secretary "Banty" Banting, District Secretary Dave Rankin, Past National President "Rich" Richards, District-Treasurer Leslie Rice; Mr. B. C. Sisler, member of the original band of Kinsmen whose efforts grew into a Dominion-wide organization, and Orvie Boake, Past National Registrar.

The entertainment was of high quality and variable. Walt. Aselstine's trombone mellowed through the hall in the "Men of Harlech" Pantasia; George Cornish, famous Belleville entertainer was never in better form with stories both short and tall; Reg. Morgan, Kingston Kinsmen, who brought his accordeon "for company" regaled the clubmen with Kinsmen songs and war-melodies ,and last but not least, Jimmy Bankier in well rendered tenor solos.

Novel Departure Advocated

A novel departure in national service was advocated by District-Governor Peters in a brief address to the clubmen.

A malicious propaganda is being spread by foreign elements along the border cities and in other parts of the United States, with regard to the Dominion, he said. A plan is afoot whereby every Kinsmen in Canada can defeat this enemy propaganda to a large extent merely through the medium of a three-cent stamp.

"Let every Kinsmen write a letter to a friend in the U.S.A. and tell them that there are no red tape or bayonets in Canada. Tell them we will give them eleven dollars Canadian for their ten-dollar American bills, and that they will be treated with the same courtesies as before. The result will be" he said, "a large invasion of a peaceful army of American tourists. There is no better way in which our friendly neutral neighbor can help us with foreign exchange."

Responsibility of Kinsmen

It was the individual responsibility of every Kinsmen in Canada, to assist to the utmost the various war organizations that are appealing for funds, he said. "It should not be the policy of clubs as organizations to give funds, as in many cases there is a temptation on the part of members to feel that their responsibility has been relieved.

President Jeff. Marvell was in the chair and extended welcome of the host club to the visiting clubmen. Ray Underwood, Marmora and Richy Richards, Cobourg, acted as sergeants-at-arms with Ford Woodhouse, Marmora and Fred Slater, Kingston, leading the singing. A brief address was given by National Secretary "Banty" Banting.

Salvation Army Plans Big War Work Program at Home and Overseas

For more than 70 years, the Salvation Army founded by William Booth in 1865, has been setting the world an example of practical Christianity, carrying the ideal of brotherhood and kindness into neglected places. For its energy and efficiency in the work it undertakes it has won universal respect.

This week the Salvation Army sets out to raise the sum of one million dollars. People may ask:—"Why does the Salvation Army need such a large sum of money at this particular time? It is not their regular custom to broadcast appeals of this kind, and of this magnitude."

The answer is this—"Because we are at war." In addition to the regular work of caring for the poor, the unfortunate and the wayward here in Canada, it has its work to do for the soldiers.

Many people will remember the high regard in which the Salvation Army was held by the soldiers in the last great war. They shared the hardships of the campaign in France and Flanders, and everywhere the soldiers went they extended Christian helpfulness and comfort, even under the thunder of the guns. What they did then they are prepared to do again now, and it is largely for these wartime activities that funds are asked from the general public.

Serving the Soldiers

In practically every training camp in Canada, it is pointed out—and in those also in which Canadian troops are finishing their training in England—the Salvation Army has established a "hut" or Recreation Centre for the service of the soldiers. That service, officers explain, takes in a wide field—physical comforts ...... recreation and education......moral and spiritual guidance..........religious service and counsel. It will be extended to France when the Canadian soldiers join the line, as close up as the military authorities permit.

Here in these centres, soldiers off duty gather under friendly auspices to enjoy themselves in the midst of war and all the discomfort and misery it entails. Entertainments are organized by the officers in charge,—"sing songs", concerts, motion picture shows, educational classes. Religious services are conducted. Here also are established dry canteens where the Salvation Army's famous coffee and doughnuts are served, as well as other light refreshments which form such a welcome addition to army rations.

A reading room with newspapers and magazines is part of this service in the stationary camps, and also a writing room where a man will find free materials for writing a letter home. Generally too, the Salvation Army centre provides a private "Sanctuary" where men wishing privacy from noise and confusion may retire for a few moments of meditation and prayer.

In the big cities all across Canada, as in England and France, Salvation Army "Service Homes" are being established, where soldiers on leave may obtain food and decent sleeping accommodation. The Women's Auxiliary have organized to knit socks, scarves and other woollen comforts and mend soldiers' clothes.

The record of the Salvation Army in Canada and overseas gives its officers confidence that the campaign now being launched will appeal to the generosity of the Canadian public, and that one million dollars will be fully subscribed.

FERGUSON, WHITE RUN IN HASTINGS-PETERBOROUGH

Candidates Address Electors After Official Nomination at Marmora

OTHERS SPEAK

Marmora, Mar. 12 (Special). — Nominations were held in the town hall, Marmora, on Monday afternoon, with the spacious hall filled to the doors with an enthusiastic audience. Reeve W. R. Linn acted as chairman. The candidates who will contest the Hastings-Peterboro riding are George White, Madoc, National Conservative, and Rork S. Ferguson, Norwood, Liberal.

On the platform with the candidates were Dr. Welsh, M.P.P., East Hastings, and Mr. T. Carley, barrister of Peterboro.

Rork S. Ferguson, M.P.

Mr. Ferguson was the first speaker and he gave an outline of the benefits derived by the electors of the riding since he had been elected as their representative in 1935. He spoke of the positions he had helped to obtain for a large number of the younger people of the riding, who had applied to him for assistance, also of the splendid mail route now from Belleville to Bancroft and Maynooth, and that soon there would be a mail route to Apsley. He also discussed the premium on cheese. He spoke of the difference in conditions now and five years ago and declared the trade treaty with the United States, made by the King Government had been a great boon to the farmers in this district. Ever since the King Government had come into power there had been a threat of war and Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Hon. Ernest Lapointe were sincere in their efforts to prosecute the war. The experience in the Quebec election of last year has taught us that we must have unity. He was sure the people of Canada were behind Mr. King in his efforts and he asked his listeners to study the situation and vote for the welfare of Canada as this was the most important vote they would ever be called upon to cast.

George White.

Mr. George White then was called on to speak and he complimented Mr. Ferguson on his speech and congratulated the party on their choice of a candidate. He regretted that Canada had been plunged into a general election in the midst of winter and also in the midst of war. He assailed Mr. King and his government for patronage and inefficiency in their war efforts. He claimed that Mr. King had scuttled parliament and run away.

He accused Mr. King of taking away the freedom of speech and freedom of the Press and radio, as Hitler is doing in Germany. He said "I am not going to be gagged by Mr. King, I belong to that body of men, who fought in the last war. Why send our boys to fight Hitler, when we allow a dictator in our country". Mr. White criticized the King government, charging failure to provide unemployment insurance as promised in the election of 1935. He also discussed the criticisms brought against Hon. Ian Mackenzie and the appointing of Hon. Norman Rogers as Minister of Defence. He complained of the clothing and boots furnished the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and the rifles supplied to them. He also attacked Mr. King and charged the government failed to co-operate with Britain in an air-scheme. Dr. Manion, if elected would do away with radio licenses, introduce unemployment insurance, remedy Old-Age pensions and oppose Conscription. He would set up a livestock board of livestock men and packers, the livestock men to predominate. In conclusion, Mr. White said he had every confidence in a National Government for Canada.

Mr. Carley

Mr. Carley then addressed the meeting and said he had known Mr. Ferguson for a long time as an honest man and had no hesitation in recommending him to represent the people of the riding. He stated that Mr. King was well known as a statesman and gentleman. He referred to Dr. Manion as scuttling the Conservative party and also of leaving the Liberal party in 1917 because he favored conscription. He said Dr. Manion refuses to give the names of his Cabinet ministers, a rule that has always been followed by Premier King and also by the Hon. Mr. Borden in 1917.

Mr. Ferguson spoke again briefly on the unemployment situation and the better conditions of the farmers at this time. He said he had no complaints from the soldiers in regard to clothing or equipment.

Mr. White again took the platform and said he resented Mr. Carley's statement that a lawyer should not represent an agricultural community. Mr. White claimed that ninety per cent of his clients were farmers, which gave him a good knowledge of farmers' affairs. He said his first duty at Ottawa would be to remedy the mail situation at Bancroft.

He made the statement that ninety per cent of the soldiers enlisting were Conservatives. Dr. Manion has promised to have a youth ministry that will handle and control all youth interests.

Mr. Carley again took the stand and discussed the question of profiteering, stating that the King Government had made it impossible to make more than 5% profit. He accused Dr. Manion as a camouflage in National Government and stated that at this time "politics do not count. What is needed is men experienced in war and its needs and men that will give their best. Both Liberal and Conservative blood would be spilled, and we must give honor to them all, and the vote should be given the man with experience."

The meeting closed with "God Save the King."

Nomination Meeting In Northumberland Riding Quiet Affair

The long-awaited pyrotechnical political display, expected to give electors of Northumberland County the chance to see their now famous candidates, Jamieson Bone, National Conservative, and W. A. Fraser, Liberal, in a verbal duel, failed to materialize at the official nomination meeting held in Warkworth yesterday.

And for the simple reason that Mr. Fraser failed to put in an appearance when he was called to the platform to give his speech.

The large crowd, however, disappointed in the non-appearance of the cross-fire of words in which both orators, it was believed would rise to oratorical heights, remained to hear the National Conservative candidate and his supporters hold a meeting of their own.

Both candidates have filed the necessary documents and deposits, however, and the battle in the hustings will be renewed minus the verbal clash between two candidates who up to the present have been throwing all their heavy artillery into the field.

After the chief returning officer had officially declared nominations closed, Mr. Fraser was paged in the audience. He failed to appear to make the customary nomination speech, and proceedings continued without him. Reeve Fred Gardiner, of Forest Hill Village, spoke in the interests of the National Conservative candidate in an address in which he sharply scored the King administration.

Herman Morrow, Hilton, Warden of Northumberland County, acted as chairman for the meeting.

basket on March 26th."

"I am foursquare behind Dr. Manion and National Government policies," he said. "However I am content to leave the issues with you. I am the fellow who is driving the one-horse sleigh."

R. D. Arnott, K.C., M.P.P.

Declaring he did not intend to go into party squabbles or criticise the King Government on its do nothing policy since 1935, R. D. Arnott, K.C., M.P.P. who spoke in Mr. Stokes' interest, said the main issue was the liberty of free speech and preservation of democracy, "because what happened in the past three weeks saw the very foundation stones on which the country is built, being attacked."

"How was he justified in refusing to tell the elected representatives of the people the country's business," he said. "This is a serious issue, and one that should make every Canadian irrespective of religion, color or creed get behind Dr. Manion to stop it."

Charging the King Government with "muzzling" Conservative speakers through radio censorship, Mr. Arnott said it was confining the most important election since Confederation, to the hustings. "It makes no difference what the leaders tell us. Mr. King refused to give us business information, and he refused to let the leaders give the nation information by radio censorship," the speaker said.

Closing of Parliament did not answer the questions of the Opposition, Mr. Arnott stated. King's attitude was "you will have to take my word that the war is being prosecuted with the greatest diligence and care and you will have no opportunity to criticise me or my government."

Vote of Censure

The recent vote of censure passed by the Ontario Government came from the Ontario Liberal Government, the West Hastings member charged. "Mr. King stated the Ontario Legislature passed the motion made by Premier Hepburn and seconded by Col. G. A. Drew, leader of the Opposition. He knew that was not the case. After a blistering scathing attack upon the King administration, Premier Hepburn put the motion to the house. It was seconded by The Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, and President of the Ontario Liberal Association. That's how much reliance one can place in this wild election campaign of today."

The fact that this country is engaged in a life and death struggle is no excuse for the shutting down of the House at Ottawa, the speaker declared. "I ask Mr. Haig how he can justify Mr. King's action in refusing to tell you people through your representatives, what he has been doing since war broke out. The place for that information was on the tables in Ottawa. The representatives there are your representatives who are the foundation stones of democracy. I challenge Mr. Haig and Mr. Cory to tell you what justification they have in supporting a man who will take action like that?"

Kicked Boys Out

Taking issue with Mr. Haig's statement that the Bennett Government was responsible for the deplorable state of the militia. the speaker stated, that he hated to compare its record with that of the King Government. "This administration kicked the boys getting 20c a day at the airport out on the highways. Let them blame that on the Bennett Government", he said.

What has happened since 1935 to help the boys and girls who were unemployed in this country What about war preparations? No man can say that he did not know war was coming. so if one pair of boots, or any part of equipment was missing to equip the troops when war began, there is absolutely no excuse for it, Mr. Arnott said.

Charges Effrontery

"We had all hoped that politics and patronage had been thrown out of the window when war began" he said, "yet people have had the effrontery to deal with it here today. Dr. Manion told Mr. King that politics would be forgotten. patronage would be dispensed with, and he would co-operate in every way — but he was completely ignored".

The same thing happened to the Ontario Government War Resources Committee appointed, with no politics concerned. Colonel Drew reported what had happened to this committee at Ottawa. It received the same reply as Dr. Manion, the speaker added.

National Gov't. Needed

Appealing for support of the Manion Government, Mr. Arnott said a National Government is needed in a country engaged in a life and death struggle. "Dr. Manion has admirable courage in fighting for one purpose — to get this thing over as quickly as possible, and get ready to look after the boys when they come home so they can get a break, a place in society and a job. Forget your politics on March 26th" he urged, "and support the National Government".

In a brief rebuttal speech, he replied to Mr. Haig's criticism of the Ontario Government's vote of censure. "There are 18 Conservatives in the House," he said, "and we certainly did vote for it. I was glad to be one of those 18 who had the courage to vote, and not one of the 25 Liberals who scurried through doors like frightened rabbits. And I was also proud that I was not one of those Cabinet ministers who sneaked down to their constituencies, and there stated they would support Mr. King, after voting for the censure."

tration, Mr. Haig told his audience that "it is on the offensive, and its attitude since war started has never been successfully challenged. People believe, he said, that it will be overwhelmingly returned to power, and Hastings South might better be represented by a man who will sit on the government benches.

Government policies. he said, would be outlined at future meetings and he intended to deal with but one issue. Mobilization of everything was necessary to not only carry the war to a successful conclusion, but in order to facilitate the great period of demobilization that will follow the war.

Turning to service branches activities since the war began, the speaker declared there had been a complete elimination of political promotions. This policy, he added, was in direct contrast to that of the govt. in power during the last war. Dr. Manion, he charged, had not given a single instance of promotion made under political patronage.

Slashed Estimates

Charging that Canada's militia was in a deplorable state after the last war, Mr. Haig stated that R. C. A. F. aircraft were not fit for war duty. He charged the Bennett government slashed militia estimates so that more than one-half of Canada's flying officers were discharged. "Our air force was vastly inferior to that of any other country in the world" he said, "but recently Air-Marshal Bishop told a meeting that today Canada's air force was among the finest in the world."

Defending the war activities of the King Administration, the speaker outlined several phases of organization and activities of militia, army and air force. "On Sept. 6th. when Canada formally declared war, 45,000 troops were under arms. On Sept. 29th the government accepted the Imperial Government's offer of a colossal air-training plan," he said.

75,000 Men in Uniform

A first Canadian division of troops is in England as is an all-Canadian Air Squadron. Later the second contingent arrived in England and Mr. King has announced the formation of a 2nd Canadian Division. "Today", he said, "Canada has 75.000 men under arms or ten times as many as previous to the war. Over 100 million dollars worth of equipment and supplies have been purchased."

Admitting that some mistakes had been made, these must be expected in a project of such magnitude, he pointed, out adding that these had been rectified and provisions made so that similar errors would not occur again.

Equipment of the troops was not as full as it might have been, he said. Increased expenditures of the Bennett Government would not permit of the spending of huge sums along these lines. The King Government purchased equipment and supplies diligently and carefully, but when war broke out it made huge efforts along these lines. He outlined in figures the many purchases made of military equipment and clothing.

Answers Charges

In his brief address of rebuttal, the speaker said he knew the people were not interested in the many charges levelled against him. but he felt as if he should deal with a few of the personal ones levelled by Mr. Cory.

Answering Mr. Cory's charge that he had purchased a membership card in a Conservative association. "you must remember, I am in business. My colleagues and I belong to a great many organizations for we think it is good business. (Cheers and laughter).

Refuting Mr. Cory's charge, "that he would walk across the floor of the house if the Conservative government went into power, I will answer that by saying, that Mr. Cory pledged his word to support the successful Liberal candidate at the nomination held here a few days ago."

Had Moved Resolution

He charged that Mr. Cory stated at a recent convention of an Ontario Mayors' Association, that he had received bitter treatment at the hands of the Hon. Norman Rogers. Later he said, Mr. Cory had moved a resolution that the Mayors of Canada forget political affiliations and place 245 independent candidates in the field to fight for the people. "And Mr. Cory claims to have been a Liberal all his life," he added.

Regarding Mr. Arnott's charge about the closing of Parliament, Mr. Haig stated, that the Prime Minister's justification in so doing was the same as that of Mr. Arnott when he voted for the motion of censure in the Ontario Government.

"I ask him who voted for it. It was the majority of the opposition. That is the reason why the election was called when it was."

In a concluding appeal for the support of the gathering, Mr. Haig declared that the speeches of the Hon. Dr. Manion are nothing but criticism. But the war efforts of the King Government will go down in history as the greatest of any government of all time".

Harry R. Cory

footnote below the letter, but I want to tell that paper that I am a better Liberal than either the president or secretary of the Association."

"It doesn't take $1,200.00 a year, or contracts to hold me in the Liberal party," he declared.

He again levelled his attack against the "machine" asserting that it had not followed its constitution, in holding annual meetings. "It hibernated for five years, ran the thing to suit themselves and then picked a Conservative to represent the electors."

"Had a Liberal been named the candidate at the nominations and the nominations run on the square, I would have given him my entire support the same way in which I gave it to Charlie Cameron in '35," he declared.

Charges Convention Nominations Illegal

"The nominations" he charged, "were absolutely illegal, the executive of the machine are holding office illegally, but after March 26th I will hold a mass Liberal meeting and put this machine where it belongs."

He further charged that the right of the electors to select delegates to the nomination had been taken away, and "the finger placed on the poll chairmen who were told how to appoint the degelates. Is this Germany or Russia, or a free democratic country? These delegates were told to vote for Mac Haig and I can prove it."

He denied being an "Independent Liberal." "I am a King Liberal who is supporting the government," he declared.

He reiterated charges that "this machine is a Tammany Hall machine with headquarters on Bridge Street who are endeavoring to tell Liberals of this riding what to do, or else......"

Furthermore, he added, it is time the Liberals of South Hastings and Conservatives too asserted themselves and once and for all break up these machines that are trying to "dictate our future for us."

Challenges Haig

Turning his attack on Mr. Haig, the speaker "challenged him" to reply to charges that he held a ticket in a Conservative Association; that he had told the President of the Conservative Association that he would be a Conservative candidate at the nomination, and that he had in a former address favored railway amalgamation.

Smiling at his Conservative opponent, Mr. Cory declared that "I have nothing against George Stokes. We are good friends, and I would not want that friendship hurt—but all I can say is that he is a fine old gentleman. I ask you to compare the candidates," he said, "and draw your own conclusions as to who should represent you in Ottawa."

"Send Jack Coleman" sang out a voice from the audience.

"I'll Have Patronage"

Declaring that patronage had ceased when war was declared, the speaker told his audience that the patronage of every riding in Canada belonged to the party and not the member." If I'm elected and the King Government is returned, which it will be, I'll have the patronage and they can't take it away from me. "Mr. Haig can get a certain amount of political funds, speakers and literature, but that is all.'

He had been a Liberal all his life and for the past 16 years had worked actively in the party's interests, he said. "I have spent my money and time, but I don't know Liberalism as this machine knows it. I defy them to say they are Liberals of the King type."

Reminding his audience of the time when some of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's colleagues walked across the floor of the house to join the Robert Borden Government, the speaker asked if a candidate now could further his own interests by walking across the floor, would he do it? What have you got to hold him, if he takes it in his head to walk across the floor to the other party," he demanded.

Old Tory Party

In his speech of rebuttal, Mr Cory denounced the Manion government as the "same old Conservative party of years ago. They can talk as they like about National Government, but they hand out the same old tripe as the Bennett Government did back in the days of 20c slavery at the Airport."

Referring to Dr. Manion's promises, the speaker declared "if he is elected we are going to have another one-man government, as we had once before. Show us who is going to be in his cabinet?" he challenged. "I ask him to do it."

"Unemployment had been reduced 50 per cent since 1925 when we had in Trenton, 2,000 on relief besides 1,500 getting 20c a day at the Airport," he said. "Unemployment is the baby of the province because the municipalities are the babies of the province. He charged the administration of relief was handled by the Ontario Government through the municipalities. "Why ask the Federal Government to do anything about it when the Ontario Government is the only one that can?"

He charged the Ontario Government Conservatives voted for the vote of censure against the King Government merely to embarrass that government, concluding with the statement that "winning the war was the main issue, with secondly the tried and trusted King Government that will not be replaced in the middle of the stream with a government about which we do not know a thing."

Thumb Nail Sketches of Candidates

GEO. H. STOKES

George Henry Stokes, candidate for South Hastings of the National Conservative party, was born at Wellman's Corners, Rawdon Townships. His family moved to Hillier Township, Prince Edward County, but a few years later again moved to Thomasburg, where Mr. Stokes received his education. When 21 years of age he started farming near Tweed. Later he extended his farm capacity to specialize in the breeding of pure-bred Ayrshire cattle. For more than fifteen years he conducted a retail dairy business years. In January, 1931, he was ap-

Mr. Stokes' first venture in municipal affairs was as clerk of Hungerford Township, serving for fifteen years, afterwards being elected reeve for five successive years In January, 1931, he was appointed Sheriff of Hastings County, continuing until October, 1934, when he was replaced by the Hepburn government.

He married Florence Craig, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Craig. His daughter is married to Mr. J. McAllister Wilson of Belleville. Mr. Stokes has one grandson, John Stokes Wilson.

His father was a well known farmer and was an unsuccessful candidate for the Legislature in 1898, afterwards being appointed license inspector for Hastings. His mother was Sarah Henry and belonged to a well-known Irish family of Hastings County. His uncle, Adam Henry, ran a flour, feed and grocery business on Upper Front Street for over forty years.

McLEAN HAIG

McLean Haig, Liberal Candidate for Hastings South, is considered to be the youngest candidate to ever run in this riding for the Federal Government. In spite of his youth Mr. Haig has already amassed an extensive record of public servitude.

At present, Alderman of Belleville, he has been chairman of Finance for the past two years, and only Monday night brought in his second financial report, giving the taxpayers of the city a reduction of 4 mills in the tax rate. Besides serving on the Council, he has been President of the Chamber of Commerce, President of the Rotary Club, a member of the Board of Governors of the Belleville General Hospital and a Director of the Canadian Concert Association.

He was born in the Town of Campbellford, the son of the late Dr. and Mrs. Andrew Haig. Receiving his public and high school education at Campbellford schools, he attended Queen's University and received Bachelor of Arts Degree.

Later he entered Osgoode Hall to study law. While at Osgoode, Mr. Haig was considered the most popular student and during his third year, was elected President of the whole student body. Following his graduation, "Mac" entered the financial world and spent several years with a bond company, in Toronto.

It was while in the financial business that Mr. Haig accepted a position with the Regina Leader-Post, one of the strongest Liberal papers in the Prairie Provinces.

In 1934, McLean Haig came to Belleville to join with his brother in purchasing the insurance business of Fisher & Son. Since that time, he has become one of the most prominent leaders in the municipal life in the city.

HARRY R. CORY

Mr. Harry F. Cory, "King" Liberal, who has entered the election lists in Hastings South as a third candidate was born in Prince Edward County the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Cory, who later moved to Belleville and operated a grocery store on Bridge Street West. Mr. Cory went to school in Consecon and when a young man entered the service of the railroad in the capacity of a telegrapher.

In 1924 he entered the brokerage business in Trenton in which capacity he has acted since. Taking an interest in the municipal life of his community, he ran for council and was elected in 1933. Acting one year in this capacity, he forged to the front and offered himself for the mayoralty. He succeeded and occupied that important post for a period of six years.

During his regime at the head of the council, Mr. Cory was instrumental in bringing to Trenton, four new industries, and for the installation of a new water-works and the erection of a new public school.

A strong adherent of the Liberal Party all his life, he became actively engaged in its work sixteen years ago. He is still the president of the West Hastings Liberal Association in Trenton, and in 1935 although defeated for the nomination for his riding threw his support behind the successful nominee, Judge Charles Cameron.

Not satisfied with what he termed the "tactics of the machine"? this year Mr. Cory broke away from the old party and entered the field as a "King" Liberal after his defeat at the nominations here by Mr. McLean Haig.

AT THE BELLE

"GERONIMO"

Epic is a term a film-appraiser is reluctant to bestow on any film, but Paramount's "Geronimo!" wrests the ultimate praise from this writer. It is now on the Belle screen.

The flaming saga of the brutal swaggering Apache Indian who opposed the United States Army in a death struggle on the parched plains of the Great Southwest proceeds against a breathtaking background. Its pace is blistering and its cast brilliant.

Preston Foster, Ellen Drew, Andy Devine and William Henry carry off top cast honors, but they are closely pressed by Ralph Morgan, Chief Thunder Cloud, full-blooded Cherokee, who plays the title role; Gene Lockhart, Margorie Gateson, Kitty Kelly and others.

Peopled so particularly well, the film flows furiously through romantic action composed of more sheer thrills than we've seen in a month of Sundays.

During the second administration of President Ulysses S. Grant, the territories of New Mexico and Arizona are overrun with ravaging savages led by Geronimo, bloodthirsty killer who leaves few alive to tell of his massacres, plunderings and raids.

Geronimo has sworn a vengeance of death to 1,000 white men for personal wrongs. His brutal band of braves have no taste for the pipe of peace which has been proffered by the Great White Father in Washington. The Indian campaign of terror leaves a havoc-streaked trail by which they mean to claim the Great Southwest as their own.

A punitive expedition reaches the battle-scarred region to sue for peace. Geronimo gives and asks no quarter. Thus, the fight with the last great enemy begins, and is not over until Geronimo's trickery and treachery furnish filmongers with pulse-pounding moments they will not soon forget.

Tarkington's "SEVENTEEN"

Jackie Cooper and Betty Field, who became the sweethearts of the nation in "What A Life", are together again in "Seventeen," Booth Tarkington's immortal story of young love, which Paramount offers as the companion feature attraction.

In their second appearance together—a reunion demanded by fans the country over—Cooper and Miss Field bring to the screen two of the best-loved of all Tarkington's grand American characters, Willie Baxter, the tormented Romeo in a flivver, and his sweet, sophisticated sweetheart, Lola Pratt, the seventeen-year-old lady with a past.

Tarkington's story—the drama of you, you, and you at seventeen—has been translated onto celluloid with all the laughs, merriment, human warmth and humorous disillusion that made the novel an American classic. To it have been added many an original touch by Director Louis King and his hand-picked cast.

Otto Kruger plays Willie's long suffering father; Ann Shoemaker is his understanding mother and Norma Nelson his pesty Kid sister. Peter Hayes of many a previous wise guy role, plays the unsufferable George Crooper, Willie's principal rival in love. The Belle news of the Hour will also be exhibited.

AT THE McCARTHY

"THE INVISIBLE MAN RETURNS"

"The Little Man Who Wasn't There" is really a big man and he's there—but you can't see him.

The "big man" is six foot, four inch Vincent Price, title character who supplies most of the eerie thrills in Universal's amazing mystey, "The Invisible Man Returns", now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

Formidable Assignment

Assignment of Price, well-known stage player and comparative film newcomer, to the new role meant a monumental task for the giant actor. He follows in the footsteps of Claude Rains, original and successful creator of the character in "The Invisible Man", produced in 1933. Price is unseen until final moments of the story and he is forced to project a definite personality through the mere medium of his voice.

Price won the role only after extensive voice tests in which a score of actors were considered. His tall, 180-pound frame was ample for the physical rigors of the part. His stage background provided the theatrical presence necessary to the unique part.

Memorable Performance

"When I saw "The Invisible Man" in 1933 I framed in my mind, just from hearing the inflection of Rains' voice, a picture of his actual appearance," Price claimed during production. "The image matched almost perfectly when his face finally appeared on the screen. If I can do the role just half as well as Rains did, I will be gratified."

Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Nan Grey and John Sutton have other leads in the new film, directed by Joe May with Ken Goldsmith as associate producer. The story was suggested by "The Invisible Man" written by H. G. Wells.

The latest world-wide news as presented by Fox Movietone Newsreel and described by Lowell Thomas, also an amusing technicolor cartoon "Life Begins For Andy Pandy" and one of the cleverest skating subjects ever shown on the screen, blended into a musical revue entitled "Ice Frolic", is also shown in addition to "The Invisible Man Returns", now at the McCarthy Theatre.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Four Wives"

Many who went to the Capitol must have done so, as this writer did, with the profound conviction that the "first, fine, careless rapture" of "Four Daughters" could not be recaptured, even by the incredible magic of the movies.

We soon found out that we were wrong.

We found out that the current film has all that its predecessor had, with an added fillip that may be due to a number of things. It may be the babies. It may be the extremely live wire marital prospect pursued with such airy determination by Kay Lemp, the only one of the four daughters to remain footloose and fancy. free as the picture opens.

The characters are, of course, the same, with an important addition.

The unforgettable "gateswinging" lovers who called each other "Lemp" and "Dietz" are again in the capable hands of Priscilla Lane and Jeffrey Lynn.

Lola Lane is the ambitious Thea. who, after much quibbling decides to accept the proposal of self-made and agreeably braggart Ben Crowley, played by Frank McHugh. The gentle Emma is now the wife of the eager but stammering Ernest Talbot—played with the same zest by Gale Page and Dick Foran.

Rosemary Lane is the singing daughter, the airy, indolent, leisure-loving Kay, who sets her pretty cap with such determination for the handsome young doctor, Clint Forrest, played by Eddie Albert of "Brother Rat" fame, who is the important addition.

And John Garfield, who won stardom by his portrayal of the tragic role of the misanthropic Mickey Borden in "Four Daughters" appears again as he lives in the imaginings of his widow, Ann, who fears that marriage to Felix may be an injustice to Mickey's memory although it was sympathy rather than love that brought Ann to Mickey ,her real love for Felix is dampened by the thought of Mickey's failure. It is with the thought of making Ann lose her almost mystic fears that Felix completes the "only a middle" melody. As Ann hears the ovation given the symphony over the radio, she realizes that Mickey is no longer a failure in need of her strength.

Claude Rains sees to it that Adam Lemp, irascible, tender, music-loving father of the four daughters is as likable as ever. And May Robson rules the household as Aunt Emma, the gruffly gracious. Vera Lewis, as the gossipy Mrs. Ridgefield, who was seen in the last moments of "Four Daughters" swinging on the gate, has an opportunity for many laughs and makes much of her chance. Michael Curtiz directed both pictures.

Madoc

Madoc—Queensboro defeated Eldorado in the third and final game of hockey on Thursday night at Madoc Arena in a very fast and exciting game to decide who will have the cup for another year. A large crowd was present and the game at times was quite rough but the referees kept it in hand pretty well. The score was 2-0. Eldorado won the first 3-1. Queensboro the second 1-0. The presentation was made by Dr. Nicol, assisted by Tom Burnside. Speeches were made by the captain and managers of both teams.

Referees—G. Keller, Heyworth, Madoc.

Madoc won from Norwood 6-5 in the second game of the play off, each having won a game. The third and deciding game will be played on Monday night in Norwood.

It was a real good game considering the ice was very heavy. Checking was close but very clean game and one of the largest crowds of the season were present.

THE 'RED SHIELD' OF THE S. A.

Perhaps there is no uniform more universally known than that of the blue tunic and cap of the Salvation Army bearing the 'red insignia,' which to soldiers of war is always referred to as the "Red Shield." There is scarcely anyone who does not know about the humanitarian services which are carried on by the familiar blue-clad men and women of the S. A.

This week the Salvation Army, supported by community leaders in all parts of Canada, is conducting an appeal for $1,000,000 with which to carry on its extensive services for the Canadian troops here and abroad and for the civilian population. The sum expected to be raised in Belleville this week by popular donation is set at $3,500, the bulk of which will be available for the Salvation Army "Red Shield" war work.

Not only does the S. A. look after the interests of Canada's soldiers at home, in England and in France, but the blue-clad officers of this organization can be found daily in our police courts and prisons lending spiritual and civil advice to the less fortunate of every community in the Dominion. The army provides meals and beds to unemployed, to say nothing of the neighborly aids that are dispensed by the S. A. "League of Mercy," a band of women who visit the sick, the aged and infirm.

The army assists in rehabitation of discharged soldiers. The work of the "Red Shield" operations in the last war still dominates the minds of returned soldiers, all of whom speak in the highest praise of the Salvation Army's efforts during the 1914-1918 conflict.

The current appeal of the Army is to provide funds to carry on this same work today. In September of 1938, one year before the present war was declared, the Army offered its services to the Canadian Government. Already in operation in England and France there are are over 100 army huts and rest rooms for Canadian soldiers, while the Dominion camps are now enjoying the services of the canteen and club-huts which bear the familiar "Red Shield."

HITLER'S LATEST

Much of the "sound and fury" of Hitler's former speeches was lacking in his Sunday address in the military museum in Berlin. But he did use a high-sounding phrase about what he predicts will be "the most glorious victory in Germany's history." He spoke for only eleven minutes.

With something of the sentimentalist which lies behind such a strange character as Hitler, he injected himself into the war's possible cost. He said, "I live for but one task, day and night to think of victory, struggle, work and fight for victory, if necessary not to spare my own life in the conviction that this time Germany's future will be secured for centuries." That reference to himself, "if necessary not to spare my own life," was the colossal egoist speaking. Why should he mention himself when it is others who are paying the supreme price of war, which Hitler started? Why should he mention his own name when there were thousands of Germans killed in Poland because he sent them in against a peaceful land which he was determined to seize? Like the egoist he puts himself before all. He thinks that the German people put him above everything else.

The Hitler who talked so often and threatened so often about war besought Providence in his Memorial Day address to conclude the last chapter of the struggle of nations honorably for the German people. Here again the sentimentalist who showed none of the kindlier feelings for the weak nations and peoples which religion, particularly Christianity, inculcates, prayed or used the form of prayer for the war of his making.

Of course Hitler claimed the war was forced on him for he said, "The western plutocracies declared the wildest war on and threatened the annihilation of National Socialist Germany because of her spirit of a closely-welded people."

Hitler did not tell the German audience that he was caught redhanded trying to seize Poland, and because he used violence as a means of settling international differences against the spirit of international law it was clear to every nation that Great Britain and France took the only course that would guarantee the security of the nations of the world.

He speaks the truth when he speaks of the world in opposition to Germany. That is clear. Germany has not a real friend in Europe or anywhere else. The spirit of the world, belligerent and neutral, is against Hitler's policy. Hitler knows that the world has strong views about the course he has been pursuing.

SPRING BREAK-UP PROCEEDS SLOWLY

There used to be one way of speaking of an early spring, to point out that the dust was flying on the streets on St. Patrick's Day. But that was in another era, a pavementless, highwayless era.

Dust is not so prevalent now as it was in the merry windy days when on the macadam roads there would be layers of dust waiting for a wind, even a spring day wind on the seventeenth of March. Yet if the roads are clear of snow even off pavement wind can lift some dust, though not in oldtime swirling-type of clouds which used to be raised.

This year the roadways are bare, because of careful ploughing of the snow to the sides of the streets. Sidewalks are also largely free of snow and ice. But small piles of snow and ice remain at the curbs.

The thing which pleases is the reappearance of the roads after their winter's burial under ice and snow.

Whether on Sunday next there will be weather like the weather of other days when the slightest breeze would raise the dust on St. Patrick's Day awaits on the Weatherman. He has been kindly during the past few weeks, has desisted from sending snow and typical March weather, and has preserved a coat of snow for the ground.

The year is coming to the time when the spring break-up will arrive. Indications are for a rather orderly and mild passing down the Moira River of the ice, unless there should be some very unusual weather conditions of which there seems no likelihood. Four years ago the river went on a wild rampage. That break-up was costly for many firms in Belleville. Since then the annual freshets have been mild. Dates of the break-up vary. In rare occurrences the ice in the river has not broken up until the middle twenties of the month. Present prospects are that the break-up may not occur for some time perhaps for two weeks or so for the ice is still firm.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Finding If Room Substances Are Causing Asthmatic Attacks

Now that it is known that patients do not "have" to have attacks of asthma, that there is some cause for them, it would be well for asthmatics to not rest content with "treatments" which relieve the attack, but to seek the cause.

It has been found that in a great many cases the attacks are due to inhaling substances to which the individual is sensitive or allergic—fur, feathers, house dust. Accordingly, scratch tests—scratching the surface of the skin and applying some of the suspected substances or substance to the scratch—are made. This may take a considerable time and at the end of the tests it may be found that a nose defect, some food, or other condition is the cause.

To find out whether it is something in the air of the room that is responsible for the attacks, a room should be made free of all substances that could be to blame.

Dr. Jonathan Forman, Columbus, in Ohio State Medical Journal, states that a room can be made free of substances that could possibly cause the attacks by removing every object from the room and thoroughly cleaning the walls and woodwork with a brush and clean warm water to which has been added some water softener such as tribasicphosphate.

Furniture such as an unupholstered rocking chair, a hard straight chair, and an army cot, is also washed carefully and returned to the room. Pillows are to be filled with feathers, properly enclosed in a material such as oil cloth, which will not allow any feather dust to come out. The oil cloth cover should be large enough to allow the pillow to be squeezed down by the weight of the head without forcing out dust. Clean linen should be used on the cot.

The windows and heat registers must be carefully washed and tightly closed to prevent air, smoke or dust from entering. The adjacent hall and bathroom should also be cleaned and kept free from cosmetics, perfumes and dusts. If air is too dry, some boiling water—on a hot plate—should be used.

"After a few days confinement to these quarters, if there are no complications, the patient will improve. Besides relieving the patient, it proves that the patient is allergic to these substances, and since most cases of asthma are due to these substances, this method should be given a trial in every case."

Arrives Too Late To File Papers

Lindsay, Ont., March 12—(CP)—John R. Hand of Peterborough, arrived here yesterday just seven minutes too late to file his nomination papers for the March 26 federal election.

He said he had been delayed by trouble with his automobile.

Mr. Hand, former publisher of the Fenelon Falls Gazette, was the recent choice of a co-operative commonwealth federation nominating convention to contest Victoria constituency on behalf of the party.

Those who filed nomination papers with Returning Officer A. J. Campbell before the two o'clock deadline were Bruce McNevin, Liberal, who sat in the last parliament and C. D. H. McAlpine, national government candidate.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Diplomats hold the spotlight on European war fronts for the moment, but the Red forces have not eased up in their struggle.

While a Finnish delegation talked peace in Moscow yesterday with the Soviet Government, Russian troops blazed away at the Finns defending Viipuri and the Mannerheim Line along the Karelian front.

Pehr Evind Svinhurfvud, former president of Finland, meanwhile concluded private talks with minor German officials in Berlin and left for Rome where he may see Premier Mussolini. Finnish Government circles at Helsinki, however, said his mission was entirely private in character, since the former president had not discussed his trip with the government.

Somewhere between Rome and Berlin Svinhufvud's train passed that of the German Foreign Minister, Von Ribbentrop, hurrying back to Berlin following secret talks with the Pope and with Mussolini and Count Ciano, the Italian Foreign Minister. There were reports Von Ribbentrop spoke to the Italians about closer co-operation of the axis partners, especially with reference to a proposed Italo-German-Russian sphere of influence in the Balkans.

There was also interesting news from diplomatic circles in London. The government revealed that Soviet Russia had approached the Foreign Office Feb. 22 with suggested peace proposals to be transmitted to Finland, but that the British had refused to convey such "onerous" suggestions of Finland.

Prime Minister Chamberlain told Parliament that in response to a Finnish request for additional aid, Britain and France would furnish such aid to the limit of their resources.

Sumner Welles remained in London, continuing a series of exploratory talks with the British Government on British war aims before returning to Rome for further conferences with Mussolini.

What's What in the R. C. A. F.

Definitions in the Royal Canadian Air Force have aroused public interest through the general change noted in the terminology employed by newspapers and other publications since the start of the Second Great War.

The British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, in the promotion of which Great Britain, Canada, Australia and New Zealand are greatly concerned, is still known to the press of the United Kingdom as the "Empire Training Scheme." In the initial stages of consideration, this term was applicable. It was then a "scheme" but since agreement was reached the project has been a "plan" that is being developed with great rapidity. The word "Empire" has disappeared, although one still makes reference in conversation and print to the "British Empire" in preference to the somewhat longer but more accurate "British Commonwealth."

The words "machine" and "ship," as applied to "aircraft", are outlawed in the Royal Canadian Air Force, except as required by stores procedure.

"Aerial," it is indicated in Air Force administrative orders, is to be used only in connection with wireless telegraphy. Where used previously in other connections, the word "air" has been substituted, as in "aerial gunners" and "aerial reconnaissance," which have become standardized as "air gunner" and "air reconnaissance."

"Acrobatics," rather than "aerobatics" are evolutions voluntarily performed with an aircraft other than those required for normal flight.

All types of air-supported vehicles are known as "aircraft", which are officially divided into two groups, "aerostat", lighter-than-air aircraft, and "aerodyne," heavier-than-air aircraft. The latter comprises the kite, glider, aeroplane, gyroplane, helicopter and ornithopter.

Finally, the "aeroplane" can be a landplane, a seaplane or an amphibian, the former being either a float seaplane or a flying boat (boat seaplane). The latter can be either a float amphibian or a boat amphibian.

A bulletin received here recently by the United Kingdom Air Liaison Mission reproduces a "letter to the editor" of an English newspaper pertaining to current aeronautical slang, and is reproduced as follows:

"A civilian once asked me if the Air Force had its own aeronautical slang; if, that is, we had any phrases corresponding to such nautical expressions as "Shiver my timgers" and "Blow me down a hatch." I was rather startled, as I had never thought about the question; but after a little thinking I realized that we have hardly any parallel terms. Offhand, I can think only of two—"To be in a flat spin" and "Just ticking over," the latter being a reply to the question, "How are you?" In addition, the verb "to flap" may have some aerodynamical significance, though I rather doubt it. There is certainly no lack of bogus terms, which are used outside the R.A.F. but never in it. Examples are "joystick" and "stunt," which belong to the popular press, and "Quit stalling", which seems to be confined to American films.

"The Royal Air Force has its own peculiar vocabulary. It is very puzzling to outsiders and newcomers, though it must be said that recent arrivals in the service pick up the jargon very quickly and soon speak it fluently. A recent Air Ministry Bulletin quoted some examples of Air Force slang, but they were not very representative: "ace", though used widely in the last war, is now a term of derision insofar as it is used at all; "stick is not really slang, but a sensible abbreviation for the unwieldy "control column"; "hedge-hopping" and "porpoising" are merely descriptions, and fairly straightforward ones at that; "splitassing" is certainly a good and and expressive word, but "stall" is a scientific term and not slang, while "zoom" is confined to air stories for boys. Genuine Air Force slang, as used to-day, consists not so much in the manufacture of new words as in the strange misuse of existing ones.

"Let us take a few examples. The word "type" is used in a peculiar sense, for a person is either a "good type" or a "bad type"; he may even be a "shocking type." The whole of humanity is divided into "types", as though they were aeroplane engines. For all I know that may be the origin of this use of the word, but it is certainly exclusive to the Air Force. Then there is the word "view"; one's reactions to anything are described by the "view" one takes of it. One may take a "good view", a "bad view", a "dim view," a "poor view", a "gloomy view," or any other sort of view. It is a very hard worked expression. Then there are "shows". An incident may be classified as a "good show" or a "bad show", sometimes an "excellent show" or, at the bottom of the list, a "black show." One gets black marks or brown marks according to the shows one puts up.

"There are not many current expressions of approval. "King," used as a noun or adjective, is perhaps the most widespread. But there are many words to describe the darker sides of service life—boredom, annoyance, mistakes, faux pas, reprimands, and punishments. "Popular" flying slang is used only in a derisory sense, as when a normal routine flight is described as "dicing with death". But perhaps the oddest feature of our present day usage is the word "actually." In Air Force English, this word has no meaning, but is rather like a full stop. It is tacked on at the end of a sentence, like a tin can tied to a dog's tail.

"In Evelyn Waugh's "Black Mischief," a Royal Air Force pilot makes a landing in the jungle, and turns round and says to his passengers: "That was a wizard show.' Five or six years ago he probably would have said that Now I think he would say: "I took a good view of that, actually." For slang is always changing, and must eventually become out of date. I remember at school receiving a visit from someone who had left for Cranwell a few months before. His talk was of strange phrases, and I remember chiefly "Good scheme" and "Sound effort" as expressions of approval. I suppose they were ephemeral sayings in vogue at Cranwell at the time. Now I expect the Squadron Leader uses "Good show" or "Nice work" instead.

"The net result of Air Force English is an over-simplification of the values of life. Everyone is a "good type" or a "bad type", and everything is a "good show" or a "bad show." One spends one's time getting "black marks" and "brown marks," and occasionally, one "boobs" and "collects a raspberry." Sometimes there is a "flap on," in which case one is "browned off." One bears with "line-shooters," although they are "awfully binding." In fact, the "whole show" is "very tricky", and "I take a poor view of it," "actually."

If inanimate articles could speak what strange tales of adventure, of hardship and exploration could be told by a pair of century-old skates that are now on exhibition at the Belleville Chamber of Commerce. Relics of the past century no one knows how old these skates really are, and their unconventionally foreign appearance appeals in mute command for recognition of the strange adventures they have witnessed.

Stories of intrepid sea-farers, tales of fearless journeying into the far-frozen North in search of the phantom "North West Passage" that so intrigued sea-faring men of our grandfather's time, all are linked with the history of these skates according to Mr. J. O. Herity, who relates the story of the late Mr. Henry Gauen of Ivanhoe, member of an Arctic expedition nearly one hundred years ago.

The story of these skates has to do with the last ill-fated Polar expedition of Sir John Franklin and one of the many searching parties that almost came to grief in their efforts to discover the noted man's ultimate fate. This particular expedition was commanded by Captain Robert J. McLure and set out from England in 1850 in the "Investigator" to look fo rthe Franklin explorers, then unheard of for over five years.

Aboard the "Investigator" as it sailed from Plymouth was one Henry Gauen, the ship's carpenter, and with him he took the skates that are now on exhibition at the local Chamber of Commerce. The story of these searchers, as they rounded Cape Horn and fought their way up the west coast of North America, through the Bering Strait, reads like an epic from the journeys of Captain Cook or Columbus. Fighting their way along the coast of North America towards the east, the party crossed the mouth of the Mackenzie river and proceeded as far as Melville Sound where the Arctic winter shut down with all its unrelentless ferocity. Running short of provisions as their stock of food become putrid and had to be thrown away, the party were in sore straits long before Spring came and set their boat free of the ice.

Throughout the summer months the party conducted surveying expeditions, all the while on the sharp lookout for the missing Franklin explorers, but again winter shut down with recurrence of food scarcity forcing the party to go on short rations until Spring again set their boat free. When the ice was gone, however, it was discovered that their boat was caught inside a sand bar preventing them from ever getting the "Investigator" to sea again. The summer passed as the previous one and as the winter shut in no aid to help them in their precarious position had been sighted.

It was decided to divide the party into three groups, take what provisions they could pile on their sleds and start out in search of help or home. On April 7th, just as they were abandoning the boat, aid reached them when Lieutenant Pim with a scouting party from another searching expedition came up on them. After a hazardous journey over the hummocky ice the entire party arrived at the Lt. Pim's boat, the "Resolute" and during the summer of 1854 arrived home in England just four years after their departure.

Later Mr. Gauem married and moved to Canada, taking up a little farm near Ivanhoe, Ontario, where he lived out his life, dying in 1899 at the age of 77. Shortly after Mrs. Gauem's demise, the skates which had accompanied throughout his Arctic journeyings were given to Mr. D. L. Fleming, who recently brought them in to the Belleville Chamber of Commerce. One daughter of Mr. Gauem, Mrs. Richard Kerr, lives near Tweed.

Charming Land of Heroes

Like all other progressive countries, pre-war Finland found it expedient to angle for tourist business. And Finland, in the days of her peaceful prosperity, had very much that was appealing to offer to visitors in search of change and beauty. The country of sixty thousand lakes and eighty thousand islands, with its forests of pine, spruce and birch and its fishing streams, is, in its physical charactertics, suggestive of Muskoka, the ideal terrain for the vacationist. Added to this is the romantic charm of the ancient blended with the practical convenience of the modern. "Whatever your idea of a holiday," says the Association of Finland Travel, "you can realize it in Finland." And the accompanying literature, with its picturesque views of natural beauty spots, of historic memorials, fine up-to-date cities, castles, bathing beaches and scenes of native life, bears out the claim.

There is a pathos in turning the pages of these tourist booklets, in view of the torture to which the country is now being subjected at the ruthless hands of communist Russia. Take this brief note about Viipuri, now being pounded into obliteration: "One of the oldest towns of Finland, with well-preserved historical monuments. Monrepos park, famous for its beauty." Also the reference to its thirteenth-century castle— mentioned in news dispatches as a special target for Russian guns — where "the visitor can admire the building methods of those days, which enabled the castle to withstand numerous sieges." Modern artillery reduces such masonry to powder, but it cannot destroy the spirit of the defenders.

Here is the summing-up of the characteristics of the "average Finn" who is described as "quiet and industrious and very much alive to the sacred demands of hospitality." "The tourist may be sure of finding people willing to help him everywhere," the account continues, "and as a knowledge of foreign languages is much more common in Finland than in the majority of nations, he will not have far to seek for some one to direct him. In view of the history and surroundings of the Finns, it is not surprising that they should be a strong and athletic race." The world is being given a thrilling example of the qualities of the inhabitants. Let us trust that it will not be too long before a free and peaceful Finland will be able to turn once again to thoughts of tourists accommodation instead of being preoccupied with a savage invasion of the homeland that is absorbing all the attention and energy of the people.—Hamilton Spectator.

Start of Maple Syrup Season Almost at Hand

Springtime Industry Provides Extra Funds for Hundreds of Farmers in Eastern Ontario

HARD MAPLES BEST

It won't be long now. "Sap's Runnin'" the familiar Spring cry of rural Ontario will soon be echoing in sap-bush and sugar house on hundreds of Ontario farms.

Within a few days, buckets will be hanging on trees, spiles will be driven into the holes of sturdy maples, and Ontario's million-dollar industry will be under full way.

While the counties of Lanark, Leeds, Grenville and Glengarry lead in production, practically all the provincial municipalities contribute something to the total output.

According to I. C. Marritt, B Sc. F. of the Department of Lands and Forests, many of the maple woodlots occupy rocky sites that are unsuitable for cultivation, and owners in these cases derive a considerable percentage of their income from the sale of these products.

The question is often asked, if tapping of trees is injurious to their growth, and the answer to this, Mr. Marritt says, is found in the many woodlots which have yielded a large run of sap for years, and are still healthy and sound.

It is possible that the annual growth of trees in a sugar grove is decreased because of the making of syrup, but this loss is considered to be relatively small. Provided that correct management methods are used with regard to thinning, young trees will replace those that die out.

Many operators maintain that it is injurious to tap trees under twelve inches in diameter. A number of operators of woodlots where there is a larger proportion of small trees, tap these in alternate years, and place only one bucket on them.

In most sections the sugar or hard maple is the only species tapped, but where the soft or silver maple is plentiful these are utilized but the syrup is not considered to be as good as that of hard maple.

Many Still Use Old Time Methods

The early settlers followed a crude method of manufacture learned from the Indians, and these methods with little improvement are still used in some of the back sections of the country. An axe was used to tap the trees and wooden spouts, troughs and buckets were used to catch the sap. The boiling-down process was performed with large, iron kettles suspended between two trees. A later development was the use of sheet iron pans built over a brick or stone fireplace. Most syrup makers with a large output, and many of the smaller producers, now use modern evaporators installed in a "sugar-house."

Cleanliness has an important gearing on the quality of the product and all utensils should be thoroughly cleaned at the commencement of operations, and at the close of the season to ensure a high quality of product. Many of the better operators have covers on their buckets to prevent dilution by rain water.

The sap is a very dilute solution containing 95 to 98 per cent water, which has to be evaporated by boiling and a better quality syrup will result if the evaporation is performed with as little delay as possible.

There are several methods of ascertaining when the proper density is reached in the boiling process. Liquids have various boiling points and these temperatures are related to their density and the altitude above sea-level.

At sea-level water boils at 212 degrees Fahrenheit, maple syrup at 219 F, soft sugar at 238-240 degrees F., and hard sugar at 245 degrees F.

ONTARIO CABINET TO MEET PREMIER

"The Cabinet Council is for the purpose of obtaining a clear understanding of just where we stand. I am not going to make any demands on my colleagues."

The premier stressed, however, that he would not ask for the resignation of any minister, who, like Mr. Nixon, differed with his leader on the question of the Dominion Government's war effort. The principle of cabinet solidarity, he said, "should not apply outside the provincial field."

Take Over Portfolio

Mr. Hepburn said he probably would take over Mr. Nixon's portfolio until the cabinet can be reshuffled, a matter which may take several months.

"The irony of the matter is that if Harry Nixon has any idea of leading the Liberal party in Ontario he would have had the job some time ago," Mr. Hepburn said. "When I was seriously ill and was advised to give up the premiership, I called him in and asked if he would go to the Lieutenant-Governor and be sworn in as Premier. He refused, saying that when I left political life he would leave, too."

No Apologies to Make

His statement said Mr. Hepburn's "alliance" with Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew, Conservative leader, was "particularly repugnant" to him. When the Premier and Col. Drew united in a vote of criticism of the extent of the Dominion Government's war effort, he said, "I realized the time had come for the parting of our ways."

Mr. Nixon said he had no apologies to make for voting for the resolution of criticism with the Premier and Col. Drew, saying it was introduced "without a moment's warning" and he felt obligated at the time to his political leader.

Since prorogation of the Legislature "matters have rapidly gone from bad to worse," Mr. Nixon said. He cited particularly the Premier's action in banning the March of Time film "Canada at War" from Ontario and ordering an inquiry into incidents at the Royal Canadian Air Force Technical Training centre near St. Thomas.

No Chance of Election

The premier said there was not the "slightest chance" of a provincial election in the near future merely because of Mr. Nixon's action.

Others in the Liberal fold were quick to express allegiance to Mr. Hepburn.

"I've got a job to do," said Hon. Peter Heenan, Minister of Lands and Forests. "And that job is looking after the forest resources of Ontario. I have no time for politics."

Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, declared: "I have no intention of resigning."

Mr. Nixon cleaned up his desk at Queen's Park yesterday after submitting his letter of resignation and making a statement to newspapermen. He will continue as member for Brant, the riding he has represented since 1919, but will devote more time to his farm.

INQUIRY FINDS MEN WALKED OUT

The commissioner issued a finding to that effect last night after an all-day investigation into charges of a "walkout" and "violent disturbance" at the school. Premier Mitchell Hepburn made the charges and ordered the probe.

Enters Second Stage

Today the investigation entered a second stage with the visit of newspapermen to the school, where on invitation of Hon. Norman Rogers, Minister of National Defence, they were permitted to question the staff and personnel. Premier Hepburn, who engaged in protracted debate with Mr. Rogers over the authenticity of his charges, declined an invitation to visit the school, completed last year as a provincial mental hospital and offered to the Dominion government on the outbreak of war.

"I believe it is that between 200 and 300 men of the training school on Feb. 10 marched into St. Thomas and that it took military police three days to round up all who were absent without leave," Commissioner Stringer's report said.

17 Witnesses Questioned

Cecil Snyder, Deputy Attorney-General of the Province aided in conducting the investigation under the Constables Act and questioned 17 witnesses. Then he asked Mr. Stringer to "find that there was a walkout" and "to say that the Premier of Ontario was right in his statement and that the Minister of National Defence was wrong."

Advised of Mr. Stringer's finding at his farm home near the training school, Mr. Hepburn said: "The report backs up my statement in the fullest detail. It is a terrific indictment against a minister of war in Canada that his carefully considered statement of denial should be proved false."

No Violence Occurred

The inquiry, strictly, was to determine under the Constables Act "if the situation in St. Thomas and Elgin County, by reason of alleged indictments there, necessitated the assignment of additional police officers in that area." Commissioner Stringer found that no "violence actually occurred" and deemed it unnecessary at present "to detail further civilian police officers to this area."

He ruled it was beyond his jurisdiction to inquire into the cause of the walkout, declaring that "a matter solely within the jurisdiction of the Department of National Defence."

Charges Students Fed-Up

In his allegations last Tuesday, Mr. Hepburn charged that students at the school were fed-up and disgusted with doing nothing but shiring door knobs and polishing floors."

"It took the military authorities three days to round them all up and the censors warned local newspapermen that the story could not be puglished," he said, adding: "I challenge Rogers now to deny that there was a violent disturbance and that these young men were parading up and down the streets in protest against the lack of training at the school."

The commissioner found that airmen marched to a central location in St. Thomas and then dispersed, some remaining in the city and others "leaving without permission for points as far distant as Toronto." Military police, he reported, were active all through that week-end rounding up whatever men could be found in the St. Thomas area.

Strictly Civilian Affair

The hearing was strictly a civilian affar, although one airman in uniform came voluntarily to testify. The airman, J. A. Telfer, said he had been two months in the air force and had received no training in the trade of aero-mechanic for which he had enlisted. He took no part in the walkout and was at lunch when it occurred.

Citizens of St. Thomas, employees of the Ontario Government, Provincial Police constables and newspaper reporters were the witnesses whose stories of seeing airmen marching into St. Thomas and talking to them on the streets and highways, were recounted before the commissioner.

CANADIAN FLIERS ARRIVE IN ENGLAND

The first squadron of the R.C.A.F. to arrive in England for active service is shown here disembarking at an unnamed port. The Canadian airmen were greeted upon their arrival by Capt. H. H. Balfour, under-secretary of state for air.

672 CANDIDATES ENTER CAMPAIGN

were nominated as expected — Prime Minister King in Prince Albert; Dr. Manion in Fort William; J. S. Woodsworth, C.C.F. leader, in Winnipeg north centre; J. H. Blackmore, leader of the Social Credit group in the last house, in Lethbridge.

Herridge Runs in Kindersley

The founder of the New Democracy movement, Hon. W. D. Herridge, former Canadian Minister to Washington, entered the lists in the Saskatchewan constituency of Kindersley. This is his first attempt to win an elective office.

Canadian troops in England, who have missed the fanfare of the political campaign at home, will cast their votes between March 14 and 23. The official list of candidates was cabled overseas during the night and will be posted at Aldershot and elsewhere for the information of members of the Canadian Active Service Force and of the 110th squadron of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

The overseas vote is expected to total about 25,000 if the men all exercise the franchise. Members of the active service in Canada are to vote between March 16 and 23, and, like the troops overseas, will vote for candidates nominated in their home constituencies.

Nominations brought into the political arena several noted newcomers to election combat, including Dr. Herbert A. Bruce, former Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario who is running in Toronto Parkdale as national government candidate.

Former Premier in Field

Dr. J. T. M. Anderson, former Conservative premier of Saskatchewan, entered the contest in Rosetown-Biggar where his opponents are M. J. Coldwell, foremost campaigner for the C.C.F., and R. P. Hassard, Liberal. Dr. Manion is a National Government supporter.

Two star athletes are in the field. Sylvanus Apps, Toronto's great National Hockey League player, was named National Government candidate in his home constituency of Brant. His opponent is G. E. Wood, Liberal member. Fred Hoblitzell, Liberal, former Ontario amateur golf champion, opposes R. L. Baker, National Government, in Toronto Eglinton.

Hero of an Arctic rescue more than ten years ago, Col. C. D. H. MacAlpine, mining man and prospector, was nominated National Government candidate in Victoria, Ontario. MacAlpine and seven companions were rescued in 1929 after their plane grounded and they spent several weeks far inside the Arctic circle.

Son of Minister Runs

Sons of famous parliamentarians were named in Quebec and Ontario constituencies. Hughes Lapointe, son of Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, runs in Lotbiniere as a Liberal while his father seeks re-election in Quebec east. H. C. Guthrie, son of the late Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Conservative Minister of Justice, is National Government candidate in Wellington south.

Douglas Stewart was in the Ontario reformatory when his nomination papers as independent candidate were filed in Toronto Trinity. Stewart, former editor of the banned communist newspaper, The Clarion, is serving a minimum sentence of six months for prejudicing recruiting.

Stewart faces distinguished opposition in Trinity, his opponents being Arthur W. Roebuck, Liberal, former Ontario Attorney-General and Hon. G. R. Geary, member of the R. B. Bennett Conservative cabinet prior to the 1935 general elections.

Sir Cedric Hardwicke and The Invisible Man in a scene from the amazing production "The Invisible Man Returns," now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

Love is a series of ups and downs for Jackie Cooper, Betty Field's ardor - filled sweetheart in "Seventeen," hilarious screen version of Booth Tarkington's famed story of young love, now on the Belle screen.

TONY

— BY ELIZABETH VERNON —

CHAPTER XXVIII

There came a tap on the door."

"Good afternoon, Mrs. Cobb." Tony and Jack rose. Jacky offered her chair.

"Nice manners—nice manners," Mrs. Cobb approved. Gasping, she sat down. Her prominent brown eyes watched while Tony took from the cracked jug on the chimney-piece, the money for the rent. "You shouldn't keep your money all any'ow like that, dearie. You never knows 'oo mightn't slip up 'ere an' take it. An' then where would you be? An' me too?"

Jacky had sat down on the end of the bed. Unwinking, she gazed at Mrs. Cobb.

"Would you turn us out if we couldn't pay our rent?" she asked.

"Yes, me dear. Couldn't keep you 'ere for nothin.' We all 'as to get on as best we may. But live an' let live is my motter. Speakin' of which, I thought I'd best tell yer, the perlice is after you." She looked round into the breathless stillness that followed on her words. "Yes. Well. I can't say I was reely surprised. But 'e didn't get no change from me. A plainclothes man. I know what 'e was directly I set heyes on 'im. 'Two young ladies missin' from their 'ome,' 'e says, readin' from a piece of paper; an' seemin'ly, from what 'e says, the perlice only just put on the job. 'Ave you any one hanswerin' to that description in your 'ouse, Mrs. Cobb?' 'e asks. 'No,' I says, 'I haven't. But I'll tell you somethin', ' I says, 'two young things—ladies an all—did come askin' for a room a fortnight ago. But I wouldn't give 'em no room,' I tells 'im. 'I see'd there was somethin' wrong from the look of 'em, and I wasn't going' to 'ave no trouble in my place.'" She laughed wheezily.

"You were very kind not to give us away," Tony said at last.

"Yer business is yer own," said Mrs. Cobb, with a certain dignity. "But just the same, there's a few words I would like to 'ave with you." She turned to Jacky who, wide-eyed and white-faced, was staring at her. "Now you run along for a minute, darlin', out on to the landin', while I talks to yer sister."

The door had closed behind Jacky.

Mrs. Cobb leaned forward. She patted Tony's knee. "I won't give you away, dearie," she said. "You don't need to be afraid. But now you've 'ad yer little 'oliday, don't you think you'd better go 'ome where you belong? This ain't no life for you. I knows what they pays their 'elps at the Cock an' Bottle, and I knows what you pays me for the rent. Yer can't live on it. You're wearing to a shadder. Why, there's nothin' of you, an' that rough work—"

"I don't mind it. We're happy here."

"Now you listen to me, dearie. Think of your little sister. You're fond of 'er, aren't you? Well, look at this supper! Is this food for a growin' child? 'Ow do I know? Because I knows the signs. Yes, an' 'ow do I know them? Because I 'ad a little girl of me own—an' lost 'er. I knows the sym'toms. What d'you think'll 'appen to yer both, come winter? You'll be out workin' if you last that long. 'Ow d'you think you'd keep 'er warm? You couldn't 'ave no fire all day. You couldn't pay for no coals, nor extry blankets. The first cold weeks'll kill 'er. That's God's own truth I'm tellin' yer," Mrs. Cobb paused.

"Thank you." Tony whispered. "You've been very kind."

Mrs. Cobb rose. "I won't say no more. You must do as yer think right. It lays with you."

Yes, thought Tony, opening the door for Mrs. Cobb. It did. In that moment the plan that had lain half unseen at the back of her mind crystallized and was clear.

Mrs. Cobb had made her slow descent of the narrow stairs. Jacky and Tony were once more alone. Jacky's eyes were dark. She seized Tony's arm.

"Tony—the police—Hyacinth and Mother—they won't get us."

"No. No. Don't be frightened, darling. Don't tremble like that. I'll see it's all right. I promise it'll be all right. I want you to lie down. And look, I'm going to put this cup of milk and the cherries beside you. I want you to lie there and wait for a little, and be very good. I must go out."

Sir Matthew Lake stood at the window of his study. He gazed down into the street of large houses. Passers-by were infrequent. Few people in his neighborhood spent August in London. And he was here, breathing the exhausted air, only because the visit of a foreign scientist, coupled with some delicate experiments, claimed his presence.

His life, it seemed to him this summer evening, was grey as the street. It was his work only that made it worth while. Yes, he was grateful for the absorbing interests that occupied his mind so that he need not listen to the whispers of a heart that could not forget the wound it had received. remain unhealed. It had gone Strange that that wound should deep. He would bear it with him always. At forty, one knew well enough the secrets of one's heart.

The figure of a girl, slight; with dragging step, came slowly up the street. Half-consciously he regarded her. Some patient, he supposed, from one of the nursing homes near by, allowed too soon to take a weak stroll.

She paused now on the pavement below. She was scanning the house. He stood back out of sight, and watched her. She raised her face—

"Tony!" His hand was at his lips, that he might not shout that name. He left the window. Halfway across the room he paused. He buried his face in his hands. A moment later the front door bell had pealed its summons through the house.

Matthew Lake, striding swiftly, found himself in the hall. "All right. I'll see to this." He intercepted his servant. He walked down the hall. His own front door looked, somehow, strange now that he knew who waited on the other side. His hand was not quite steady as he slid back the lock. He opened the door.

On the step, looking up at him, stood the girl of whom he had thought and dreamt day and night since first he had seen her.

"Tony?" He stopped. His trained glance took in her pallor, the shadows, under her eyes, the signs of weakness.

"I—I thought I'd come and see you," she said. Nothing more.

"My dear child," he murmured. He thought of the desperate, furious letters he had received from Alan; of the long fruitless search in which for the past four weeks so many people had been engaged; of Alan's face when last he had seen it. "Where have you been hiding?" he asked now.

She made an inarticulate sound —hardly an answer. Her hand was cold in his as he led her through the hall to his study. They entered the room. He shut the door. Like an automaton she took the chair he offered her. She looked up at him as if she tried to speak and could not.

"Have you seen Alan?" That question it was his duty to ask. His heart felt the pang.

"No! No!" She sat up. "And you're not to tell him—"

"I'm not!" Her voice was fierce. Then suddenly she dropped her head. "Please don't talk of Alan," she said. "I'll never see him again."

Matthew Lake looked at her. He heard the misery in those words. He longed to take her in his arms. Instead, he walked to the window and back, trying to still the clamor that raged within him.

"Tony, you've made some mistake. Why did you run away from Alan?'

She answered. "I won't tell any one that." She glanced at him sideways. "Please, Matt, are you angry with me for coming?" she asked.

"No, but, Tony—"

"Because, you see," she went on, picking desperately the arm of the chair, not looking at him. "I've come to ask you something."

"Oh, Tony, dear." He crossed to where she sat. He took her hand in his. "Ask me anything."

"Please, Matt," she gulped a little. "Please, will you marry me?"

Ernest Kehler Convicted of First Degree Manslaughter

New York, March 12—(CP)—Ernest Kehler, denounced by a judge whose voice broke with anger as "just a cheap bum," faced today a possible penitentiary sentence of 20 years for the fatal bludgeoning of Dr. Walter R. Engelberg, German consular attache, last Dec. 5.

The 24-year-old Winnipeg boxer, who fought under the name of Ernie Haas, was convicted late last night of first degree manslaughter, a charge reduced from one of murder. A jury which heard counsel for Kehler contend he beat Dr. Engelberg to death after the latter made indecent advances in his Brooklyn home reached its verdict in six hours and 14 minutes.

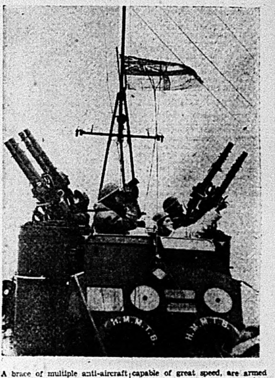
BRITAIN'S NEW TRIPLE THREAT



A brace of multiple anti-aircraft guns look skyward from the bridge of one of the British navy's newest racing motor torpedo boats, of which Britain now has a large fleet on coastal duty. The boats, capable of great speed, are armed with torpedoes for use against surface craft; depth charges for dealing with submarines and these guns for taking care of attack from the air.

PROOF OF NAZI DUPLICITY

King George is shown here looking at a German magnetic mine, fished up by British admiralty experts. The mechanism of the mine bears dates in 1938, proving that Germany was preparing for magnetic mine warfare at the time of the Munich crisis. Britain now has developed a method of "depolarizing" metal ships so that the hulls will not attract magnetic mines. The Queen Elizabeth was thus equipped when she reached New York.

Good Beauty Scents

LUPE VELEZ. . . uses care in the selection of her perfume.

By HELEN FOLLETT

"SMELLS are surer than sounds or sights to make your heart strings crack", wrote Kipling. That may be one reason why a girl touches her earlobes with perfume, sweeps a bit of fragrance on the backs of her hands. Another reason is that the addition of sweet floretted odor sets her up, makes her feel like a million.

We hear about certain perfumes for certain robes, about harmony of scents and colors. There may be something in it, but we believe that the practical young lady with an eye on economy will find a perfume that delights her nostrils, and will stick to it. Her entire wardrobe will be impregnated with it. If she can get the same odor in a sachet, she will use it in her glove, handkerchief and hat boxes.

Mixing perfumes is poor business. Each one my be a heart winner, but when both are used they fight like cats and dogs.

Furs hang onto a scent like all get out; so do woollen fabrics. So, if you are going to slip yourself into a woollen blouse or sweater, spray the chest and arms lightly. Be stingy.

A compelling, enticing fragrance does something to a woman's soul. She feels romantic. She needs it as she needs food, air and sweet companionship.

For a quick manicure, first remove the old polish with a polish remover. Shape the nails with a metal file, run the orange wood stick under the eaves, then do a second filing with the emery board. Form a neat oval, not too long if the nails are long and narrow.

Soak the little padlies in warm soap suds, scrub with a hand brush, rinse and dry. Dip the orange wood stick in olive oil, lip it under the cuticle, detaching it from the nail base. If you dig up hangnails, snip them off carefully with the pointed scissors.

Wash again to remove the oil, rinse and dry. On with the gay veneer, and that's all.

Start Letter-Writing Habit When Child is Young

Undoubtedly the reason why some of us never get around to writing letters, or are tardy about answering letters or invitations, is that we didn't acquire the habit of answering letters promptly in our very young years when that habit should have been fixed.

Often parents are to blame for not developing this pleasant habit of letter-writing when it should be developed. In the first place, most parents don't realize how early in life they can impress on their children the importance of answering letters promptly, how easy and delightful it is to write at once that thank-you note for a Christmas or a birthday present; what pleasure it will give to relatives and friends to be remembered on either usual or special occasions.

Even before the little hand can write, the mother can talk over with the child the grace of sending a prompt "thank-you" for a gift. She herself can write the note, read it to the child, sign the child's name, and putting an "X" after the signature, can explain, "That is Betty's name on the thank-you to Aunt Dorothy for the beautiful little dress".

When the child can write, or even print, he or she can be gently urged to write the little notes promptly, and with as little guiding in the phrasing as need be. A word or two about how to begin the letter how to close it, how to address the envelope.

Never let the children hear you say that you "hate to write letters" or that you "never could write a decent letter". This will cloud the sun of the little person's enthusiasm.

Prize Problem

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,—

A girl bought two tickets for a raffle. She gave one ticket to the girl friend who accompanied her to the raffle. This friend (who did not pay for her ticket) won the prize. Should she keep the prize or give it to the girl who invited her and paid for her ticket?

I. Z. C.

I think that the girl who won the prize should have kept it. The girl who gave her the ticket for the raffle should have taken the point of view that when she gave her the ticket, she gave her also the chance of winning the prize. Even if the guest graciously suggested that she give the prize to the girl who had given her the ticket, this girl should not have accepted her generous offer.

Second Baby

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,—

Please tell me if it is proper to send announcement cards announcing the birth of a second baby? Several of my friends gave a shower for me before my first baby was born. Most of my friends live in a different town and I am sure they would like to know of the new baby's arrival.) you think, under these circumstances, it would be permissible to send cards?

B. L.

Yes, it is just as proper to send birth announcement cards for the second baby as it is for the first baby. The first baby shouldn't get all the attention!

GILEAD Y. P. U.

Gilead Young People's meeting was held at the home of Mr. Jas. Huffman with a good attendance. Opening with hymn 168. Roy Huffman took the devotional reading. Scripture was read by Isabel Huffman. Business was discussed and hymn 439 sung. John Hancock took charge of the program. Readings were given by Earl York, Ralph Leavens and Clare York. Annie Clare favored with music on the harmonica and guitar. The meeting concluded with the Mizpah Benediction.

Garnet Huffman took over the social part. In a debate "resolved that the city is more dependent on the country for a living than the country on the city", the affirmative side was defended by Mrs. Gerald Swan and Mrs. Wilfred Hutchinson and the negative, Mrs. Fred Balcanquel and Mr. James Huffman. Both sides had splendid points. The judges were Mrs. E. York, Mrs. A. Boldrick and Miss Stricker. After several minutes' consideration they decided in favor of the affirmative.

Games were played and the hostess served candies.

Removing Tot's Fears of Barber

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

THE ONLY fear I have of the barber is that he might not find my hair. With some young children it is different. They have a fear they cannot understand and fear that "passeth understanding", of their parents.

"Dear Mr. Myers", writes a mother, "once before I wrote for advice, followed it and all concerned are the nappier for it.

"Now we're confronted with another problem and, although it seems a small matter, it has given us no little concern. Our little boy is almost two and a half years old, and the first two times he had his hair cut all went well. The barber I took him to is a pleasant person and has a way with children. However, the last two times he put up such a fuss that the haircut didn't take place. I'm at a loss to understand just what could cause such an outburst from an otherwise quiet and well-behaved youngster. We have no trouble with tantrums at home, if this is what they call a tantrum, and he has shown no sign of fear. To be sure, he's naughty at times, but taking away his favorite toy usually brings a different attitude and all is well.

Parents Failed

"Both my husband and I tried our hand at it and failed. Where are we wrong? Would a good spanking be the proper way to handle this situation?"

My reply,—

Spanking might be disastrous in this case. Be patient with the tot. Put yourself in his place. How would you feel. From now until you take him for the next haircut, make a number of friendly visits with him to the barber. Provide the barber before hand with a toy he will give this child. Let one or two other members of the family have their haircut, taking the child along. Induce the barber to show the youngsters his tools and how they work—how the clippers run and how the chair is raised and lowered, how the razor is stropped, and so on. By and by this child will feel secure and safe in having his own hair cut. We reduce fears in a child by means of gradual adjustment.

And let me add that when you must punish him at home, you should not do so by taking from him a favorite toy unless he injures that toy or someone else with it. Respect his possessions as you would have him respect yours. A better type of punishment is to assign him to sit in a certain chair where you can see him, doing nothing, for exactly 20 minutes.

Father Grateful

I am deeply grateful for the following in a letter from a father. I hope he is correct "You are making a wonderful contribution, not high-brow and 'scientific', but good old-fashioned common 'horse sense' in language that we common ordinary mortals can understand."

As soon as grease is spilled on a wooden floor, pour cold water over it. This, so that the grease will harden before it soaks into the wood. It can then be scraped off.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

He Loves a Teacher Two Years Older Than Himself

Dear Miss Fairfax,—

I am 18 years old and met a teacher a couple of years ago. She is in her early 20's, single, and lives with her family. As she is not in the same school with me, I make dates with her and sometimes she keeps them. But as a rule she breaks them for some little excuse.

Although I've never met her family they seem to resent me because of something I wrote in a letter to the girl, and which she evidently allowed them to read. She thinks I'm too young for her, and tells me how I can make her realize I love her.

Worried.

In the course of human events I believe it's not unlikely that you may be in and out of love a dozen times before you marry this charming young teacher of twenty.

But if you do remain in love, and the case proves to be serious, two years seniority on the part of a girl is no drawback. Meantime, I think her advice to you to enlarge your circle of acquaintances and go out with other girls is excellent, and I hope sincerely that you'll follow it.

He's an In and Out Type of Young Man

Dear Miss Fairfax,—

I've been going with a young man of 19 for two years, off and on. I'm 18 and don't intend to marry or even go "steady" with him. He is one of those happy-go-lucky boys. His attitude is one of careless indifference, and he doesn't care what anyone thinks of him. He's good company and doesn't drink, smoke, or swear.

He took me out once a week to his fraternity dances and other places; then suddenly stopped coming. I wondered what I had done. Then all at once he came back again and wanted to date me. Of course, I went out with him, and said nothing about his having been away so long.

I went out with him just last night and he brought me flowers, and he often brings candy. I try not to be possessive or domineering. He seems to have a good time when we're out, but I never know when he'll stop coming again. I know he has enough money, because he has a well-paying job. And we never neck.

What do you think of such a boy? Please help me solve my problem, Miss Fairfax.

Ann

How sensible you are not to stand the young man up on the carpet and demand to know why he hadn't been to see you! Such possessive tactics are fatal.

This young man has just not made up his mind about things. He is an agreeable companion, and you're doing very well to hold him by a loose rein.

She Wants a Chance to Make Other Friends

Dear Miss Fairfax,

I've been going "steady" with a boy who is two years younger than I am, and we're both in our early twenties. He wants to marry me, but I'm not sure I love him. He doesn't earn enough to support a wife.

I suggested we both find new friends, but he said if I go out with other boys I'll never see him again. I do like him and want to include him among my friends. He doesn't know many people, and I imagine he'd be lonesome without me, and I don't want to hurt him. What can you suggest?

If I continue seeing him and not seeing anyone else, how will I ever find the right young man? I just can't make up my mind. He's very nice to me, but lately I always see someone else I'd like to know and become acquainted with. And I'm afraid to, because he is my one drawback. When I don't want to see him, he says I'm sneaking, and I don't do that.

Discouraged

You see things so clearly that I doubt if you need any suggestions from me. What would you get if you agreed to be accommodating and married a young man you're not even sure of loving, and who doesn't even earn enough to support a wife? These wild threats of disappearing on the part of youngsters who don't get their own way are to be taken with more than a grain of salt—a tablespoonful at least.

Carry out your suggestion for making new friends, but do not exclude him from your circle. Best wishes.

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THE LUNAR transits affecting the affairs of the day are rather conflicting. While there is sign of an expansive and benefic influence in things generally, there also are deep sources of deception and trickery to be handled with vigilance, sagacity and a wise, judicial state of mind. Friends in high places may be called on for advice and more substantial co-operation. In strictly private affairs friendship and hospitality play a major part in promoting happiness and social gratifications.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a particularly pleasant and progressive year in their domestic, social and affectional life, with much of a congenial and festive nature transpiring. But in business there are rather adverse prospects, with intrigue, treachery and sinister undercurrents with which to cope. However, resort to friendship, good fellowship and the wise counsel of those in power and prestige may be influential in routing adverse situations. But keep alert to falsity and impositions.

A child born on this day may be fairly talented and ambitious, having a warm and expansive nature but one easily taken advantage of, because of its susceptibility and sensitivity to schemes and subtleties.

Thyroid

Glands have come very much into medical and public consciousness in the last quarter of a century. Science has told us a lot about them, making it appear what we knew about them before was as much superstition as anything. We knew that they did strange and terrible things to us, but we didn't understand how or why.

Most attention has been given to the thyroid gland and I suppose most of you know, when this goes wrong, it has a profound effect on the whole system. Probably, however, it is not generally understood that it can go wrong in the body of a child just as easily as it can in an adult. Sometimes babies are born with a thryoid out of kilter.

The thyroid lies in the neck, two rounded balls of soft, meaty tissue, one on either side of the neck, and they are connected by a thin isthmus of the same material just below the level of the Adam's apple.

This gland is to our bodies what a rheostat is to a furnace or governors to a steam engine. It controls the speed at which the body operates; it controls the amount of fuel that is burned in this the most complicated of all engines. The thyroid manufactures a secretion which is liberated into the blood. If more than normal amounts of this secretion are liberated, then we show abnormal activity. If the gland is lazy and doesn't supply enough of the secretion, then we are slow, lethargic, we want to sleep more than normal, and everything we eat seems to turn to fat instead of being burned up as fuel for the body.

Sometimes babies are born with a thyroid that just won't go to work; there isn't any secretion. Such a condition may happen in a baby whose mother or father has an abnormal thyroid, but it can and does often happen in families where both parents have normal glands.

When such a child is born, it presents so marked a picture that there is no trouble detecting the trouble at birth or shortly afterwards. And on the speed with which this discovery is made depends the whole future of the child.

Such a baby will sleep a great deal; of course, all babies do, so this alone isn't enough of a symptom, but besides this the child will have a heavy appearance, his face will show little expression even after couple of months when other children are gurgling and cooing for all they're worth. The child's hair will be sparser than most babies and it will be coarse and dry; fingers will be short and spade-like, the legs will be short, and the tongue will likely protrude half out of the mouth a lot of the time.

Such a child is called a "cretin". If it is recognized within a couple of months what is the matter, and if treatment is started at once, the child will have a chance to develop normally. The treatment consists in giving the infant thyroid extract through the mouth is make up for the lack of the secretion in his blood. Such a treatment is very easy and usually it will enable the child to carry on in normal fashion.

If the child is started on this treatment within the first few months of life he will develop fairly high in intelligence and while he will never be a genius, he will with care, advance sufficiently to learn a trade and generally keep his end up. If the child is a year or two old before the extract is given, then he may be mentally retarded all his life and spend most of it in an institution.

Women's Canadian Club Assist in War Work Program

Women's Canadian Club members have been co-operating thoroughly with the War Work Committee of the Red Cross and have been asked especially to look after the wool, and the packing of articles for shipment. FOR BUFFET SUPPER

For buffet suppers, or serving of meals on trays, there are some new lightweight plywood trays that have been treated to be liquid-proof. The centres are decorated by an inlay process with scenes of the four seasons.

When you buy a new saucepan, be sure you get one with a "lip". This is much more convenient for pouring liquids than a pan with a perfectly rounded edge.

..Paris—Dunton has some grand new antelope bags that may be worn slung over the belt or the forearm. They are like tailored saddlebags, some come in two colors, such as navy and bright red. They have four pockets, one at each end. A stunning tobacco antelope model has a muff-top which connects triple-flapped outside pockets

Sports coats in dressmakers' private collections give prominence to skirt-length, high-buttoning, and swing-from-the-shoulder silhouettes.

Letters From the Troops

Eldorado (Special)—A letter received by Mr. and Mrs. Bert McCoy from their son, Wilbur, of Aldershot, England:

Dear Mother and Dad:

I received your letter, tonight, and was sure glad to hear from you. I got five letters today. Blake is still waiting to see when he will have his operation. He isn't able to go on parade at all now.

We just buried one of our boys from Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. His name was Keech. He left a wife and two children. It was a nice funeral. We marched to the hospital then to the cemetery. More boys landed here this morning from Picton. They had a nice trip and they weren't sick like we were. They said they had lots of snow over home. There isn't any snow here now but lots of rain. We had one big snow storm, but it only stayed a few days. It is a little colder today, but the grass is nice and green. Some days here it is just like July over home. Blake and I are going up to London this week-end.

We got a letter from Mrs. Smith where we went for dinner and supper last leave and she wants us to go there again to have dinner and supper with her and her son Roy. They are nice people, they sent us magazines to read. How are Jean Harry and all. We haven't had any mail in two weeks. I got a snap of the King when he was here. I am in it too. He was right in front of me, if I can I will send you one.

We are getting lots of drill now, from 8 until 12; from 1.30 until 4.30, so we don't have much time for any thing. How is the price of hogs, etc., over home? It sure is dear enough here. I was moved down stairs the other day and like it much better. It is not so noisy.

We are going out on route marches at night now. It's not so nice in the blackout. One of the boys ran into a brick building and skinned his face all up. Some nights we don't get in until ten o'clock, then we get hot soup before retiring. We went through gas chamber today. It was tear gas, did it ever make the tears run. It's good for a cold. I went swimming on Monday. It was nice but a little cold.

They have a tank about sixty feet long and eight feet deep. Tell Dad he should be here to go hunting. I saw some hunters out with about 35 hounds, they sure looked nice running over the hills. Some of the hunters were on horseback, I wished that I was there too, I miss the horses here. We were out on field drill when we saw them. They have nice horses in London. They do all deliveries there with horses instead of trucks. Gas is too dear and they are only allowed so much gas a week. Well, I'm going down to see Blake.

February 13th.

I didn't get your letter mailed. I just had my dinner. I got a letter from you yesterday. We got our boxes you sent and every thing was fine. The dried venison was good. We also got Madoc papers you sent us. Well bugle is calling so will finish this tonight.

Blake and I went down town tonight. He is fine, mother, only he can't stand parade or drilling. We have to go to fire ranges tomorrow. We get up at 4 o'clock and leave at six. We were up to London last week end. We were to Mrs Smith's for dinner and supper again.

She mended my gloves and gave us each a lunch to eat on the train. Aldershot is 35 miles from London. Roy gave us each a large package of cigarettes. I like my work better than at first. I got more mail today, letters from Sadie, Jean, Harry, Vera and you. Will you please thank all who have written, Blake and I or sent parcels.

Well, it is late and I want to write Vera yet. So will close, please print address on letters and parcels.

With love to both, your loving son
Pte. Wilbur McCoy.

RHEUMATIC PAIN GONE—PRAISES MOSBY'S TONIC

Mr. Marion Says: "I Had 3 Years of Suffering with Rheumatic Pains — Could Not Raise My Arms Above My Shoulders — But Now My Pains Have Been Relieved by Mosby's Tonic and I Feel Fine!"

Another True Instance of relief from Long-Suffering came to light here a few days ago in a statement about MOSBY'S TONIC received from Mr. Fred Marion, of 3411

MR. FRED MARION

Sandwich St., W., Windsor, Ont. Mosby's Tonic is the "Mixture of Roots and Herbs and Other Splendid Medicinal Agents," which has created so much discussion here in Belleville, and which is being introduced to the public daily at Lattimer's Drug Store, 228 Front Street. What Mr. Marion has to say about Mosby's Tonic will be of interest to every one who suffers. His Grateful Statement follows:

Rheumatic Pains in Arms, Hands and Limbs

"If anybody in this world ever had what you call REAL rheumatic pain, then I know I am that very person," stated Mr. Marion. "I was down in bed with it for long periods. These rheumatic pains were simply ALL OVER ME. I could not even raise by arms above my shoulder. The joints of my fingers were swollen and both of my knees were stiff and full of pain. Besides all of this, my stomach was badly upset and my bowels were constipated.

"I tried first one thing and then another, until I was discouraged. But finally I found Mosby's Tonic and I want to say that this medicine began to help me almost at once. Before I had finished my second bottle the rheumatic pains began to leave my body. You don't know what relief that was! And when I had taken my fourth bottle I could walk without any pain, and now I can raise my arms above my head. The suffering has gone from my shoulders, and the swelling has left the joints of my fingers and knees. And another thing, Mosby's Tonic has regulated my bowels and has relieved me in so many ways that I want to publicly endorse this medicine in the hope that others who suffer as I did will get it and take it."

Acts on Bowels, Stomach, Liver, Kidneys

MOSBY'S TONIC acts on bowels, stomach, liver, kidneys. It contains 13 Roots and Herbs scientifically blended with 5 Other Proven Ingredients. It clears gas and pain from the stomach, cleanses the bowels and invigorates liver and kidney action. That is why so many people are benefited in a general way by this New Formula. Remember—due to the immense volume in which it sells, the price of Mosby's Tonic is reasonable. So don't hesitate. Get Mosby's Tonic—NOW—and start taking it.

MOSBY'S TONIC is sold here in Belleville at Lattimer's Drug Store, 228 Front Street.

"I was Connecting Neighbours then

Suppose today you call us and say, "I want a telephone installed in my home."

The installer comes — in a matter of hours, perhaps minutes. For an hour or so he works around the house, then makes final tests and says, "Your telephone is connected now, sir."

He means, of course, that he has connected it to the central office in your locality. He might very well say —

"Now your telephone is connected to all your friends, relations, and tradespeople, like the grocer, the butcher, the baker, the dentist, the laundry, the hospital, and so on.

"Yes, and it is connected to the telephones of thousands of people you don't know but may want to call some day—to millions of telephones in other parts of Canada and throughout the civilized world —even to ships at sea."

How completely life has changed since this Company began sixty years ago with 2,100 subscribers. Today more than 785,000 Bell telephones in Ontario and Quebec transmit upwards of 5½ million calls in the average day. They register the heartbeats of the country's life.

Goyer Scores 20 Goals and Has 12 Assists in Nine Games as a Defenceman

135 SCORING POINTS

(Compiled by Ken. J. Colling)

Leo "Soup" Goyer, 18-year-old defenceman of the Belleville "Quintes" in the junior O.H.A. ranks this season, led the Belleville kids in scoring despite the fact Goyer was playing defence throughout the nine league games participated in by the Belleville junior sextette. Goyer scored 20 goals and was credited with 12 assists for a total of 32 scoring points. Second to Goyer was Jack Bundy, rangy centre player, who hails from the Toronto Marlboros. Bundy scored ten goals and had ten assists for 20 scoring points in nine games.

As a team the Belleville kids scored a total of 73 goals and added 62 assists to amass 135 total scoring points, while their collective opposition scored but 26 goals. The Belleville kids only lost one game all season, that being their second junior O.H.A. play-off game versus Kingston during which they were eliminated from the provincial hockey playdowns, however. The locals won seven, lost one and tied one. Belleville averaged slightly over eight goals per game, while their opposition averaged but three goals for each game played during the season. Gordie Cook, the team's regular goalie, was scored upon 25 times in eight games, while Ted Clarke saw one goal scored on him in one exhibition game.

Mark Storms was the badman of the team in the term sense as he served five penalties for a total of ten minutes, Goyer being next in line with four rests in the "cooler." Collectively as a team the local juniors only served 19 minor penalties all season, which is a remarkably fine record in modern hockey. Coach "Toots" Holway introduced 16 different players to the Belleville junior O.H.A. roster during the past season.

Player	M.	G.	A.	Pts.	Pen.

Ethier	9	10	10	20	4

Key—M, total games played; G, goals scored; A, assists given; Pts., total scoring points; Pen., minutes in penalties served.

Industrial Hockey Loop to Function With Four Teams

Industrial league hockey, once a great force in the sporting life of Belleville, but of more recent years having remained dormant, will be revived at the Hume Arena commencing Wednesday night. Four industrial firms entered the Belleville Industrial Hockey League to compete for the S. R. Burrows trophy, which was donated for that purpose by Mr. Burrows some eight years ago. The firms represented in the proposed league are Belleville Sargent, Canada Cement Company, Stewart-Warner Alemite Corporation and the Corbin Lock Company.

A single schedule will be played, following which the top two teams will play off for the Burrows cup. Double-headers will be played each night at popular prices.

The schedule drafted last night was:

March 13th—Canada Cement vs. Alemite; Corbins vs. Sargent.

March 18th—Canada Cement vs Sargent; Alemite vs. Corbins.

March 20th—Corbins vs. Canada Cement; Sargent vs. Alemite.

The play-off dates will be announced later.

Champion Yankees Defeat Reds 8-7

Tampa, Fla., March 12—(AP)—Those who wondered last fall how long the Cincinnati Reds and New York Yankees could have gone on playing the world series before the Reds won a game had the question partially answered, at least, when the champs poured it on again in an exhibition battle here yesterday 8 to 7.

That made it five in a row for Joe McCarthy's crew over the National Leaguers, and, although they did not treat Ernie Lombardi like a tackling dummy this time, the Yanks otherwise displayed about the same margin of superiority as they did in the big autumn bust.

They gave the impression that they could win whenever they pleased. They still are the best, and there isn't a cub in training today with any real hope of beating them out either in the American League race or in the 1940 world series.

OLD SEABISCUIT TO BE RETIRED

Seven-Year-Old Thoroughbred Will be Retired to Stud by His Owner

Los Angeles, March 12—(AP)—The racing days of the gallant Seabiscuit are ended. He ran his last and greatest race when he captured the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap March 2. He is now retired.

A brief but formal announcement yesterday by wealthy Charles S. Howard, his owner, wrote finis to the career of this turf idol.

Seven years old, courageous contender in more than 80 races; once an ignored workhorse claimed for only $7,500, now the greatest all-time money winner in the history of the sport; once a plater, now a king—that is the story of Seabiscuit. Now he'll graze on his master's California ranch, far from the turf wars.

Seabiscuit, said Mr. Howard, has earned retirement with his purse winning record of $437,730, set in the truimph of the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap.

Al Weill Puts In Afternoon Trading Fighters With Jacobs

(By Sid Feder, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, March 12 — (AP)—Monsieur Armand Weill, better known as Al, stuffed a fighter into each of the upper pockets of his large checked westkit, stuck a cigar in the corner of his mouth, and went up to trade with "Uncle Mike" Jacobs the other day.

The reason was that Lew Jenkins, the larruping lightweight from Sweetwater, Texas, had just flattened Tippy Larking, and Uncle Mike wanted to give him a shot at the title held by Lou Ambers, who is managed by M. Armand.

Now Arturo fought Joe Louis a few weeks back and went 15 rounds with the bomber. Those 15 rounds were most uncomfortable for the heavyweight boss that evening. He was a mighty baffled young man by the Chilean's clowning style.

Godoy's Style Not Liked

Since that time, Uncle Mike has said he wasn't contemplating a return match for Godoy with the bomber. At one point, he said he didn't like Godoy's style. The general belief here and there, however is that it wasn't Mike so much as Louis and his fistic "family" who wanted no more of the South American way.

So, with Ambers in demand, Weill figured he and Mike could get together on a little give and take in the matter.

"Sure, I'll give you Ambers for a May 10 or May 17 fight with Jenkins," M. Armand offered, "but I want Louis for a fight this summer with Godoy."

This was a new one on Uncle Mike, so he left that afternoon for his cabana on the shores of Miami Beach. But before he took off, he told Weill he was always willing to trade when it couldn't do any harm to the Jacobs' pocketbook.

So the report went around today that Ambers and Jenkins would get together in May and that Godoy would have his chance at the head man in July.

MR. ANDERSON DOUBLES FOR THE PUCK

Boston and Rangers Meet With Rangers Having a One-Point Lead

DIFFERENT TYPES

Bruins Are Rugged While Rangers More at Home in Smooth Going

By JACK CALDER

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Two of the greatest hockey clubs in history start at Boston tonight a two-game flurry that will all but determine the National League championship.

Boston's world champions of 1938-39, the bruising Bruins, will take on New York Rangers, who have gained a one-point advantage in the strictly two-team race for the league title and the Prince of Wales Trophy. The clubs will meet again at New York Thursday, when the Ranger will end their schedule and the Bruins will be left with one game to play.

Nothing quite like this climax to the schedule has come along in recent years. Such a situation wasn't possible for many seasons, when the N. H. L. was divided into two sections and the league championship was determined in the first round of the Stanley Cup series.

To observers it is a meeting of a big, rugged team that pile-drives its way to goals and a pretty-passing array of puck artists. The Bruins are the deliberate, hammer-and-tongs type and the Rangers, though their record of penalties doesn't indicate it, are more at home in smooth going.

Despite the departure of the great Eddie Shore, Boston still has a stern, hard-hitting defence in front of its sensational sophomore goaltender, Frank Brimsek. A major calamity has struck, however, in a fractured cheek-bone suffered by Captain Dit Clapper Saturday night in a game with New York Americans.

The Rangers have the goalie with the year's best record, Dave Kerr, and a crew of rushing defencemen led by Captain Art Coulter and Ott Heller. The young wizards of the forward lines, with right winger Bryan Hextall and rookie Kilby MacDonald in starring roles, were mainly responsible for the Rangers' league record of 19 straight games without defeat this season.

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

By the Associated Press

Anaheim, Calif., March 12—(AP)—The Athletics' "injury jinx" has connected with Benny McCoy, the $45,000 beauty, but not too seriously. The rookie second sacker was struck on the adam's apple by a batted ball in pre-game practice yesterday but wasn't badly hurt. Sam Chapman and Bob Johnson are the other Athletics on the sick list.

Winter Haven, Fla.—If the start is any indication, New York Giants are due to get some real flinging this season from their top-flight pitchers. Carl Hubbell, Hal Schumacher and Bill Tohrman set the St. Louis Cardinals down with three hits and three unearned runs yesterday.

St. Petersburg, Fla. — Although their record of 24 strikeouts in three exhibitions hardly looks like the usual Yankee performance, New York's world champions are beginning to take on the appearance of the 1939 club, Babe Dahlgren made his first appearance against the Reds yesterday and Joe DiMaggio reached camp in time for a workout.

San Bernardino, Calif.—Manager Frankie Frisch of Pittsburgh's Pirates has begun to pay more attention to his pitchers, whose training so far has been designed to get them into condition and who haven't been bearing down. Frankie has expressed satisfaction with the work of Rip Sewell, Joe Bowman, Dick Lanahan and big Russ Bowers.

Fort Myers, Fla.—Bob Feller will do his first pitching of the spring training season tomorrow in Cleveland Indians' fourth intrasquad game. He is scheduled to work three innings, which counts him out for Thursday when the Tribe opens its exhibition program against Syracuse.

St. Petersburg, Fla.—Its beginning to look as if Gene Thompson may be in for a big year. Bill McKechnie, wily manager of Cincinnati Reds, is teaching the lad a change of pace which may make him a mainstay of the mound staff along with Paul Derringer and Bucky Walters. He set the Yankees down in order in his one inning yesterday.

Mrs. Dorothy Walton, winner of the Toronto and Ontario badminton championships this year, added the Canadian crown to her list of trophies when she defeated Evelyn Effnert in the Canadian singles final at Winnipeg. Mrs. Walton announced she would retire from competitive badminton before she left for the Canadian championships.

A couple of hockey's oddities occurred in the final O. H. A. game played by "Toots" Holway's kids when they were eliminated by Kingston. Prior to that game the Belleville kids had not been defeated this season, having won seven and tied one, but strangely enough one defeat saw them rubbed out and eliminated. Then Ross Clare, who teamed with Goyer on the defence, played eight full games and over 50 minutes of the last league game without serving a penalty. Clare's lone penalty of the year came in the last minutes versus Kingston and it was while he was off that the winning goal was notched. Looking over the junior's roster today we find that goalie Gord Cook, Mark Storms, Perry Everett, Jack Butler and Steve Hook all played their last junior hockey this season and will be available for intermediate hockey another year. Coach Holway has Goyer, Clare, Bundy, Kiniksi, Gerow, Armstrong and Gynn with which to build next year's junior squad around, however. Efforts to bring in a goal-keeper, defenceman and a couple of forwards are already being discussed by the management of the Quintes in hopes of giving Belleville a strong junior team for 1941.

Do you remember when— Sports writers in National Hockey League cities voted Howie Morenz, Montreal Canadiens' centre, the fastest skater in the loop six years ago today. The Stratford streak, who at the time of the award had 12 years of professional hockey behind him, died at Montreal March 8, 1937, of injuries suffered in a game.

Since John Kieran, sports editor of the New York Times, has come to be known over the nation as a walking encyclopedia, through his appearance on the "Information Please" radio program, it is said he finds himself the target of questions wherever he goes.

Bob Considine of the New York Mirror comments: "If Bill Terry had gone to the Indians a few years ago, and the club had finished as poorly as the Giants did this year, he would have been bounced......When the time comes for Clark Griffith to hand over the Senators, the team will go to his adopted son, Calvin, operator of Griffith's lone farm club, Charlotte, N. C., and not to his son-in-law, Joe Cronin."

Continuing hockey, the district rural finals will be played at the Hume Arena tonight between Glen Miller, champions of the Frankford Town loop, and Wallbridge of the Central Hastings group. Although Wallbridge seems to possess a stronger defence, the fast-skating Glen Miller sextette carry more scoring punch, but Leo Goyer was added to the "Townhallers" roster over the week end and should help to bolster the Wallbridge offence. Tonight's game for the rural district hockey title also carries the Dr. J. J. Robertson trophy to the victorious team. Tomorrow night the Belleville Industrial Hockey League will be resumed after an absence of some years and providing a winner can be selected at an early date it might prove popular to arrange a series between the rural winners from tonight's game and the city Industrial loop. The teams entered in the Industrial loop are: Stewart-Warner Alemite; Belleville Sargent; Corbin Lock and Canada Cement.

The official scoring records of the Belleville junior O.H.A. team reveal that Leo Goyer was the leading scorer of the squad. Goyer bagged 20 goals and had 12 assists in nine league games, for 32 total scoring points. It is seldom a defenceman, and Goyer played all his hockey as a rearguardsman, leads his team as the club's chief scoring threat and it would appear at this late date, that either the local juniors must bolster their front lines with more prolific scorers, or transfer Goyer to centre ice, where he might even enmass a larger scoring percentage as a front line player. Jack Bundy former Toronto centre player, was next in line in the Quintes' scoring column. Bundy counting ten goals and ten assists in nine league games played. Incidentally Bundy was examined by a specialist in Toronto last week following which it was announced he had been playing for the past three weeks with a rupture of the back. The injury is not believed to have been serious, however, and Bundy will be back next year.

Seabiscuit, the greatest money winner of the American turf, will be retired today, Owner C. S. Howard announced as he added that the 'Biscuit had earned his rest. During his seven years Seabiscuit raised his turf earnings to $437,730, by winning the Santa Anita handicap. With Seabiscuit out of the forthcoming Dixie Handicap at Baltimore, Maryland's own Challedon will be the favourite against the field. Challedon was named "the horse of the year" in 1939.

SPORT SPICE — With Bun Kingdon in the scoring hero's role, the Peterboro Petes beat Owen Sound 7-4 in the Intermediate "A" round robin series of the O.H.A. last night........ If Frank Buckland's charges can win one or two games on the road, they'll be assured of a final play-off berth now......The Trenton junior "C" sextette feel better today, it seems the Markham kids rubbed out the Cobourg juniors by a large margin...... Johnnie Allen of the Cleveland Indians signed a one-year contract yesterday calling for a bonus if he won a certain number of games.

New York, March 12—(AP) — Tattle tales: Insiders say there may be a fine old free-for-all for control of the Hialeah hoss track ....if and when the powers that be force out Vice President Hunter Lyons the fun will start...... Col. E. R. Bradley is mentioned as a possible buyer......Ky Laffoon, the golfer, who had a run of bad luck, has done a right-about-face and cleaned up $250,000 in investments.

When Don Kolloway, rookie second sacker, left to join Chicago White Sox, the home town folk out at Blue Island, Ill., really laid it on thick. They gave him two travelling bags, two pen and pencil sets, two bill folds, a trunk clock, a military kit, six dozen ties and a Bible.

Personals: Gene Tunney is out of the hospital......Barney Ross has turned down a job as promoter at the Chicago Arena......yep, that was Rip Collins, the first sacker, eating chop suey with Jeanne Houser, an eye-filler from the chorus......Notre Dame has invited Billy Conn to help officiate in an intramural boxing tournament.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

FINANCE MINISTER

Intensive Campaign

The government continued its intensive campaign last night with six cabinet ministers and one Liberal Provincial Premier speaking, while the Conservative effort was led by Dr. Manion and Denton Massey, National Government candidate in Toronto-Greenwood. M. J. Coldwell, Co-operative Commonwealth Federation national chairman, broadcast from Sackville, N.B.

Finance Minister Ralston said in Hamilton: "We have a long hard war ahead; let nothing cramp our best effort." Canadians must go "as far as our capacity will permit" in financing the war effort.

Every dollar of the amount required to finance the Canadian war effort must be raised in the Dominion and there can be no borrowing from Great Britain, Mr. Ralston said.

Got to Raise Money

"We in Canada have got to raise money and we have got to keep on raising it. Some might ask how far we should go. As a member of the government, I say we must go as far as our capacity will permit. I am not forgetting that we have a long and hard war ahead. Let nothing cramp our best effort. Success will come to us."

After receiving a great welcome in the Liberal stronghold of Quebec City, Dr. Manion reiterated his opposition to conscription and charged again that a number of Liberal ministers from Quebec broke promises to the province not to remain in a government permitting Canada to participate in an external war.

Justice Minister Lapointe and the Prime Minister "and their crowd do not care what is good for Quebec as long as they obtain political help down here," he said.

Navy Doing Good Work

Ottawa has been informed by the British Government that the Canadian Naval Service is doing as efficient patrol and convoy work as any naval unit in the British Empire, Defence Minister Rogers said at Kingston.

The minister, who represented Kingston riding in the last parliament, was nominated at the joint meeting to contest the seat again. He will be opposed by T. A. Kidd, former Speaker of the Ontario Legislature, who was nominated as National Government candidate.

He said Dr. Manion Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, and Premier Hepburn had endeavoured to create distrust across the Dominion.

"Dr. Manion has been giving answers without obtaining facts that could have been obtained by writing a letter."

Political Cowardice Charged

Colonel Kidd charged that no greater act of political cowardice had ever been known in the field of political history that was shown by Prime Minister Mackenzie King when he "scuttled" parliament.

"During the last months of the war, when the people and all the parties had pledged to them their support, they had so misused that confidence, they (Liberal government) could not face them. The government was stampeded. They did not want the truth to come out; they were aware that if they dissolved the House all these records would be shut up.

"No country except Germany and Russia had used its people like this. Conscription should not be an issue in this election, as it was an issue on, which all parties agreed."

In more than 3,000 war contracts let by the Dominion Government, the recommendations of the War Supply Board have not been repudiated or ignored once, Trade Minister Euler said at Owen Sound.

"I maintain the present administration has nothing to conceal. It is not true that a well-oiled machine operating noiselessly without requiring attention or bother is operating at its highest efficiency? That is true with the King government. It has not been making noisy or spectacular moves but has been carrying on in an efficient and smooth-working fashion."

Post-War Period Discussed

Urging that preparation be made for the post-war period, M. J. Coldwell, Co-operative Commonwealth Federation National Chairman, said at Sackville, N.B., that "unless we realize that our economic relationships must be planned to minister to human needs instead of to the profit of a few we shall continue to flounder in a morass of difficulty."

The C.C.F. proposed, before the war, that Canada must plan her economic resources so that work and purchasing power might be distributed properly, he said in a 15-minute broadcast over the national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

"In this manner our standards of living would rise and unemployment be transferred into profitable leisure. For the primary producer such as the farmer and the fishermen a fair, guaranteed and adequate minimum price must be established for primary products.

Denton Massey on Youth

"This, together with the abolition of monopolies which exploit the producer and consumer alike, the reduction of accumulated debt, the development of co-operative organizations, the provision of national marketing schemes enabling the producer to own his own business, are essential steps in the development of a national economy of service to us all."

Denton Massey, National Government candidate for Toronto-Greenwood, said that training of Canada's armed forces had been "hamstrung and handicapped" by the government's failure to provide proper equipment.

Ask a Soldier

"Because they have no other rifles," Mr. Massey replied.

"I have been in the army six months," the soldier said, "and the first time I ever had a rifle in my hands was just the other day when I drove a group in a transport out of the Long Branch rifle range—and it was an old Ross rifle made in 1907."

"There's your answer to Mackenzie King and his cabinet ministers—if you want the truth don't ask a politician, ask a soldier," said Mr. Massey.

Transport Minister Howe said that Conservatives should not feel compelled to support the National Government platform because "traditional policies of the Conservative party have been jettisoned for the purpose of an election campaign."

Mr. Howe said Canadians are being subjected to a campaign of misrepresentation by Dr. Manion and his supporters.

Chosen from Outside

"These men believe they can seize the reins of office and restore the conditions that prevailed during the last war. It is not even necessary for them to be candidates for office, as Dr. Manion has assured everyone that the government will be chosen, in part at least, from outside the elected members of the House of Commons."

There was no evidence of support for the National Government movement from outside the Conservative ranks. Election of the National Government group could lead only to formation of a "ghost government."

Lt.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, said at Fort Frances that the policies of Prime Minister Mackenzie King are not designed for closer association with the British Empire. Col. Drew charged Mr. King had refused to permit establishment of British air training camps in Canada in 1937.

Unity Not Accidental

"The course we follow today will determine to considerable extent our relationship with the British Empire after the war and Canadians who believe that our future lies in closer association with the British Empire should be warned by what has already happened that Mackenzie King's course is not in that direction.

Labor Minister McLarty opened his own campaign in Essex West with a speech at Windsor, Ont., in which he said the present unity of Canada was not accidental but the result of 25 years' work by Mr. King and Mr. Lapointe.

Speaking at Earl Grey, Sask., Agricultural Minister Gardiner outlined the government's attitude on wheat marketing and somewhat elaborated a previous announcement that an advisory board, representative of the producers would be appointed to advise the Canadian wheat board.

Arthur Roebuck, Liberal candidate in Toronto-Trinity, said in Toronto that the National Government proposal was to "abolish British parliamentary procedure in the House of Commons."

In Montreal, Senator Athanase David, recently appointed to the Upper House by Mr. King, said he favored a "reasoned and reasonable" participation in the war, although he did not believe in the policy of supporting the Allies to the last man and the last dollar.

Lovely Nan Grey who is featured with Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Vincent Price in the amazing production "The Invisible Man Returns," now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

TREE TAPPING LIKELY TO START IN A WEEK

Present weather conditions, while a good forerunner for gold maple-sap runs, is not ideal sap weather, a prominent maple-sugar producer said today.

There is considerable snow in the sugar-bushes, he said, which is a good sign. Perhaps a bit superstitious, he quoted the old sugar-shanty slogan, "Don't tap before St. Pat," or in other words, bushes tapped, according to the old bush legend, before the seventeenth of March, will not be productive of good sugar.

"We don't want sap weather for a week yet, anyway," he added, "for trees tapped too early in the season usually dry up before the season ends."

General indications, however, unless something unforeseen sets in, point toward a good season, he said.

STRANGE ROOSTER IN FRENCH BARN

Since the airplane began to play such an important role as the eyes of an army in war, artillerymen are obliged to take more pains in concealing their weapons. This howitzer of the British Royal Artillery is cleverly hidden in a barn that once was the home of French poultry. The side of the barn has been removed.

PREPARING FOR BOOM IN GREAT LAKES SHIPPING

The biggest great lakes shipping season of the past decade is expected this year as shipyards get busy repairing freighters long out of service, for the movement of ore, coal, grain, stone, steel and other commodities. In the shadow of a big lake boat, men are shown laying out the steel work for a new freighter at Detroit.

Reggie's Rich

By HOWARD CLARK

Reggie Hascomb wasn't unattractive to look at. She was just different. She wore her clothes with an air, but not quite as most girls wear them. She wore her hair in a soft little bun at the back of her neck. But instead of looking like a deviation from the bob, it looked as if Reggie had never quite dared have her hair short.

She had been educated, for the last half dozen years, at a French school in Switzerland. She had spent her summers visiting at home. Home consisted of a big, immaculately kept-up estate, where nothing ever seemed to happen. Three meals a day, of course—everything of that sort most punctiliously attended to. But nothing unexpected, nothing gay and light-hearted and young.

"You've got to help me out, Tony," said Barbara Thorpe over the telephone to Anthony West. "I'm awfully fond of Reggie. We had adjoining rooms that year I was in Switzerland at school, and shared a sitting room. And I really like Reggie awfully well. But you've got to sort of beau her around."

"What's her real name—Reggie?" he asked.

He knew he was looked on, by Barbara and her 20-year-old crowd, as a most obliging bachelor who would dutifully turn up, when bidden, as the necessary extra man.

Barbara laughed.

"Oh, no. It's Regina."

"Well," said Tony. "In that case I'll come. If you're trying to tell me she isn't a wow with the boys in your own inimitable style, maybe it's her name. Of course, Bobby. I'll be glad to take her off your hands while you play around with your own gay crowd—"

"Tony!" Barbara's voice sounded shocked and hurt—as shocked and hurt as she could make it. "You're horrid. I'm not just asking you to look after Reggie. I want you anyway for Saturday night. Two launchfuls of us to go down the bay for dinner and dancing at Amalfi's. You're awfully mean to put me in the wrong. But I'll love you for coming."

So Tony met Reggie, Saturday evening just before they started on the launch trip.

He walked beside her across the broad lawn of Barbara's summer place to the boat-house. His first feeling was one of real liking.

He remembered that fact, later, with thankfulness—later, when he looked on himself as a good deal of a cad; for he had started pursuing Reggie because—partly — of her money.

His first feeling, as he looked on the very wholesome young woman beside him—a bit stocky, for the present-day style in girls—with her creamy, pink-flushed skin, her well-cared-for hands with their capable, rather short fingers, her air of giving comfort and contentment rather than an air of demanding excitement and hurry; yes, his first feeling was one of liking.

It was on the launch, going down the bay, that the idea entered Tony's head that Reggie was attainable—and rich.

He knew she wasn't the sort of girl to whom many boys her own age would be drawn.

She was too different to be that sort of popular success. And something Reggie said made him realize that she was rich.

"Funny," she said, in a well-modulated but rather carrying voice. "But my mother always gets service. Just demands it—and gets it. She went into Walthman's the other day to look at Oriental rugs. And she didn't get waited on right away. So she just said to a clerk, "I don't suppose you know I'm the wife of Jonathan Hascomb, the richest man in Kingsbush,' just like that. And you should have seen those clerks scurry."

There wasn't much to the story. But Reggie laughed at it, evidently picturing again the sight of her mother and the neglectful salesman.

Tony was a little embarrassed. And he thought suddenly; Suppose I should marry her! His own small fortune had gone the way of other more noble fortunes in the recent collapse of a big western mining company that had stood the strain and stress of the earlier depression.

He made enough money to live on—money enough to keep a wife and children well enough. But Tony, at 35, enjoyed spending more than money enough.

If he ever married, he wished to keep his wife in rather luxurious style without cutting down his own expenses too much. And if he liked Reggie, and she had money of her own—well, what then?

It wasn't a well-formulated plan. And Tony needn't have been so ashamed of it three weeks later when he found himself head over heels in love with Reggie.

She was still visiting Barbara Thorpe, and Tony was dancing constant attendance on her—even to jeopardizing his job in the city, which had always seemed so absorbing and interesting.

Now nothing seemed interesting, absorbing, but the hours he spent with Reggie.

There was a dance at Barbara's one Saturday night.

Tony and Reggie were wandering across the moonlit lawn down toward the boathouse.

Music came from the house across the silent darkness.

Reggie's firm, capable small hand was in Tony's. And Tony knew Reggie cared for him. He'd made her care—laid himself out to make her care. And now, in the soft warm moonlight, he must seem an utter cad—cold, aloof, indifferent.

Tony felt that he couldn't ask Reggie to marry him—because he knew she was rich.

He loved her. He couldn't let her feel for an instant that he was attracted by her money. Yet, torturingly, the thought returned to him again and again that he had thought of her money when he first knew her.

"Tony," said Reggie, softly. "There's something the matter. You're tired. Sit down over here where you can watch the moon on the water and I'll just sit quietly by. You rest. Or I'll go away."

"Don't leave me, Reggie,' said Tony, holding her hand tight. "Yes. Let's sit down. But you stay."

"Want me to sing to you?"

And she started, in a sweet, well-trained, but soft little voice to sing him a lovely old French lullaby.

When the last strain of the little song had died away Tony knew he must tell Reggie how things stood.

"Reggie," he said, "I love you."

He felt the hand in his quiver. "But Reggie," he went on quickly, "I've no right to tell you so. You see—I'm comparatively poor — and you're rich. And—"

"But Tony"—Reggies lips were near his cheek as she spoke to him—"your'e not loving me because I'm rich?"

"Heaven forbid," said Tony fervently. "I wish you were penniless. I adore you, Reggie."

Reggie rested her head on Tony's shoulder and sighed blissfully.

"Well, Tony," she said, "I am. I mean, dad lost his last sou in the collapse of that big western mining company a few weeks ago."

"Thank heaven!" said Tony passionately, as he swept Reggie into his arms.

Little Benny's Note Book

LITTLE BENNY 6 6 6 tc(chwir'..

Ma was sewing on her sewing machine and I was watching her and thinking, and I said, Hay ma, were you glad when I was born?

Well, such a question, what do you suppose? ma said. After all, you were my first boy my only boy as a matter of fact, she said, and I said, Jimminy, ma, I bet when you saw me laying there so little and everything and not saying anything or anything, I bet you thought to yourself you were going to do all kinds of wonderful things for me.

Well, it's queer you should have such an idea, but in a way it's very true, ma said. My, I can still picture it the site of you so small and helpless. My the rosy dreams I had of keeping all of life's little hardships away from you and providing you with every delicacy known to man even if I had to go to the end of the rainbow for it, she said, and I said, And now how times have changed.

Such a remark, who do you mean? ma said, and I said, I mean now I'm partly grown up and my birthday is coming next month and if I even mention just one thing I want such as an air rifle, why you wont even take the time to listen.

Well of all things on all occasions, ma said. Just one thing you want indeed, it's the sole and only thing you've been dinning about for the passed 2 weeks till your father and I are ready to go into hiding from you, the idea, she said, and I said, Well how do you know I didn't want an air rifle without knowing enough English to say so when I was just a baby and you wanted to give me everything?

I'll give you something you least expect right this minute if you don't stop pursuing such a rediculous argument, ma said, and I said, Well why is it rediculous?

Being the end of the debate with me dodging a slap.

Italians held it possible that should peace fail in the northern war, Britain and France might send troops to aid Finland, with a new war front resulting from opposition of both Germany and Russia.

Von Ribbentrop left in Rome a staff of German economic experts headed by Dr. Karl Clodius, but both German and Italian sources said no new agreements between the two countries were in prospect. Clodius' group merely will remain a few days to discuss operation of the commercial accord signed about three weeks ago to regulate exchanges between Germany and Italy this year.

FINNISH DELEGATION

(Latest dispatches from Stockholm held that Monday's optimism over the prospect of peace had been exaggerated.)

Political circles had reported last night that the Finnish delegation, which includes former Premier Juho Paasikivi, Gen. Rudolf Welden and former Foreign Minister Vaino Volonmaa, might be recalled to receive new instructions.

The delegation met yesterday afternoon with Soviet Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff.

Reliable quarters said last night that the two sides were not yet in agreement, but that a basis for discussion had been reached. Authoritative reports said the scales were evenly balanced between peace and war.

Keen Interest Aroused

Keen interest was aroused here by British Prime Minister Chamberlain's unconditional offer of Allied assistance to Finland, if such assistance was requested.

While it was suggested that this offer of aid might be too late, it was admitted that it may have some bearing on the Moscow negotiations. Finnish spokesmen said that after a careful study of the help which could be expected from abroad, the government had refrained from any immediate appeal for support from the western democracies.

The Agrarian newspaper Ilkka, published at Vaasa, Finland, said editorially:

"If peace proposals at this stage mean submission by Finland and slicing up her territory, then nothing else can come into question except continuation of the fight. The plain fact of the matter is that we do not want to stretch out the present situation a day longer than absolutely necessary.

"The near future will show to what extent there is a real will to peace on the part of our enemy or to what extent it is only a feeler."

The newspaper Kaleva of Oulu said: "In Finland there can be discerned not the least desire to submit even to earlier demands of the Soviets, still less to those more severe than before, reportedly proposed by Moscow. We will not submit to demands which can be interpreted as submission to dictation by the aggressor against our land."

Popular interest in the negotiations was at a tremendous pitch, with practically nothing else discussed on the streets or in shops and restaurants.

Endless rumors without confirmation intensified public nervousness with the feeling that Finland stood facing a tremendous decision.

Official Secrecy

Meanwhile, Finland has clamped the tightest official secrecy on her bargaining for peace at Moscow.

So closely guarded was information from the Russian capital today that people in Helsinki had to rely on imported rumors—such as the optimistic ones that peace was near.

The latest official statement was a denial that the Foreign Affairs Committee of parliament had reached any decision up to 5 p.m. (11 a.m. EST.) yesterday.

There was much interest in Helsinki over Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's declaration yesterday in the British House of Commons that Great Britain and France were ready to aid Finland with "all available" resources, although Mr. Chamberlain did not say specifically that these resources would include an expeditionary force.

Because of Sweden's refusal, in her own uneasy neutrality, to permit foreign troops to pass through her territory it was felt that the offer might not add much strength to Finland's bargaining position.

"At this point the Helsinki dispatch bore the notation that the censor had deleted 100 words."

A Helsinki newspaper, Svenska Pressen, presented this as the attitude of Finns: "The peace negotiations are not exciting us. The fact that hostilities are not interrupted while they are going on tells us much about the character of the negotiations."

No Lull in Fighting

There has been no lull in fighting on the Mannerheim line and no let-up in Russian aerial operations. A Finnish communique said several towns and villages outside the war zone being bombed yesterday had at least two civilians killed.

The Russian communique today said Russian planes had attacked "military objectives" and shot down five Finnish planes. It also claimed a second penetration of Viipuri with occupation of northern and eastern parts of that Gulf of Finland port which in recent days has been defended as the western strong point of Karelian Isthmus, or Mannerheim, defence lines.

According to the Red army, the operation "closed a ring around Viipuri." Previously the Russians had reported capture of positions on four sides of the city

Paris, March 12—(AP)—Heavy gunfire was heard in Paris this morning, but several hours later the firing still was unexplained. There was no air raid alarm and no planes were seen.

Last night Paris was shaken by the thudding of anti-aircraft fire as searchlights picked out a plane, presumably German, over the capital area. There was no raid alarm, but radio stations shut down for a time to prevent hostile planes using their signals as a guide to the city.

The King and Queen Displayed Many Human Qualities During Royal Tour States Mrs. Nancy Pyper at Rotary

Noted Woman Reporter Relates in Vivid Manner Highlights of the Trip Across Canada and Visit to U. S.

ALWAYS CONSIDERATE

Their Majesties, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, as two very human and lovable people were presented to the annual ladies' night gathering of the Belleville Rotary Club in the Quinte Hotel last evening by Mrs. Nancy Pyper of Toronto, well-known theatrical directress and reporter extraordinary for the Toronto Telegram during the Royal Tour of Canada last year. Warning the large audience that she would speak for two and a half hours, Mrs. Pyper proceeded with a recital of humourous and heart-touching incidents as the Royal Tour moved across Canada, back again, down to Washington and then the final dramatic scenes as Their Majesties embarked at Halifax. She held her listeners enthralled so that few realized that her stipulated period of the address actually was fulfilled.

It was an evening of fun, music and contests, highlighted by the presentation to Mr. Leo Riggs, patient pianist for the Rotary Club, of a fine set of travelling bags as an expression of appreciation for his faithful attendance and forbearance in accompanying the Rotarians' weekly efforts at singing. A presentation was made to Mrs. Riggs "for permitting Leo to give his time and talent to Rotary," but she naively asserted that she hadn't much to say about his undertakings in that respect.

There were delightful songs by little Miss Mary Alice Rogers and Jack Deacon. Mr. Deacon sang a rollicking composition, "We'll Put the Blitz on Poor Old Fritz," the lyric and words being the work of two Belleville citizens, Messrs. Reg. Hinchey and George Carver. There were contests for the ladies on discovering blue-eyed men, and for the men in sorting out the brown-eyed ladies. Numbers on the bottom of chairs and "true or false" answers brought various prizes in which a certain brand of supergasoline seemed to predominate, with Bert Boyce the Santa Claus. Then the ladies had to identify a number of Rotarians by their first names, while the gentlemen were hard put to provide the first names of a number of ladies. (Most of them succeeded in remembering their own wife's name.)

Charlie Spalding captured the limelight briefly by winning a kiss from the guest of honour, and in mutual presentations with Billy Deacon of photographs purporting to be themselves as skipper and mechanic, respectively of a seagoing vessel. The likenesses were remarkable.

It fell to the lot of Ed. Bernstein to introduce the guest speaker. He told of Mrs. Pyper's success in the field of drama, of the famous people she had met, and of her hearing the funeral oration delivered by Herr Hitler at the obsequies of von Hindenburg. "Too bad the positions then were not reversed," he added as an afterthought.

Mrs. Pyper said she would outdo a certain Belleville political speaker who was alleged to have spoken for two hours at Shannonville, by speaking two and a half hours. "I'm a jolly good director and actress, but I'm not a good speaker", she added.

Difficult Position to Assume

As a prelude to the royal visit to Canada, Mrs. Pyper emphasized the difficult position which Their Majesties had to assume upon the abdication of Edward VIII. They had to take the place of a man whose personal charm had captured the world and who had overshadowed his brothers to the point where people had small opportunity to really know them.

Indicative of the character of King George VI, Mrs. Pyper related a story told her by a gentleman of the entourage during the Royal Tour. As Duke of York, the King engaged one day in a golf match. At the conclusion one of the partners remarked: "You must find your speech defect most difficult." The Duke replied: "On the contrary I find it an advantage—I have to think before I speak."

Queen Elizabeth had the difficult task of taking the place of Queen Mary who, said Mrs. Pyper was "not so much a woman as an institution."

During their first year on the Throne the King and Queen frequently asked of their friends, "How are we doing?"

They were somewhat frightened at the prospect of the journey to Canada, said Mrs. Pyper. They knew the loyalty of Canada, but did not know how it would be expressed.

"We all know what the King and Queen did for Canada", observed Mrs. Pyper, "but Canada did much for the King and Queen. Canada's acclaim aroused the world and lifted the King and Queen to the heights, and established them among the great rulers of history."

The staid English people were given a new conception of their sovereigns, including a realization of the beauty of the Queen, the speaker asserted.

Mrs. Pyper told of the first days at Quebec with everyone nervous, but which gave indications of the great days to come. She spoke of the Queen's constant thoughtfulness for war veterans, attributing it to the fact that her four brothers had gone into the Services and her favorite brother had been killed in action. Particularly affecting had been the momentous events at the unveiling of the National War Memorial at Ottawa where Their Majesties mingled with the veterans, shaking hands and talking with them long past the time for the conclusion of the ceremony.

Throughout the tour, said Mrs. Pyper, scheduled events always stretched beyond the appointed time mostly because of the Queen. The King was heard on one occasion to remark to her: "Dash it, Elizabeth, we've got to go."

Reporters' Difficulties

Mrs. Pyper told about the difficulties of newspaper people travelling on the pilot train, how some of the great figures in world journalism were nonplussed by demands from their papers for description of the Queen's clothes. One of them had wired his paper: "The Queen was dressed in three delightful garments." Mrs. Pyper's puzzled enquires brought out the fact that the Queen had been dressed in triple sheer.

Scenes throughout the West as the Royal Train progressed westward, then eastward, were described by the speaker. She told of the touching scene in the station at Winnipeg on the return journey when the Amputation veterans were lined up. Noticing a man with no arms, the Queen took his face in both hands. "You cannot touch me so I must touch you," she exclaimed.

Then at London, Ontario, the Queen's remarkable memory was demonstrated. Passing through the Guard of Honour composed of Highlander, the Queen paused and looked intently at a sergeant-major. "I have seen you before," she declared. "You were with my brother in a prison camp in Germany and he sent me a photo of you and him near a high wire fence." "That is correct, Your Majesty," the soldier replied.

The heart-warming scenes of the meeting of the King and President Roosevelt were described by Mrs. Pyper, who paid tribute to the fine reception given Their Majesties in the United States.

Carrying on through the final stages of the tour, Mrs. Pyper told of the genuine sorrow apparent at the departure at Halifax and on her brief, final interview with the Queen which had been the climaxing "scoop" in the flow of news of the Royal Tour.

The Queen had lost 16 pounds during the visit to Canada. Mackenzie King had told Mrs. Pyper that he believed the success of the great occasion was due to the great love of the King and Queen for each other.

J. B. Boyce fittingly expressed the thanks of Rotary for Mrs. Pyper's delightfully informal and entertaining address.

The welcome to the ladies was voiced by J. Owen Herity, District Governor of Rotary, while at the conclusion Morley Duff thanked the musicians. The presentation to Leo Riggs was made by W. J. Morrison, and to Mrs. Riggs by Irvine Hefkey, Howard Clarke, president of Belleville Rotary, made a most efficient chairman.

WAR EFFORTS OF GOV'T DEFENDED BY 'MAC' HAIG

Official Liberal Candidate Declares Proper Time to Form National Gov't. Was Before an Election Was Broached

DEFENDS KING'S ACTION

Col. W. Y. Mills of Kingston Discusses Preparation Before and After Outbreak of War

Staunchly defending the war efforts of the King Government and declaring that the proper time to form a union government was before an election and not after the people had gone to the polls and had chosen the leaders for their country, Mr. McLean Haig, official Liberal candidate for Hastings South, opened his election campaign on Monday evening when he addressed a crowded assembly at Cannifton. Other speakers of the evening were Col. W. Y. Mills of Kingston, Mr. Smith of Trenton, who introduced the candidate, and Col. Roscoe Vanderwater who acted as chairman for the evening.

Claiming that the sole issue of the present campaign was "the successful prosecution of our National war effort," Mr. Haig said that the issue boiled down to "whom do you want to entrust the responsibility of the war?" The accomplishments of the King Government since the war began in September are so great that it is impossible to deal with them completely in one appearance on the platform, stated Mr. Haig, who said he proposed to deal with only one phase of the issue at any one appearance.

Sent One Division to England

In running over the accomplishments of the government since war was declared, Mr. Haig said that already Canada had sent one division to England and that the second division was established in various training quarters here in Canada, while the first contingent of airmen had also gone overseas. Dr. Manion had accused the King Government of a state of unpreparedness, but why, asked Mr. Haig, in view of our state of peace with the United States as our only close neighbour, should Canada maintain a wartime army in peacetime?

Dr. Manion has suggested that Mr. King had no right to dissolve parliament on January 22nd but in view of the events which transpired leading up to its dissolution, Mr. Haig claimed, that Mackenzie King had every right to go to the people. Premier Hepburn and Col. Drew representing the Provincial Government, had passed a vote of censure on the Dominion Government and due to the fact that the province of Ontario represents almost one half of the electorate and contributes approximately one half of the Dominion's revenue, surely it was time to find out what the people were thinking. Was this cowardice? asked Mr. Haig.

Anything but Dictator

Mr. King has been charged with being a dictator, but Mackenzie King is anything but a dictator, assured Mr. Haig. "Mr. King has always stood out for the supremacy of the people over parliament, instead of the supremacy of parliament over the people." It was time for the request of a new mandate. Had Mr. King allowed parliament to continue sitting, nothing but a wave of criticism would have passed. As it was, parliament would have been forced to dissolve in four or five months anyway and as we were running into a major offensive on the western front, would parliament have been justified in sitting in the face of this criticism, asked Mr. Haig.

The only plank which Dr. Manion has in his platform is "National Government," continued Mr. Haig and Dr. Manion opened his election campaign by saying that if he were elected he would form a National Government. Those who recall that broadcast will remember that he said "only a National Government could render the service to the country that civilization demands," and yet only six weeks before the election campaign opened he was definitely against such a proposal as was proven by his words of July 27th.

Faults in N. Govt. is Claim

A Union Government is either weak or dictatorial, stated Mr. Haig. But suppose the National Government was elected, to whom would Dr. Manion turn? If his candidates were defeated it would mean that people had no confidence in them, and he could not very well include the C.C.F. or Social Credit parties in his government because their policy is strictly opposed to that of Dr. Manion. "The National Government is only an excuse," charged Mr. Haig in closing. "Four months ago Mr. Manion was opposed to any such form of government but now his only plank is "National Government."

"The record of the King Government during the past four years is interesting and important, stated Col. W. Y. Mills as he took the platform to speak in the interests of Mr. Haig, "but the issue at stake at the present time is—Canada's war effort, which has been so loudly praised in England." The government has been preparing for war for the past two years, but who would have believed that Hitler would have plunged the world into war. Mr. King realized this, however and preparations have been made for at least a three-years' war."

A Great Victory

It was a great victory for the Liberal party, when the people of Quebec endorsed a united war effort in the recent provincial election in Quebec, stated Mr. Mills. As a result of that Provincial election, in which 3,000,000 people voted against a man who was adverse to aiding the Mother Country in the case of war, we have a united Canada, with every province behind Mackenzie King in his effort to win the war.

"Having in mind a three years' war the Dominion of Canada has looked towards strengthening her economic front and to this end various boards have been appointed. Of first importance is the Foreign Exchange Control which prohibits the borrowing of foreign capital. Billions of dollars were borrowed from foreign countries during the last war, but now capital is to be controlled and kept at home."

A War Time Price and Trade Board has been appointed, which to a large extent will make wartime profiteering impossible. Prices of certain commodities went beyond reason during the last war and we had to pay the piper when prices again dropped. People are more serious this time, however, said Mr. Mills, and he doubted very much if men were anxious to profiteer unduly. A War Purchasing Board has been formed, made up entirely of civil servants of which W. R. Campbell, of the Ford Motor Company of Canada is head.

No Bands Playing

On the military front there are no loud "hurrahs" such as was the case in the last war. There are no bands playing, and the enlisted men are going overseas with a determination in their hearts, and not with the idea of a picnic in mind. Over 90,000 men have enlisted, of which 45,000 were under arms at the outset of the war. Dr. Manion says that there were no uniforms and no guns, but he is wrong. The first Canadian division which went overseas was completely equipped with new uniforms and was supplied with Lewis guns. Also it has been claimed, that the army had no mechanical equipment, no motor transports ,etc., but why should the Canadian government have have provided immense army equipment to lie idle and become obsolete during peace time, asked Mr. Mills.

Deliver 2,000 Instead of 1,000

The King government has been ridiculed for not building Bren guns for the army and Col. Drew has harped on the subject until he (Mr. Mills) has dubbed Mr. Drew the "Beau Brummel of the Bren Contract," according to the contract 1,000 Bren guns were to be delivered by a certain time which will soon be expired, but instead of 1,000 guns being delivered, there will be 2,000 guns shipped and at only one half of the expected cost.

In speaking of the Air Force, Mr. Mills said that this division of the army was formed by the King Government in 1924 when Col. Ralston was Minister of Defence. Over seven million dollars was spent on the Air Force in 1929, but what happened during the period of 1930-35, asked Mr. Mills. Then, during the Bennett regime, the grants to the Air Force were reduced to $1,300,000 and many prominent Canadian airmen were forced to leave the service. Upon its re-election to power, the King Government renewed the vigor of the force and now Canada can be proud of her airmen. Also under the King Government, the Trans-Canada Airways was inaugurated and with the newly established Empire Training School, Canada will soon become the most air-minded nation in the world.

Refers to Manion

Referring to the promises which Dr. Manion has made, Mr. Mills mentioned Dr. Manion's words, that he would force England to pay $1.50 per bushel for wheat. Also he would abolish the radio licence, but Canadians are proud of their radio programs, which are furnished by the Radio Commission.

The great issue in this election is Mackenzie King, a man who is an intellectual giant, a man of more experience and statesmanship than any other person in in the whole Dominion, stated Mr. Mills. Scuttled parliament? Sure he did. Instead of answering the questions of 245 men he turned the issue to eleven millions of people to decide. Is that cowardice, asked Mr. Mills.

"I firmly believe in the two party system of government, said Mr. Mills, and nothing else has been discovered, which is not dangerous. The thin wedge of dictatorships has been thrust in where the third party was in evidence and it was the indifference of the people of Germany and Italy that led to their sufferings today."

I admire "Mac" Haig, when he tells of once being a Conservative, said Mr. Mills and it is still one of the rights of the Canadian people that they can change their political patronage.

Mr. Mills charged that the Conservative party elected Dr. Manion as their leader solely in an effort to get the Roman Catholic vote in the Province of Quebec, but that they would not attain this end was proven by the fact that already 17 Liberal supporters had been elected in that province by acclamation. The Liberal party stands for the masses not the classes, assured Mr. Mills in closing, as he appealed to the electors not to vote against themselves in the forthcoming election by voting Conservative.

BUSY WEEKEND FOR FIRE DEP'T

Brigade Answers Five Calls Inside a Period of Ten Hours

Answering no less than five alarms inside a period of less than ten hours, local firemen experienced one of the busiest week-ends in the history of the department yesterday, when a house fire, together with chimney fires and overheated stove-pipes kept the fire department almost continually on the run. Only in the case of the house fire at the home of Mr. Leo Gauthier on St. Charles Street did any damage result, however.

At eight o'clock Sunday morning a call was received from 42 Boswell St., where a chimney fire was in progress but upon the application of chemicals the blaze was soon under control without any damage resulting. Shortly after the noon hour a call was received from the home of Mr. Leo Gauthier, where fire had broken out in the attic above the kitchen. Owing to the location of the fire it was not discovered until it had gained considerable headway and considerable damage resulted before it was brought under control. Neither the house nor the contents were covered by insurance it is reported.

A smoke-filled attic at 50 Forin St., resulted in the third alarm of the day being turned in, but on investigation by the fire department it was proved there was no fire and no damage resulted. A chimney fire at 241 George St., and overheated stove-pipes at 32 Moira St., East, just at the supper hour resulted in almost simultaneous calls to the department but the trouble in both cases was overcome before any damage took place.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Changeable weather! Everyone speaks now and then of the changeable weather. The weather has always been changeable; the weather of one month is never exactly like that of corresponding months in past or later years; neither are all years alike. Many of them (months and years) do, however, average very much alike. Of the distant past there are records made by nature indicating that then as now the weather was changeable. A study of the rings of trees and of the deposits left by glaciers indicates that people living then may have greeted one another with the familiar expression—"What changeable weather we are having!"

Britain to Bear Bigger Burden Of War on Land

Secretary for War Oliver Stanley Says French Allies Have Had to Bear Very Great Part of Task on Land During Early Days of War

'WE ARE FRIENDS'

British Minister Stirs House to Cheers With Reference to Warmth and Solidity of Anglo-French Ties

London, March 12—(CP)—Oliver Stanley, Secretary for War, today declared it is "improper and undesirable to attempt to forecast what task the British army might be called upon to fulfil in the future".

Presenting the estimates for his department, the total of which was kept secret, Mr. Stanley told the House of Commons "we have a great army in the process of formation and we hope, and indeed we are duty bound, progressively to take a bigger and bigger part of the burden of the war on land from the shoulders of our Allies the French, who in the early days of the war had to bear such a very great part of this burden".

Aid on Large Scale Offered

Mr. Stanley's statement followed upon disclosure by official sources that several communications had been sent to Finland offering Allied aid on an enlarged scale.

The War Minister said British troops in France today are approximately double the number there in October and "every day sees an increase".

Last October Leslie Hore-Belisha, then War Secretary, said Britain had 158,000 men in France. Mr. Stanley's statement would mean there are about 316,000 British troops on the continent now.

Mr. Stanley said the decision to equip an army on the present scale for continental warfare was taken only a year ago and preparation of the army had been much shorter than other aspects of National Defence.

'In This War We Are Friends'

The House cheered as Mr. Stanley emphasized the close ties with the French.

"In the last war we were Allies," he said. "In this war we are friends".

The War Secretary said nearly 200,000 Britons had enlisted as volunteers in the Army since the war began. This is in addition to some 1,300,000 men enrolled for compulsory military service.

Foreign office sources declined to say when Britain first offered increased aid to Finland, but emphasized that communications began "well before" opening of the current Finnish-Russian peace parley at Moscow.

No appeal for such help has been received from Finland in the past 12 hours, official sources said.

MASSEY VISITS 110TH SQUADRON

Canada's Young Men With Wings Inspected by High Commissioner

By FRED BACKHOUSE

Canadian Press Staff Writer

With the Royal Canadian Air Force in England, March 12 (CP Cable)—Canada's young men with wings halted their training program briefly today for the first ceremonial since their arrival in England February 25.

Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner, and senior officers of the Royal Air Force and of the Royal Canadian Air Force paid an informal visit of inspection to their station in the south of England.

Squadron Leader W. D. Van Vliet was obviously proud to present his squadron, representative of the flying legions Canada has promised the Mother Country, and greeted Mr. Massey and Air Vice Marshal D. K. McEwen, who is air officer commanding the group in which the Canadians are included.

Vice Marshal McEwen, veteran of the first Great War, had flown from a distant part of England in order to review the Canadians.

Ranking Officers Present

With the Canadian High Commissioner were Group Captain George Walsh, Senior Officers of the Overseas Headquarters of the R.C.A.F., and Wing Commander F. V. Hakes, Liaison Officer for the R.C.A.F. At the British Air Ministry, while representing the R. A. F. were Wing Commander W. R. Reed, Commanding Officer of this station and Wing Commander C. J. S. Deerlove, Commandant of the Army Cooperation Training School.

After a warm exchange of greetings the visitors passed up and down rigid lines of the blue-clad airmen, drawn up on a drill square while squadron's own drum and bugle band proudly blared out a lively march.

To the men Mr. Massey said: "How proud all Canadians should be of this first unit, not only for yourselves or for what you do, but because you head an ever increasing stream of air force blue that will be flowing this way in the months ahead."

Newsboys Battle To 2-2 Draw in In Second Game

Unable to Settle Feuds on Ice Now Issue Challenge to 'Inkslingers' of Ontario Intelligencer Staff

News boys of the Ontario Intelligencer battled to a 2-2 draw as the "Tea Leafs" and "Alley Cats" played their second draw hockey game of the season at the Hume arena last evening. Unable to settle their personal feuds of the ice lanes in a convincing manner, the "delivery boys" pooled their playing resources and all feuding ceased as the "newsies" challenged the staff of Belleville's "Great Family Journal" to a hockey game to be played at the convenience of the "inkslingers." No reply to the challenge was heard from the departments of Teddy Russell, Charlie Hardwick, Larmer Mason or Claude Tice at a late hour this afternoon, the news boys learned.

Regarding last night's news boy game, however, Jerry Jenkins and Hutchinson scored for the "Tea Leafs", while Al Juby and "Wild Bill" Greatrix bungled the twine for the "Alley Cats". Referee 'Lum' Carson was the busiest man on the ice watching the bruising efforts of Harrison and Holland on one defence and Spafford and Lummis at the opposite end of the rink.

In their challenge to the "printers," the news boys are willing to back their hockey ability in the usual sporting manner, with the lunch being provided by the losers.

No Addresses Given At Napanee Nomination

Establishing a precedent in political circles in the riding, George A. Tustin, National Conservative candidate for the riding of Prince Edward-Lennox declined to make a speech and suggested that his Liberal opponent Howard Weese, reeve of Ameliasburg follow suit at the official nominations meeting held in Napanee Court House yesterday.

Mr. Weese agreed to the suggestion with the condition that Mr. Tustin would take the responsibility of calling off the meeting without any speeches being made. This Mr. Tustin agreed to and the nomination meeting was over.

Both candidates filed official nomination papers.

Newsmen Escorted Around Training School

St. Thomas, Ont., March 12 (CP) —Air force officers escorted a group of newspapermen through miles of corridors at the Royal Canadian Air Force technical training school here today. It was the final act in the public airing of the incident of February 10, described as a "walkout" by Commissioner Wm. Stringer of the Ontario Provincial Police in his official report following an investigation yesterday.

Premier Mitchell Hepburn whose controversy with Defence Minister Rogers over the alleged walkout led to the inquiry was invited to inspect the school but declined.

Airmen in training to serve as tradesmen and mechanics in the operation of the British Commonwealth air training plan were at work in shops, some learning elementary carpentry, metal work, fabric work, and the rigging and fitting of aircraft.

The school occupies a giant modernistic Ontario Mental Hospital building, newly erected at a cost of $7,000,000 and turned over to the National Defence Department by the Ontario Government. The various buildings are all connected with miles of underground corridors.

ESCAPED PRISONER RETURNS TO JAIL

Crawfordville, Ind., March 12 —(AP)—A young married man accused of the sex killing of a 11-year-old farm girl broke jail here last night, in keeping with his own prediction, but less than 4 1-2 hours later surrendered, saying, "I've just come to myself."

Thomas Allen Boys, 28, of Attica, Ind., awaiting trial April 15 on a first-degree murder charge in the death of Elizabeth DeBruicker, told the Montgomery County night jailer Sunday, "tomorrow will be my last day in jail." The keeper thought he was joking.

Late yesterday Harry Anderson, 60-year-old day jailer, was taking Boys back to his second-floor cell from the basement, where the prisoner had bathed.

Suddenly, he said, Boys kicked him in a groin, beat him with a broomstick he had snatched up somewhere and, trampling him, ran downstairs and out the front door. The spring lock had failed to catch. Soon after nine o'clock Boys knocked at the door of Louis Stanford, once Assistant Postmaster, and said: "will you please call the police? I've just come to myself."

TRENTON YOUTH SHOT THRU ARM

Harold Mainprize Hunting Rabbits When Gun Accidentally Discharges

Trenton, March 12 (Special) — Harold Mainprize, 19 of this town, was accidentally shot through the left fore arm, while hunting in Murray Township today. Mainprize managed to stumble to the nearby farmhouse occupied by his cousin, Stewart Mainprize, where a tournique was applied to successfully stup the flow of blood. Young Mainprize was hunting rabbits at the time of the accident, police here were informed.

It is believed the young hunter was probing a clump of bushes with the butt end of his 22 calibre rifle when a branch tripped the trigger discharging the bullet into the fleshy part of the left fore arm. No bones were broken, the wound being a clean one, Dr. J. W. Farley stated after attending the youth. Young Mainprize suffered somewhat from the loss of blood and shock, however.

German Flyers Start New Tactics at Front

(By Axel De Holstein)

(Havas News Agency Staff Writer)

Paris, March 12. — (CP-Havas) Speedy German pursuit planes enlivened an otherwise dull day at the front yesterday by skimming low above the heads of British and French troops holding down the Maginot Line.

Puzzled French officers who studied the novel tactics of the German planes said they may have fired a few machine-gun bursts at Allied infantrymen, but did not attempt systematic strafing.

The planes were not of the "assault" type generally used for attacking troops on the ground but were "pursuit" planes, which specialize in air combat and usually stay at high altitudes.

The best guess Allied air experts could make was that the German fliers were tyros out for training flights under actual war conditions.

More serious flights were carried out by reconnaissance planes of both sides, both over and far behind the lines. The Germans, however, used few planes, for these flights and those only over Alsace and Northern France.

The Royal Air Force continued its regular daily flights over enemy air and naval bases in northwest Germany, Heligoland and the Frisian Islands.

Soldier Leads Children From Burning Home

Toronto, March 12. — (CP) — Pte. John Ferguson of the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps carried and led his four children to safety early today when fire swept through their frame house here. Mrs. Ferguson at present is in the hospital.

Ferguson discovered the fire in the basement when he went to get coal for the kitchen stove. He dashed upstairs and aroused and helped the children to dress. Carrying the smallest, three-year-old Margaret, he led the others through the smoke-filled house to safety.

The other children were June, 10; Eleanor, eight; Mary, six. Two of the children did not have time to don their shoes and stockings and had to run to a neighbors' house in their bare feet.

Cause of the fire which did $700 damage is unknown.

RUSSIANS PRESS TO VIIPURI BAY

Unrelenting Pressure Maintained Despite Peace Attempts

Helsinki, March 12 (AP)—Finland today disclosed that the Red army, pressing along Viipuri Bay, was continuing its advances despite peace negotiations in progress in Moscow.

Russia kept up unrelenting pressure on the northwest shore of Viipuri Bay, aiming at encirclement of the city of Viipuri, and the Finnish high command said "in some places" the Russians "succeeded in advancing a little."

Soviet attacks were repulsed everywhere else except in the direction of Pali, east of Viipuri, the high command communique said, recounting successes on the ice-coated lakes and rivers of the Isthmus front south of Viipuri.

Fifteen Russian planes were said to have been shot down during yesterday's fighting, the period covered by the communique.

U.S. TO RELEASE 2 R.C.A.F. MEN

Both Aviators Who Made Forced Landing Allowed to Return to Canada

Washington, March 12 (AP) — United States officials decided today to release two Canadian army aviators who made a forced landing in a military plane Saturday at Alexandria Bay in New York State.

Both the aviators and the plane will be permitted to leave the United States and return to Canada.

At the State Department it was said that an investigation had disclosed that the plane was forced to land on United States territory through mistake and as a result of distress.

The investigation also resulted in a finding that the plane was not on any hostile mission or engaged in any hostile activity.

Under these circumstances; it was said, and considering that the incident occurred some 3,000 miles from active combat operations, the plane and its two aviators are being allowed to leave the United States.

The airmen, Pilot A. E. L. Cannon of Quebec, and Leading Aircraftsman J. Duguid, of Winnipeg, were injured slightly when their plane, from the No. 112 (City of Winnipeg) Army Co-operation Squadron, landed on a snow-covered field.

They told customs officials at Alexandria that they lost their bearings and were forced to land when the plane ran short of fuel.

CHAMBERLAIN OUTLINES AIMS

Freedom and Security of Allies and Small Nations, Restoration of Poles and Czechs

London, Mar. 12 (CP). — Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain today reiterated publicly that the British peace aims are "freedom and security for ourselves and the small nations of Europe" and restoration of the "independence of the Poles and Czechs".

Mr. Chamberlain asked voters in a Leeds by-election to express "the national unity behind these aims" by supporting the House of Commons candidacy of J. J. C. Henderson, Conservative party nominee.

"We demand tangible proof that such pledges and assurances as are essential to the future peace and well-being of Europe will be fulfilled," he wrote in a letter to Mr. Henderson.

Sumner Welles, United States Under-Secretary of State, after studying latest news reports on the international situation, motored to the United States Embassy for talks with British opposition chieftains.

Leaders Meet Welles.

Major Clement R. Attlee, leader of the Labor party, and Arthur Greenwood, his deputy in the House of Commons, were closeted with him for 80 minutes. Of the confidential interview, Mr. Attlee would say only "we had a very interesting talk".

Sir Archibald Sinclair, leader of the Liberal opposition in the House of Commons, was the next to see Mr. Welles. He stayed a half hour. Meanwhile, it was announced that Mr. Welles would see Dominions Secretary Anthony Eden tomorrow.

The undersecretary had a luncheon engagement with Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, at No. 11 Downing street and appointments for conferences later in the day with Sir Alexander Cadogan, Permanent Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, and Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty.

Airmen at St. Thomas Under Impression They Were Pursuing Usual Procedure States Wing Commander in Statement

By FRANK FLAHERTY

Canadian Press Staff Writer

St. Thomas, Ont., March 12 (CP) —About 156 airmen left the Royal Canadian Air Force training centre near here on February 10 under the impression they were pursuing their usual Saturday afternoon routine and had a right to leave. Wing Commander Reginald Collis, officer commanding the establishment, said today.

The airmen were unaware of a change in orders consequent on the establishment of a new two-shift training schedule which provided classes for them that afternoon, Collis said in a statement to a press conference.

Commissioner William H. Stringer of the Ontario Provincial Police who yesterday conducted a civil inquiry into the alleged "walk-out" of the airmen will report to Attorney-General Conant that he believes "between 200 and 300" air men "walked out". The commissioner issued a finding to that effect last night.

Text of Statement

Text of the statement made by Commander Collis today follows:

"Concerning the alleged 'violent disturbance' at this unit on Saturday, February 10, 1940.

"Prior to February 5, the program of training provided one training period daily and classes terminated at noon Saturday, the afternoon being devoted to recreation and leave.

"On Monday, February 5, airmen under training were divided into two groups, and the daily routine was changed to provide two training periods daily for six days a week, Monday and Saturday inclusive.

"On Friday, Feb. 9, a routine order for the following day was posted, indicating that training would terminate at noon on Saturday, February 10. As this was at variance with the routine order published on Feb. 5, it was cancelled, but unfortunately was placed on the notice boards, before circulation could be stopped.

"The consequence of the change of orders was that 156 airmen were absent from classes. When this situation was realized, service personnel was detailed to proceed to St. Thomas to notify the airmen concerned and available, to return to the school for classes. These airmen returned to their station.

Proceeded in Normal Way

"Subsequently airmen of the unit, who had made application and were granted week-end leave or late passes proceeded out of camp in the normal way. This number included personnel who had returned to the unit Saturday afternoon. No special or blanket leave was granted to these airmen and all airmen left the camp in an orderly and airmanlike manner.

"After investigating the whole incident it was considered that the airmen acted in good faith. No disciplinary action was taken. In addition to the airmen referred to above, it is estimated that there were probably 200 airmen in St. Thomas during the mid-day pass period (11.00 a.m. to 2.30 p.m.). As this day was the first Saturday under the new routine, it is believed that the large number of airmen present in St. Thomas gave rise to rumors of an adverse nature."

Asked about airmen's complaints of shortage of uniforms, Commander Collis said that to the best of his knowledge there was no shortage of uniforms. There may have been difficulty about sizes, since rectified, and a shortage of certain items.

Some General Duties

There was no lack of training for the men, Commander Collis said. He was asked if the men required to polish floors. He said that in a self-contained unit there must be a proportion of the men employed on general duties, including keeping the place clean.

Approximately fifty people were hired a week before Feb. 10 for cleaning duties and they had since come to work.

Commander Collis said Aircraftsman J. A. Telfer, who to the Stringer inquiry complained of lack of training, had not been sent to St. Thomas for training. He was awaiting posting as an aero engine mechanic.

"There is no lack of training for people sent here for training," he said. A man might wait posting. With a big expansion and heavy enlistment, it was impossible to place every man in his proper spot overnight. Possibly five per cent of the men at the station were waiting posting.

Letters From the Troops

Private Clarence Hill of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment C.A.S.F. has written from Aldershot Camp, England, to Mr. Stewart Dies, of Shannonville, telling of the voyage across the Atlantic and experiences in the Old Country.

"I am just taking the pleasure of dropping you a few lines, Stewart," he said, "to congratulate you on your election. My wife told me that you were elected reeve, which I was very glad to hear.

"I am well and enoying very good health over here in England. The weather is very different here in England than it is in good old Canada. We had a rough trip coming across. For the first two days it wasn't too bad. We ran into a storm and then it blew for five days but the last day was very nice. The whole trip over was quite a sight.

"I must tell you Great Britain has some wonderful ships I cannot tell you very much about England as I have never been away on leave since I have been here. They gave us all five days' shore leave when we arrived here in Aldershot but I have never taken mine yet. We have good sleeping quarters here and are very well fed but do not see any Canadian beef over here. The beef is all from Argentine, all very heavy stuff. I suppose the most of it would dress nine or ten hundred.

"I was talking to a couple of old fellows here one day and it happened to be a little cold and snowing that day and one of them asked me how cold it got over in Canada, I said, it gets a lot colder. This friend said some time on a real good cold bright day over there that if you happen to stop in one place when you walk on, your shadow stays right there frozen to the ground He looked at me and at his friend and started to shiver. He said "I shan't ever go over there if that's the kind of place Canada is.

"I suppose times will soon be getting busy over there now, getting ready for the big election. We do not hear very much about it over here. So when you write me do not forget to tell me all the information you can.

"Tell Don I get pretty hungry for a good Canadian cigaret at times, so if he has a spare some time to send it over. I think I shall have to close now, so give my best regards to Mrs. Dies and all the rest of the folks as well. Will say goodnight.

From Clarence.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Frosts and spring planting! When planting should be done is always a question, due to the possibility of late frosts. There is, of course, an average date of last killing frost, but individual springs differ so much from one another that in some years and in some localities the last killing frost may occur as much as one month after the average date. Some of the hardier crops such as potatoes, radishes and onions, may be planted as much as two weeks before the average date of last killing frost, but others should be planted later. Some gardeners, being real observers of nature, watch carefully the progress of native trees and wild plants and sow accordingly.

Finns Lacked Arms In Unequal Struggle, Says Foreign Minister

Refusal by Norway and Sweden to Allow Allied Troops to Pass Through Proved Unconquerable Obstacle, Vaino Tanner Says in Broadcast and "Thus Finland Was Left Alone to Face an Enemy of Superior Numbers"

(By Max Harrelson Associated Press Staff Writer).

Helsinki, March 13 (AP)—Weary Finland, lacking weapons and unable to accept foreign offers of help, ended her bitter 3 1-2 months struggle against Soviet Russia today by yielding more soil and economic and military independence than demanded before the war.

At 11 a.m. (4 a.m. EST), the dogged, courageous Finnish army stopped fighting, and a gloomy peace settled over the battlefields, from the corpse-piled Karelian Isthmus to icy Lapland.

Beginning Friday, the Finnish troops will retreat at the rate of seven kilometres (about 4.5 miles) a day to narrowed frontiers fixed by the treaty signed at Moscow last night, but still subject to formal ratification by the Finnish diet within three days.

Arms Lacking

After an anxious night in which Russia announced the stringent peace terms and the Finnish government was silent, Foreign Minister Vaino Tanner disclosed them in a broadcast to the Finnish people.

Finland was forced to yield because she lacked arms and "had no faith in the promises of others" to aid in the unequal struggle against a foe 50 times her size, Tanner said.

Great Britain and France yesterday disclosed they had offered Feb. 26 to send 50,000 troops to Finland, but Tanner said, "the only possible route was through Norway and Sweden, who refused to let the troops through. This refusal proved an unconquerable obstacle.

"Thus Finland was left alone to face an enemy of superior numbers.

"The surrender is not our fault —it is the fault of our being forsaken by our fellow democracies."

He said that dispatching of Allied troops to Finland by sea was "too hazardous."

Tanner said it was wisest to make peace while Finland's defences remained "unbroken."

"Severely Wounded Nation"

"What kind of peace?" Tanner asked. "A severely wounded nation is surrendering important and agricultural territories."

This, said the Foreign Minister, creates new responsibilities and makes a new building program necessary. He called for a united nation to carry out the reconsolidation.

"We have risen from ruin before," he said. "We have plenty of land left.

"The united front is needed just as surely during peace as war.

"There is the foundation for a new dawn for our nation in the future."

Astounding Feats

He praised the conduct of Finland's stubborn defenders, saying their feats were "astonishing and beyond expectations," but reinforcements were lacking.

The public—which reacted to the peace with numb bewilderment also was lauded by Tanner.

"The home front acted beautifully and the people's morale was praiseworthy," he said, under almost daily bombing attacks and other hardships of war.

The response of this public to the peace was uncertain as yet, but foreign observers took it for granted that a change in the government was imminent.

Change in Government Seen

The order to "cease fire" came on the 105th day of the struggle in which countless thousands had fallen on snowy battlefronts ranging from the Karelian Isthmus and unbowed Viipuri in the southeast to the Arctic reaches of the Petsamo region on the northern coast.

Peace Will Not Affect U. S. Loan to Finland

Washington, March 13 —(AP)—The belief prevailed in Washington today that Russo-Finnish peace would not affect the recent $20,00,000 loan to Finland by the United States export-import bank, but would enable the money to be used in reconstructing the war-torn country.

Formal comment on the Soviet announcement of a treaty ending the Baltic conflict was withheld by officials until the State Department could study complete dispatches.

Government fiscal experts,, however, have professed no concern about the money loaned to Finland. Several months ago the export-import bank turned over $10,000,000. Then Congress increased the bank's capital so that it could make another $20,000,00 loan. The latter has been allocated but has ot been used.

Officials took it for granted that the Finns would make purchases in the United States with the money. As one high official said yesterday, "Finland will need a lot of things whether the war goes on or not."

At 80 Englishman Known as England's Busiest Octogenarian

Kelsale-Cuacarlton, England, Mar. 13 (CP). If Charlie Savage ever gets to feeling his years—he has just celebrated his 80th birthday—this village outside London is going to be in a frightful muddle. For Charlie handles 42 jobs and is known as England's busiest octogenarian.

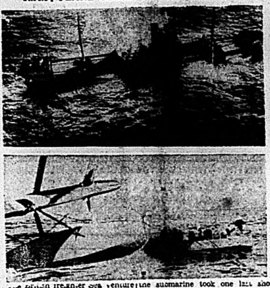
His No. 1 job is as member of the Kelsale-Cuacarlton Parish Council. He has held it since he was 28. He is the council clerk, too, and to mention a few of the others:

He is manager of the village school; organist, choirmaster, trustee, secretary, treasurer and Sunday school secretary of the Methodist Church; secretary of the Kelsale branch of the Foresters (he joined when he was 17); organizer and manager of the Coal Club, Thrift Club, Boot Club and Clothing Club. There are eight village charities and Charlie is connected with all of them.

When he finds time hanging heavy on his hands he writes long newsy letters—of eight or more pages—to his old school chum, 87-year-old George Keeble, who lives in Australia.

Charlie's recipe for longevity is obvious. "Keep busy and you can't find time to grow old," he said.

R.A.F. PLANE COMES TO THE RESCUE



The British freighter Sea Venture was attacked and sunk by a Nazi U-boat, which fled as an R.A.F. coastal patrol plane appeared on the scene. As the plane approached the submarine took one last shot which took effect, TOP. The R.A.F. plane stood by the crew of the Sea Venture until a shore lifeboat came out to bring the seamen safely to land.

NO RED VICTORY IN NORTHERN WAR, ITALIAN VIEW

Count Ciano's Newspaper Says Russia Feared Crack-up Thru War

'CREAKINGS' IN SOVIET

Il Popolo di Roma Says Peace is Compromise Rather Than Soviet Victory

Rome, March 13.—(CP-Havas)—The Russo-Finnish peace does not constitute a Soviet victory but is proof that the Soviet Regime faced a crack-up unless it ended the war, Il Telegrafo, family newspaper of Italian Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano said today.

Other Italian newspapers concentrated attention on the International political consequences of the Moscow peace and stressed the enhancement of Russia's military and naval status.

Il Popolo Di Roma, however, echoed Il Telegrafo's viewpoint, saying—"It is a compromise peace rather than a brilliant Soviet Victory".

Il Telegrafo declared that unmistakable "creakings" recently has been heard from Russia, similar to those which preceded the revolution of 1917.

Measles Epidemic At St. Catharines

St. Catharines, Ont., Mar. 13 (CP). —The measles epidemic has passed the 1,000 mark and new cases are developing daily although the peak of the epidemic has passed, Dr. D. V. Currey, Medical Health Officer, told the Board of Health yesterday.

With 1,025 cases reported since Jan. 1, the medical health officer predicted that before the epidemic probably ends next month the number of cases will have doubled any previous communicable disease outbreak in the city's history. The majority of cases under quarantine now are among pre-school children and school attendances have returned nearly to normal with the recovery of school children.

MAKES RESTITUTION

Gary, Ind., Mar. 13 (AP).—A man walked into the public library, handed Librarian Ralph Shaw a book and said he'd stole it in 1927. Then he asked Shaw what else he could do to make up for the theft. "I've joined the church," the stranger said "and this is one of the things I want to make right." Shaw took the book and told the stranger he'd done all he could.

BRITAIN BIDS WELLES GOODBYE

Press Asks America "Not to Make Our Task More Difficult"

London, March 13.—(CP)—On the occasion of his departure from the United Kingdom, The Daily Mirror presented to Sumner Welles, President Roosevelt's "fact-finding" envoy, the "fact" that Great Britain does not ask any help from the United States "that may conflict with big business" but only that "America should not make our task more difficult".

Said The Mirror—"In bidding Welles goodbye we present him with the following facts—

"Welles is a very charming and discreet man. We like him.

"We have a tremendous task on hand. We are struggling for our lives. We do not wish to be impeded—even by charming people —in that task.

"In fulfilling it, amidst inevitable suffering and anxiety we do not ask help from America—at least not any help that may conflict with big business.

"We ask only that America should not make our task more difficult".

"There are no secrets about British aims in this double war—a war against German domination and against the added barbarisms which hitler has inculcated in his all-too-ready followers.

"The Allied aims are clearly to end these twin dangers and to right the wrong already done before a halt was called. Of these aims Mr. Welles will have found no division of opinion neither in Paris or in London".

The Daily Mail reported that the United States Under-Secretary of State had had "friendly and helpful" talks regarding Anglo-American economic relations and the operation of opinion neither in Paris or in and the searching of United States mail.

POLITICAL LEADERS CONCENTRATE ON ONTARIO, QUEBEC

Little New Material Introduced Into Campaign Despite the Large Number on Hustings

LEADERS HEARD

Prime Minister Speaks at Montreal and Hon. R. J. Manion at Cornwall

(By The Canadian Press)

Nearly a score of outstanding public figures joined issue in the political arena last night to sky-rocket the tumult of the Dominion election campaign to its highest point.

There were more leading speakers on the hustings than at any time since the campaign started and heaviest concentration was in Ontario and Quebec where it appears the great battle of the campaign will be fought.

Leaders of the Liberal, Conservative and Co-operative Commonwealth Federation parties hammered away at their respective arguments on the long-defined issues of the election appeal and little new material was introduced but the din over the old controversial questions increased.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, seven cabinet ministers and two Liberal Provincial Premiers spoke in various cities, far outdistancing opposition parties in number of leading campaigners.

At Montreal, Mr. King charged that Conservative leader Manion had "deserted his party and wiped its name off the electoral map" by adopting the name "National Government."

Prime Minister Claims Conservative Leader Has Wiped Name of Party Off Electoral Map

SPEAKS IN QUEBEC

(By Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, March 13 — (CP)—Charging that Conservative leader Manion had "deserted his party and wiped its name off the electoral map," Prime Minister Mackenzie King last night appealed to a Montreal audience for the same support Quebec gave the Liberal party in 1935.

"Conservatives seem to be ashamed to fight under their own banner or show their own colors," Mr. King said, pointing to the official list of candidates nominated Monday in which Dr. Manion and all his candidates are under the "National Government" heading.

"There used to be a Social Credit Party but it became ashamed of itself and now it is the New Democracy."

Death Valley Scotty Writes Letter To Old Man With Beard at Washington

Death Valley, Calif., Mar. 13 (AP). —There's $100,000 in gold certificates buried in the mountains, Death Valley Scotty has told the federal government.

A visit of a couple of United States Internal Revenue Officers to his castle a few weeks ago set the old mystery prospector to thinking. He had satisfied the income tax investigators, who had been on his trail for years, with a signed statement in January that he had no income for thirty years or so, and had been getting all of his funds on loans from his partner, A. M. Johnson.

"I got to thinking about my yellowbacks that I planted more'n 20 years before Uncle Sam started digging his hole to bury gold in down at Fort Knox, Kentucky," said Scotty. "So I just sat down and wrote a letter to the old gentleman with the beard."

Here is the letter:

"United States Collector of Internal Revenue:

"I had a bunch of money amounting to $100,000 in gold certificates and I buried it in the mountains about the year 1909. Afterwards cloudbursts came and covered it up and maybe sometime I will be able to get it and maybe I will never get it."

(Signed) Walter Scott (Death Valley Scotty).

There were 10 yellowbacks of $10,000 each, says Scotty.

"Take it easy, thar ain't gonna be no stampede," said the famous old prospector, revealing for the second time this year that he had rich deposits hidden in the mountains. His January report to the Income Tax Collector said that thirty years ago he found some rich ore and cached it.

Finnish Requests For War Materials All Answered

British Prime Minister Answers Leslie Hore-Belisha's Charge That Government Was Pleading 'Pure Technicality' in Finland's Failure to Appeal for Men as an 'Excuse for Inaction'

FINNS DECIDED COURSE

'This Epic Story (of Finland's Heroic Struggle) Will Ever be Recounted in Chronicles of Their Own History and Will Remain Alive in Memory of All People,' Chamberlain Declares — Neutrality of Sweden Never Threatened, Premier States — Lloyd George Says It is Old Trouble 'Too Late'

London, March 13.—(CP)—Great Britain was ready to throw the full weight of available resources into Finland's battle against Russia—in response to an appeal which never came, Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons today. At the same time he declared that every Finnish request for materials had been answered.

Mr. Chamberlain's statement was made in the course of a brief debate in which Leslie Hore-Belisha, former Secretary of War, charged that the government was pleading "a pure technicality" — Finland's failure to appeal for men—as an "excuse for inaction".

All Requests For Aid Answered

The Prime Minister's declaration that all requests for materials had been answered came in reply to a question from Mr. Hore-Belisha as to whether Finland had not made repeated requests for materials and men. It was not correct to say the beleaguered country had made repeated requests for men, Mr. Chamberlain said.

It always had been understood that "it was for the Finnish government to decide the course of action they considered best suited to their interests in the light of all available knowledge," Mr. Chamberlain said in opening the discussion on the Russo-Finnish peace settlement.

"As I informed the House on Monday," Mr. Chamberlain said, "we had made preparations to throw the full weight of all available resources into the scales on hearing that this was in accordance with the desires of the Finnish Government".

Of Finland, Mr. Chamberlain said "in their decision they may be assured that the people in the country are united in sympathy for the situation in which they find themselves and admiration for the courage with which they have maintained for so long the struggle against overwhelming odds."

Russia Pays High Price for Victory; 565,000 Casualties

Copenhagen, March 13.—(AP)—Foreign military observers today estimated the Finnish-Russian war had cost at least 565,000 casualties, half of them dead.

These sources divided the losses this way—

Russia — Approximately 250,000 dead and 250,000 wounded.

Finland—30,000 dead and 35,000 wounded.

The abnormally high percentage of war dead was attributed to the bitter cold weather in which most of the war was fought. Many deaths were from freezing after wounds which otherwise would not have been fatal.

One Danish newspaper correspondent today reported Finnish casualties on the Karelian Isthmus front alone were 30,000, including 2,000 young Finnish officers.

HON. HARRY NIXON BACK IN CABINET OF M. F. HEPBURN

Provincial Secretary Reconsiders His Decision After Visit by Premier to His Hotel Suite

WILL TAKE REST

Toronto, March 13.—(CP)—Hon. H. C. Nixon will leave Toronto for "a few days' rest" and then return to take up his duties as Provincial Secretary, his "misunderstanding" with Premier Mitchell Hepburn at an end.

Mr. Hepburn tore up Mr. Nixon's letter of resignation, submitted Monday, after conferring only a few minutes last night with the man who had been his chief supporter since the Ontario Liberal Administration was elected in 1934.

The return of Mr. Nixon was just as sensational as his resignation announcement. He had told the Premier in his letter—"I find myself completely at variance with your recent policy, statement and acts".

Members Pledge Support

Only four hours before the Premier called on Mr. Nixon in his hotel suite, all other available members of the Cabinet had pledged support to Mr. Hepburn in an extraordinary council.

HON. L. MACAULAY SPEAKS TO RALLY OF CONSERVATIVES

Candidates George H. Stokes and George S. White Also Deliver Addresses

PRAISE NATIONAL GOV'T

Radio Censorship Attacked—Thorough Organization of Resources Urged

Introduced at a Conservative rally held last night at Stirling by R. D. Arnott, Hon, Leopold Macaulay bitterly assailed what he termed "The clamouring for rooting position at the Trenton patronage trough displayed by the two Liberal aspirants for the riding of South Hastings at the coming Federal election." He was supported in his address by speeches from both Conservative candidates, George H. Stokes and George S. White. Hon. Mr. Macaulay said that "McLean Haig and Harry Cory are fighting and squabbling for the right to operate the patronage turnstiles at the Trenton air port and their leader clamps down the censure lid to prevent us from telling the people of the nation about it," he declared further in his address. Such are the evils that will only be corrected by the election of such men as Messrs. Stokes and White and their leader Dr. Manion. The issue is simply, whether party government shall continue or be replaced by a non-partisan group of members, who will concentrate upon gaining the maximum war effort on behalf of the Dominion of Canada in a struggle against engulfment in the greatest and most fearful invasion of brutality and barbarism ever known in the Christian era.

"All Christian people of the world will be drawn into this conflict. Canadians, all Britishers are fighting for the way of life given to them by the sacrifice of their forefathers......freedom of speech, Assembly and religion." These are the principles being threatened by the King administration."

Greater Driving Force Needed

"There is dire need for the unleashing of greater driving force and fighting power than can be found in any one-party Government. It's not a Liberal war, it's a national crisis and shall be dealt with adequately by a non-partisan National Government. Instead of scuttling his ship of state, Mackenzie King would have won favor in the eyes of all Canada had he declared a party truce and accepted the united effort offered him. Instead he gave his word and promise and broke it. At the time of the declaration of war he promised there wou'd be another session of Parliament, which would provide opportunity for examination and investigation of the Government's war efforts. A complete session wherein fair-and-square spade work could be carried out before the eyes of the people. Instead he scuttled the ship, offering as an excuse a resolution passed by the Ontario Legislature offering honest and constructive criticism of his war effort." There's nothing to get jumpy about in reasonable criticism, for such criticism is the safety valve of democracy. While I am at variance with many things endorsed by Premier Mitchell Hepburn, I feel sure he is sincere in this one (applause). King and his followers now blame the inadequate state of Canada's arm sto Hon. R. B. Bennett. But at a Kingston meeting in 1935 he criticized the Bennett administration for expenditures in armaments as weapons for the building of Dictatorships. He crucified Bennett at that time for spending too much on war material in times of peace."

Radio Censorship Attacked

Attacking the radio censorship in the present campaign the speaker said that such men as Dr. Manion with the responsibility of thousands of Canadian people upon their shoulders must submit what they would say to the people, first to a group of civil servants responsible only to one man, Mackenzie King."

"Such tactics are democracy in reverse, and if we are to let one party have free reign of things as they do in other lands we might as well submit to Hitlerism here in this Canada of ours. We are at war with Hitler and against Hitlerism in Canada. Honest criticism is the foundation and strength upon which the British Empire has been founded. Britishers are big enough to stand up under it. There is no reason to hedge because of the comfort it offers the enemy. If criticism is not helpful, look about you. The criticism of the past thirty days has spurned the government into more activity than they've shown in the past five years.

Organization of Resources

"We are at war and it calls for a thorough organization of all available resources not of any one political party or group but of all the Canadian people that we may pit our strength to the greatest advantage with the Allies against the enemy that kills, starves and plunders their victims as they go. This can be best accomplished by a National Government, non-partisan, free from catch phrases and fancy slogans, but burdened with swift moving action. The Liberal appeal for unity is well known in the west as is the appeal to sectional division in Quebec. Building and cementing huge blocks in a political campaign is bad, especially when the opposition is held up to that group as their enemy.

"Conservatism is the enemy of Quebec . . .. Vote Conservative and you vote for conscription" is their cry in Quebec when all three parties are committed against conscription. Personal ambitions are a big factor in my opinion. Mackenzie King has an ambition to outlive the record of service rendered by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and he has only two more years to go—that in my opinion is his chief aim at the present time."

George S. White

Introduced by ex-Reeve George Thompson of Rawdon township, Mr. George S. White, Conservative candidate for the Hastings-Peterboro riding, centred his remarks about the alleged inadequate equipment issued to the soldiers particularly of this district prior to their embarking for Britain. Dealing at length with the plight which he declared he had found the members of the Hastings-Prince Edward Regiment to be in, he said from his own personal study he discovered men to be clothed in the same garments turned in by those who returned from the previous war, old moth-eaten coats that let in the cold, and no shoes. Picton was the recruiting centre, Quebec the training centre, and he declared many of the regiment had left for England carrying the same guns used in the last war. Lewis guns, which in recent years had become obsolete, were part of the equipment they took with them, he said, while the majority of the members had no knowledge of the latest type Bren gun. They had no helmets and many were without gasmasks, he charged.

Soldiers' Vote

The method of getting the soldiers' vote was so intricate and complicated that in his opinion only fifty per cent. of the votes would actually be polled. According to regulations the soldier in England and France will be given a blank sheet of paper for a ballot. "He must himself ascertain who the candidates are in his home riding, write the name down; it is then placed in a double envelope and he himself places it in a postbox from which it is dispatched to the returning officer. All this is done by the soldier before his commanding officer."

Reeve W. C. West of Stirling acted as chairman for the evening and seated upon the platform beside the candidate were Hon. Leopold Macaulay, J. S. Morton, E. Morrow, H. C. Martin, Dr. E. A. Carleton. Owing to conflicting social functions throughout the village and in the neighborhood the attendance, though over two hundred, was greatly reduced.

Previous to the meeting many attended the monthly dinner of the Stirling Community Welfare Club held in Community Service Hall upstairs.

PAUDASH LAKE SCENE OF FIRE

Store and Contents Owned by U. A. Hubbell and Sons Burned

Bancroft, Mar. 13 (Special).—Demolishing the structure in less than an hour from its origin, fire completely destroyed the large store and contents of U. A. Hubbell and Sons, prominent northern lumbermen, at Paudash Lake, shortly before six o'clock today.

Investigation of the ruins by the owners and Provincial Police Officer Palmateer, revealed a steel filing case that had survived the flames, standing with three of its doors open. According to U. A. Hubbell the sum of $60.00 was missing from one of the drawers. Silver in another drawer was found intact. The discovery gives rise to the belief that the blaze was of incendiary nature, and a complete investigation is being carried out by police.

Situated on Highway 28 nine miles west of this village, the blazing structure was discovered early today by nearby residents. Flames ate swiftly through the building and in less than an hour it was a mass of smouldering embers. Damage is estimated at $5,000.00.

Alarms sent to this village brought chemical fire apparatus racing to the scene but the building was completely enveloped in flames on their arrival and any work at saving the building was futile. All records and books of the store were destroyed.

The loss is the second of a similar nature to be sustained by Messrs. Hubbell, a large store and contents on the same site being destroyed thirteen years ago with a loss of $10,000.

Police Blotter

Complaints that large transports were being parked on Front Street during the early hours of the morning leaving the motors of the vehicles running, thus disturbing residents of the lower end of the street, were received by police shortly after 2.00 a.m. today. Police investigated and found a large transport parked with the motor running and making an unnecessary noise. The driver, David Walton, Hamilton, was found in a nearby restaurant partaking of a meal. He was ordered to remove the vehicle immediately.

While backing his truck from the west curb on Front Street, the vehicle driven by Herbert Millard, 218 Coleman Street, collided with a south bound truck driven by Eugene Bunnett, 94 East Moira Street yesterday afternoon. The only damage incurred was to the Millard-driven vehicle, police were told.

City police continued their checking of local milk delivery wagons this morning, following complaints that several were making deliveries prior to 6.30 a.m. as provided by city ordinance. No charges were deemed necessary, however.

A lone inebriate shared the cell block with nine transients, who slumbered peacefully at the police station last night.

She has already knitted several pairs of socks, and keeps busy daily with her knitting needles, when not spinning yarn.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

WAR IN NORTH IS ENDED

Unparalleled in its severity in the three and a half months of fighting between Russia and Finland, the northern undeclared war ended today at eleven o'clock (6.00 a.m. EST.)

With dramatic suddenness the end came. Finland, according to the Foreign Minister, lacked arms and it was impossible to have the aid of troops which Britain and France offered as he said Norway and Sweden refused to allow passage of volunteers. According to his broadcast Finland accepted peace while her defence was still intact.

But the terms are severe. The Karelian Isthmus, the Mannerheim Line, the blasted but untaken city of Viipuri, are yielded along with islands in the Gulf of Finland, a broad section of East Finland, part of the peninsulas on the Arctic Ocean. The terms include the lease of Hanko, the Gibraltar of the North, the cession of shores of Lake Ladoga, scene of bitter battles, the building of a railroad to link Russia's White Sea with the Gulf of Bothnia, the operation of a Russian air line across Petsamo district to Norway without restriction of passage of Russian citizens or trade across this area, the closing of the Arctic to Finnish warplanes, warships, or submarines except coastguard boats. Besides Finland must negotiate a trade treaty with Russia as well as a non-aggression pact. For the lease of Hanko the Finns receive a yearly rental of $120,000.

The Finns, defenders and the home front, have written a deathless story of heroism where as a small nation she struggled to defend her borders against an empire, fifty times as large.

All over the world there has been a deep sense of sympathy with and admiration for the Finnish people and the close of the war with the terms which are heavier than were first asked by Russia leaves a sense of disappointment that the struggle should not have ended with the preservation of the integrity of the republic as it was constituted. Finland did all a heroic nation could do.

But the Finns are a vigorous people. They will get down to the task of restoration of their country. Foreign Minister Tanner stated in a broadcast that they would rise from ruin as they have risen before. That is a heroic manner in which to face the future.

LEIPZIG FAIR AS IT ONCE WAS AND NOW IS

How Germany has given herself away through Hitler to the spirit of moral and economic bankruptcy is told in an editorial in the New York Times on the Leipzig Fair. That institution which dates back for centuries is now being held but it bears all the marks of the destructive force which has seized upon Germany since the advent of Adolf Hitler.

The newspaper says: "The Leipzig Spring Fair which Dr. Goebbels opened with one of his characteristic speeches, has a long and until recent years an honorable history. Like the Autumn Fair, it goes back perhaps as far as the twelfth century. In olden times the voice of commerce was sometimes stronger than battle-cries. Safe-conducts were long given to those who came to trade, and enemies, the hunters and the hunted, might all finger the same pieces of goods. Here, for the time being, was a commercial capital of a Central Europe—indeed, of an area far wider than Central Europe in the present sense—whose unity was based on trade. For Leipzig lay on the natural routes from the North Sea and the Baltic, from Russia and the Danubian countries.

"In pre-Hitler days the modern Spring Fair attracted as many as 200,000 visitors, including 30,000 buyers from countries outside Germany. Exhibitions from Czecho-Slovakia, Great Britain, France and Poland attracted attention at Leipzig in the early Nineteen Thirties.

"How much remains since the chill hand of Nazism was laid upon the city? A great many commercial exhibits, no doubt—including, as a dispatch to The Times says, an alarm clock that rings but does not tick, and fluorescent stockings that gleam in the darkness of a blackout. Eighteen foreign countries are represented, with Yugoslavia leading in the number of exhibits. Yet, under the lasting blackout of the aggressive Nazi state, which has brought not only a military but a commercial war into Europe, the Leipzig Fair is a hollow mockery. The old free give-and-take of trade exists no more. Commerce is used to promote hateful purposes and its normal profits are shot away in the hideous waste of war. The Fair is a monument to the moral and economic bankruptcy of Germany, and to the threatened bankruptcy of Western civilization. Goethe once passed that way. He would weep at what the modern Faust has done, with no assurance of redemption."

PROPOSES PLANS TO REDUCE ACCIDENTS

It is contended by a New York state highways official that the shortest way to reduction in accidents lies in a system of driver examination which keeps the incompetent driver off the roads. He has proposed a training school for examiners who test applicants for driver's licences. He has another plan for a written examination on the mechanics of the car and the rules of the road to the present driving, eyesight and English language tests. It is pointed out in the New York Times that this procedure has been found of value. Its comment follows: "Despite the remarkably trouble-free operation of the modern motorcar it surely would be well for drivers to know more about what makes it 'tick' than most of them do now. Well-grounded familiarity with the regulations and rules of the road certainly should be a prerequisite to driving. It might go far to cut down the road-hogging, cutting in and out of lanes, failure to give hand signals, and wrong assumptions of right of way which lead to many of our worst accidents. Both of the Motor Vehicle Department's proposals, if well carried out, point toward greater safety."

Any suggestion as to the means of reducing traffic accidents and of ways of improving the familiarity of drivers with the rules of the road and with the mechanism of their cars will be appreciated by any thoughtful driver as such may help him in some of the situations which might develop while driving along the highways.

A NEW RATION

Food always remains essential.

An army is said to move on its stomach, so a proper ration is needed.

According to a Washington despatch the British Tommies in France will soon be eating a new emergency ration on trial and so will 65,000 U.S. soldiers. It was said that the British Government has placed an initial order for a consignment of the new canned "chow."

The ration is designed for a possible three-day emergency during fighting and is packed in twin tin cans each with its key opener. Here is what is contains:one fifteen ounce can of pre-cooked meat and beans, one of beef stew, one of meat and vegetable hash, and three companion tins, each of which contains six ounces of crackers, one ounce of sugar, and three-quarters ounce of pulverized coffee, soluble even in cold water. The new ration is said to cost seventy cents a day as against the 40 1-2 cents of the present U. S. ration. It is thought the price can be brought down by quantity production.

As sugar is important to the body as a producer of heat and energy it is reported that the U.S. Army is experimenting with a super-emergency ration—a hard bar composed of chocolate, milk soy bean meal, cocoa butter and other ingredients. Its taste is made such that men will not eat it like candy. It is said that in dire necessity a man taking each day three 4-ounce bars, each containing 600 calories, could be sustained in the field for three or four days.

Knowledge of foods has grown greatly in these latter days. Taste and food value are new improvements in the new ration, it is believed, over bully beef and hardtack.

ALL IN 60 YEARS

The other day in New York there was re-enacted a scene, that of the landing of the Salvation Army's first contingent from England.

Here to the largest city of the New World, it was but sixty years ago that the "Army" came, that army which knows no truce and never disbands, and which is one of the great social and brotherly agencies of all time.

Yet in three score years it has permeated not only this whole continent, but touched every spot and reached many million hearts. It has taken a fresh impetus from its establishment here and sent out advance posts to other fields until today it is to be found in every country of the world, carrying on its work of salvation and mercy to those in heathendom and holding before benighted lives noble emotions and opening a new world. These newcomers to Christianity find their new life not in a new land, but in their same place of abode, but their lives are changed.

This is the great work of sixty years. The accomplishment gives hope of that day when such an influence will be felt in every heart.

The Salvation Army is a model to mankind. It is in the world and it is there where it does its work. It does not work from afar but labors in closest contact with the conditions it aims to remove or improve.

Sixty years is less than the scriptural span of life as the Psalmist saw it and there are not a few living whose lives were in their late teens or twenties sixty years ago, when this memorable contingent arrived. The Army has lived a full life in that time and modern miracles in lives and communities have taken place.

This has all happened in a lifetime. It is one of the most amazing stories of the world. Everyone knows the facts.

Sixty years ago five "hallelujah lassies" and Commissioner Railton sang "Ready to Die." This week fifteen bandsmen and five singers formed a small semi-circle on the same spot and the voices, tambourines, bass-drum and brass instruments blended together in the same hymn with the words

> "With a sorrow for sin, must > repentance begin,
> Then salvation of course will > draw nigh."

The scene made 1880 appear very near to 1940.

At a public meeting held in the City Hall to discuss the Collegiate Institute project it was decided that in the opinion of the meeting a new public school should be built in Coleman Ward this year and a Collegiate Institute building commenced not later than next year. There were about 200 persons at the meeting and Mr. Fred S. Deacon, ex-Chairman of the Board of Education presided.

Troop No. 1 of the Belleville Boy Scouts held a lively meeting recently when two drums were presented to them for their Bugle Band, which now consists of twelve bugles and four drums. Mr. W. C. A Holiday in Boston

By TEMPLE MANNING

Whoever deprives himself of a trip to Boston, deprives himself of more than a holiday. Boston is an experience, a city that builds a bridge of memories, to be crossed and recrossed with pleasure.

A city settled three centuries ago by a godly people of rugged character, of faith and vision, it has grown into a modern manufacturing and commercial centre, which still manages to be urbane and to play host in a gracious manner. Around it are hundreds of schools, colleges, universities and libraries, and there are five museums open to the public. It is set amidst delightful suburbs and countryside, and everywhere there are delightful vistas and historic sites. In Boston one can sip a drink in one of the cleverest, most unique spots in the country, or one can dine in a restaurant that has been in business in the same place for 150 years.

One of the most beautiful drives we know is Memorial Drive, which runs by the beautiful Charles River, passing the famous Massachusetts Institute of Technology, then buildings belonging to Harvard. There is Mt. Auburn Cemetery, Valhalla of the poets, where rest the remains of such writers as Longfellow, Holmes, Lowell. On Elmwood Avenue is the James Russell Lowell house, and on Brattle street the home of Longfellow.

Harvard University itself needs a whole day for a proper visit, and it's just about the nicest, most profitable and interesting day a traveler can spend.

Hawthorne's Home

When we visit Concord, we always make tracks for "The Wayside." The only house ever owned by Nathaniel Hawthorne, it was also the girlhood home of Louisa Alcott, and was later occupied by the author of "Five Little Peppers," Margaret Sidney. And, of course, there is Concord Bridge, an historic shrine.

Paul Revere's House.

Drive on and there is Lake Walden, sacred to Thoreau. On through South Sudbury, our goal, of course, is "The Wayside Inn." It was here that Longfellow wrote "Tales of a Wayside Inn."

Boston itself has so much to offer that one can find something new each visit. King's Chapel and its burying ground, the Franklin Printing Office, the Old South Meeting House, the Old State House, Faneuil Hall, the house of Paul Revere, the Old North Church—all have places in history.

Aside from its historical associations, Boston has many fine shops, hotels and clubs to attract the tourist. And then there are trips to Boston's fascinating North Shore and South Shore, where Bostonians play, and where there are magnificent estates, picturesque fishing villages and spots hallowed in history.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

How To Live As Long as You Can

In these days of motor accidents and epidemics of flu followed by pneumonia, no physician would attempt to predict the life span of his patients. He can tell them in all truth that if they will keep their weight down to, or slightly below, average, they will likely live five to ten years longer. If, in addition to keeping their weight down, they will try to live within their means, try to avoid excitement, and not eat large meals, he can promise them even a few years longer of life.

Why can the physician predict or promise a longer life span to those who will faithfully try to follow the above suggestions?

The figures of our insurance companies are compiled from the histories of thousands, in fact, hundreds of thousands, of individuals and they reveal the fact that, past the age of thirty, every extra pound of excess fat cuts down the life expectancy of the individual by 1 per cent. Thus, an individual 30 years of age, 10 pounds overweight with a life expectancy of 40 more years, if he does not reduce his weight, will, on the average, cut four years from his life span. These figures apply to the entire group of overweights some of whom might cut off more or less years, but the average shortening of the life span is 1 per cent for each pound of overweight.

Similarly with emotional disturbances—grief, worry, anxiety, excitement,—all or any of which send up the pulse rate and increase the blood pressure. A continuous increased amount of wear upon the heart and blood vessels. It is by the condition of your heart and blood vessels that your physician judges your real age and state of health.

So, if you want to live long or as long as you can, keep your weight down, and, as much as possible, your emotions under control.

"Longevity—long life—is based on three physiologic levels—low weight, low pulse rate, and low blood pressure".

Judge Deroche Writes Of Trip to Observatory On Mt. Wilson, Calif.

"It occurs to me that the readers of the Ontario-Intelligencer might be interested in some of the astounding features of Southern California," writes His Honor, Judge G. E. Deroche, who with Mrs. Deroche is holidaying in the sunny climes of California.

"Yesterday we drove to the top of Mount Wilson over 6,000 feet high—from the foot of the mountain to the cop covers 18 miles of splendidly paved road, winding up and up with many hair pin turns and with ever-changing views, whether looking away to the top peak or looking down into the chasms below. At the top is the famous Observatory, which houses the 100-inch telescope, the largest in the world. This building is open to the public during certain hours of the day during which time an astronomical lecture is given. Up here there is also a very good hotel at reasonable prices. There are several interesting walks, one of them leading to "Signal Point" where one gets a magnificent view. On a clear day one can see 56 cities and over the tops of these cities, there looms the Pacific Ocean which seems so near I would think Dr. Stoble could hit a golf ball from Liguol Point and land it in the ocean. As a fact the ocean is about thirty miles away, and yet you see the warships floating serenely.

As we came back to the hotel, there were a dozen deer feeding comfortably at a trough with the people walking past within a few feet of them. There are about 100 deer roaming this mountain and coming to the hotel to be fed. Some distance away one sees "Old Baldy," a mountain nearly 11,000 feet high and always covered with snow, winter and summer.

Altogether is was a good afternoon.

G. E. Deroche.

P.S.—In Pasadena we saw the men grinding a 200-inch lens for the Palomar telescope—double the size of Mount Wilson—so science goes on from great things to greater.

The Waste-Paper Basket

The lords of salvage have bidden us save various things that we used to throw away, in particular that paper which we call "waste." The waste-paper basket is to become a source of national strength second only to the pig-bucket. There are some to whom this message will be a cause for reflecting with complacency on their own virtues. They have long since practised what the ladies of Cranford would have called this elegant economy. They have laboriously turned inside-out the envelopes containing circulars and sent them off on new voyages, if they have consigned their old bridge-markers to the flames it has only been inch by inch, in the useful and match-saving form of spills. Others, however, will have by no means such good consciences, when forced to consider their position; and one thing will probably strike them with a horrid clearness—namely, the prodigious amount of paper that they have in fact wasted partly through sloth and partly through cowardice—because they have never thrown it away.

How many of us put by letters or even newspaper cuttings on the ground that we may possibly want them again, and never see them more unless by chance on the moraine of some glacier of past years. Pockets alone contain a not inappreciable quantity of this new valuable refuse. The ladies may not be so guilty, for their garments offer few temptations; but a male coat has many pockets, which, as compared with those temporary harbours of the trouser, afford permanent anchorage. There are a few whose clothes are daily tended with paternal care by some soft-footed Littimer, and he always empties the pockets. The sight morning and evening on the dressing table of that ever-increasing pile of letters must at length rouse the most torpid to action. But most of us have to empty our own pockets and so leave them bulging. In happy days before the name of Bradbury was ever known there were those who used periodically to indulge in a sovereign hunt through their trousers, often with success. So we sometimes hunt frantically through coat pockets for some letter which must by the laws of Nature be either in the brown or the blue, but turns up, if at all, in the grey. Yet, even if we are so undeservedly fortunate, we cram all the other letters hastily back, and bear off the one in triumph, remarking that we knew it must be somewhere.

This is bad enough, but the paper wasting its sweetness in pockets is as nothing to that which lies forgotten and growing ever grimier in shelves and drawers. Occasionally it is tied up, with some futile pretence of order; more often it is higgledy-piggledy; in either case only a mind well regulated to the point of piggishness could hazard a guess as to what it is all about. There are few more terrible skeletons in any cupboard, and we look at those festering drawers with a sensible shrinking. We look only at the outside of them and now, by this stern decree of salvage, we must hearten ourselves to look inside. There will then be several ways in which we may set about our gruesome task. Mr. Silas Wegg, discussing the treasure troves of the Golden Dustman, wondered "Whether he began at the top of the mounds or whether he began at the bottom. Whether he prodded or whether he scooped." Mr. Venus in reply opined that he did neither, since "what was found was found in the sorting and sifting." Presumably, we must sort and sift, but the project presents few attractions. No doubt if we do we shall find not merely letters that have answered themselves and even bills that have paid themselves, but some engulfed objects over which we can pore for a pleasantly sentimental moment:

> A ring perhaps—a rosy wreath—
> A photograph be Vernon Heath—
> Some matron's temporary teeth
> Or hair.

Yet it may be questioned whether in the end those painful and exhaustive researches will have been worth while. We shall probably best serve at once our duties as citizens and our interests as individuals by taking the contents of those drawers, without a scoop or a prod, laying them down in tidy monticules beside the dustbin and wishing the dustman joy of his bargain.

Likes Way British Use German Words

William Lyon Phelps, famous lecturer and professor of English at Yale University for 40 years, loves the way English people have caught hold of German words and made them part of their present war language, he told a Detroit audience where he lectured this week and reported in the Windsor Star.

Putting It Over

Does he think all those German words have been stealthily slipped into English newspapers and verbiage through the propaganda of Dr. Goebbels? Do they show that German is on the upgrade for influencing the talk of the Englishman's tongue?

William Lyon Phelps laughs.

"It's the best joke in the world the way the English are using these German words in mockery. The Germans cannot understand it. They don't know that kind of humor. The English did it in the last war and they are doing it in this," he said. "In the last war we had 'strafe' and 'versunkt.' The English used them when they wanted to make fun of something.

"It's the same thing as the story of the English soldiers singing the German victory song lustily in the trenches and then laughing. The Germans couldn't understand."

No Objection

Sometimes a word taken in a joke may remain as an acknowledged part of a language. So, if "putsch" and "blitzkrieg" become English words, the professor of English will not object. At the present, however, any place they have in the English language is very much "ersatz" in Dr. Phelps' opinion.

These sentiments were expressed by the professor while he arranged a black bow tie before he went on the stage of the Fisher Theatre today to lecture to the Detroit Town Hall.

"You fix it," the professor exclaimed, turning to his friend, Edgar A. Guest. "I never can get them flat! They always go in a bunch in the centre when I tie them and then one side is always larger than the other and it droops down at an angle.

That tie worried Dr. Phelps. He wanted it right, just as he wanted to have his light-colored coat on straight. That is part of his interest in life, which he declared embraces everything but mathematics. The only reason he is not interested in mathematics is because he has not that kind of mind.

"I spent 18 years learning it," he said, "and never got any farther than long division."

Clothes Interest

He says, "Every single man or woman, boy or girl, is interested in clothes." He particularly approves the change women's garments took in 1920 when they "went from 12 garments to four and everyone was much happier because of it." And modern hats he finds makes "every walk down the street thrilling."

He likes the snood which goes back to Chaucer's time and he approves the angles at which today's hats tilt.

"The only similarity hats have to one another now is that not one of them sits on straight, and that's what makes them interesting."

It is a long way from a woman's hat to examination papers. But they are another of Dr. Phelps' loves.

"The only people who don't like examination papers," he stated, "are those who are afraid of them. I am a firm believer in examinations."

If men and women know their subjects and are interested, and have no fear regarding examinations, they love them, too, he said.

Everybody loves the idea of a physical examination. If a boy passes something that tells him to see how hard he can wallop, he won't go on without giving that machine all the strength he has. I've had students at Yale who were positively thrilled at going in to write an examination. They were interested and they wanted to show what they knew."

"The professor of English does not have so much admiration for moving pictures and radios. "I wondered," he said, "why moving pictures were an insult to the subnormal child. And why the radio was terrible too, with all that awful slush.

"In the fall of 1938 I found out when hundreds of thousands of people believed that Mars had been invaded. For the believer in a story of that kind coming over the radio is deficient in intelligence. He may be a comfort to his mother. But he isn't much more. And I realized then that it is for that kind of person moving picture and radio entertainment are provided and they have to be the way they are for that person's peculiar requirements."

Well Reproduced

Dr. Phelps excluded "Wuthering Heights" which he voted the best picture of the year and admitted was "perfectly honest reproduction of Emily Bronte's book," with "beautiful acting and scenery."

He also excluded slapstick comedy which he did not class as "slush." "I love that!" he exclaimed, "I absolutely love it when a pompous man walks into a room and gets a wedge of cream pie right in the eye. That delights me. And I'd like to see Harold Lloyd every two weeks instead of every two years. That isn't what I mean by slush. I mean the 'there'll be no wedding bells for her' sort of thing."

"I live one day at a time," concluded the philosopher whose secret formula for being happy is to be interested in so many things in life that he cannot remain worried or depressed for long.

Three Cents Cost

"If you want to give yourself a mental examination, all it will cost you is three cents and 10 minutes' time. Buy a newspaper. There should be something of interest to you on every page. The only thing I am not interested in is the comic strip. I don't know why, but I'm not.

"The first page is the record of defeats, tragedy, failures. They are on the first page because they are news; they show we are optimists. It is news that a couple cannot live together and are divorced. Most of us roll along without tragedy and failure."

The social column got a boost from the professor who said women should not be laughed at for reading society news. "If a man is not laughed at for reading four columns of fine print on a prize fight, why should a woman be criticized for being interested in engagements, parties and things like that?"

Finally, the sports page came in for Dr. Phelps' recommendation, to all readers. "There is not any reason that a violent interest in a football game should not go with a violent passion for Shakespeare," he declared.

"When someone asked me once if I should be more pleased with a fine recitation by a student in class than by a touchdown, I replied that when a student makes a fine recitation I like it, but I don't smash my hat!"

BROAD TERRITORIAL

All the shores of Lake Ladoga and some territory northeast of the lake. (Where the Finns have reported the slaying of thousands of Russian troops);

A 30-year Russian lease on the peninsula of Hanko, Finnish "Gibraltar" at the mouth of the Gulf of Finland, which Russia intends to convert into a military and naval base;

Various islands in the Gulf of Finland;

A broad swath of Eastern Finland in the region of the Arctic Circle;

Part of the Sredni and Rybachi peninsulas on the Arctic Ocean;

A railroad to be built this year to link Russia's White Sea ports with the Gulf of Bothnia;

Operation of a Russian airline across the Petsamo district between Russia and Norway and no restriction on passage of Russian citizens or commerce across this area;

A promise that no Finnish warplanes, warships or submarines, except small coast guard boats, [illegible] operate in the Arctic Ocean.

[illegible] return, the Finns get peace [illegible] a yearly rental of 8,000,000 Finnish markka (about $120,000) for Hanko.

They must negotiate a trade treaty and make a non-aggression alliance with Russia. (Russia denounced the previous non-aggression pact just before invading Finland, Nov. 30.)

Original Demands Less Severe

Russia's original demands, which the Finns had refused, were less severe. They offered Finland part of Soviet Karelia on Finland's long eastern border in return for a small strip of the Karelian Isthmus northwest of Leningrad; a lease on Hanko; part of the Sredni and Rybachi peninsulas; and exchange of some islands in the Gulf of Finland.

The new, drastically - revised frontiers are outlined in a map appended to the treaty, but detailed determination is provided by a mixed commission to be formed within ten days.

Listed specifically in the treaty as concessions to Russia are the towns of Sortavala, Suojarvi and Kakisalmi north and west of Lake Ladoga; the territory east of Markajaervi near the Arctic circle and the town of Kuolajaervi on the Salla front.

Figured in War News

(These localities have figured in the war news in connection with reports of smashing Finnish victories over the invading Red army.

The lease on Hanko also would include a number of nearby islands and the adjacent waters, the Finns to withdraw within ten days.

The Arctic Petsamo area, occupied by Russian troops, is to be relinquished to Finland with the provision that Finland will establish no military or naval bases in the Arctic and that Finnish warships there must not exceed 15 of 400 tons each or any number of 100 tons or less.

Finns Have to Build Railroad

The Finns would have to build during 1940 a railroad from Kemijaervi to the Russian border to connect with a Russian line to be built from Kandalaska. (As the border is now drawn, two-thirds of this 150-mile distance is in Finland).

This route would connect with the present railroad from Kemijaervi to the head of the Gulf of Bothnia, and the treaty provided the right of Russian transit over it to Sweden.

The treaty would restore automatically trade relations between Finland and the Soviet Union, with a formal trade pact to be negotiated.

Non-aggression is provided in the following clause:

"Both contracting parties undertake mutually to refrain from any attack upon each other, not to conclude any alliances and not to participate in any coalitions against one of the contracting parties.

Drafted in Three Languages

The treaty was drafted in the Russian, Finnish and Swedish languages.

Tass, Soviet Government News Agency, said it was signed at 2:30 a.m. by Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff, Soviet Presidium member Andrey A. Zhdanoff, and Brigade Commander Alexander Mikhailovich Vaselefisky for Russia; and by Premier Risto Ryti, Juhu Paaikivi, General Kari Rudolf Walden and Prof. Vaino Voinmaa, for Finland.

The Finnish delegation has been in Moscow for several days conducting hitherto secret negotiations for peace.

A Frequent Battleground

The Karelian Isthmus and its ancient city of Viipuri, a part of the price Finland is announced to have paid for peace with Russia, has been a frequent battleground since the 12th Century.

An irregularly - formed land bridge extending from southeast Finland into Russia, the Isthmus separates the Gulf of Finland and Europe's largest lake, Ladoga.

At the southeastern end of the 70-mile wide isthmus is Leningrad leading Soviet seaport, and the northwestern end is Viipuri.

It was via the Karelian Isthmus that the first Finnish settlers went to Finland in the fourth century And it was here, following their independence from Russia after the first Great War, that they erected their stout Mannerheim line, a system of land and water fortifications that stalled Russia's latest invasion for three and a half months.

Loves Industrial City

Russian acquisition of Viipuri would mean the loss to Finland of the chief industrial, commercial and distributing centre for her eastern territory.

Viipuri rose in warfare. The ancient seaport, today reduced to a shambles by Russian siege guns, had its origin almost 650 years ago in the avenging crusade of a Swedish war lord, Marshal Torkel Knutson.

His mission was two-fold: To take revenge against the hardy, pagan Finns for 500 years of raids against the Scandinavian seacoast and to convert them to Christianity.

Tide of Invasion Shifted

In 1293 Knutson succeeded in establishing the grim garrison castle of Viipuri. Around it grew the present city, until the Russian invasion a thriving metropolis of 74,000 persons and a gay resort to summer with parasoled beaches thronged with visitors from all Europe.

For the next 400 years the tide of invasion shifted directions, coming from the east—from Russia.

Peter the Great, the shipbuilding Czar, threw his legions against the city in 1709 with such frequent and disastrous assaults against the Swedish-directed defence that the gates of Viipuri came to be known as "the death of the Muscovites."

Peter finally defeated Charles XII of Sweden and Viipuri was forced to surrender. Thereafter the city was Russian-dominated until the Bolshevik revolution and the eventual establishment of the Finnish republic on June 17, 1919.

Timber Exports

Koivisto, less than halfway between Viipuri and Leningrad, is another important Karelian Isthmus city where Finland's timber exports have gone to markets of the world.

The Koivisto forts, eastern anchor of the Mannerheim Line, fell recently to the Russians.

Hanko, the Finnish "Gibraltar of the Baltic," where the Russians gained a military base by the treaty, guards the northern entrance to the Gulf of Finland, watergate to Leningrad.

Besides its military value, Hanko is important as a seaport. Since 1890 its harbor has been kept open during the winter months by icebreakers when most other Finnish ports are frozen over.

Although a port as early as the 13th century, modern Hanko dates only from 1874 when the peninsula was connected with the interior by a railroad. Much of Finland's herring and salmon are exported through this port city of 8,000 population.

POLITICAL LEADERS CONCENTRATE

Parliament would have been dissolved immediately after the special session last September but for the necessity of proceeding with all speed to reorganize defence and overseas forces, he continued, expressing confidence Quebec would support the government in the March 26 vote.

Dr. Manion spoke at Cornwall, Ont., and concentrated on an attack on Transport Minister Howe who he accused of telling a "common garden variety of lie" by suggesting that the Conservative leader was associating in his campaign with profiteers eager to repeat their conduct of the first Great War.

Working for Common People

The National Conservative Party was not getting much support from financial groups, Dr. Manion said, because he had declared that when he became leader he would work for the welfare of the common people. In this regard, he proposed more Labor representatives on war boards.

At Stratford, Defence Minister Rogers paid tribute to the part the Royal Canadian Air Force is playing in the war effort.

"I can say as far as the R.C.A.F. is concerned it has been building a morale in this country and, if given the proper scope, will be enabled to make a brilliant record," he said.

Mr. Rogers called Canada's First Division "the best-clothed force that ever left this country for overseas. The men who are criticizing the government on the matter of the equipment of the Canadian forces are making an indictment that does not carry with it the intelligent assent of the Canadian people."

Not Ross Rifles Used, Says Rogers

Guns supplied to the First Division had been put in first-class condition and "the rifles used are not the Ross rifles provided by the Conservative Government of the last war." Replying to Dr. Manion, he said it was untrue that no artillery was sent overseas with the First Division.

"Much has been said of the problem of the equipment of our forces. I have not at any time said we did not have a problem. But rather I put it up to the people that you could not have anything but such a problem unless you set up a wartime equipment establishment in peacetime. And that would be an impossibility."

C.C.F. Doubted Constitution

At Edmonton, J. S. Woodsworth, National leader of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, said he doubted whether wartime defence regulations were constitutional.

The Defence of Canada regulations nullify the Magna Charta, Habeaus Corpus, the Bill of Rights and all the victories the common people have won in their fight for freedom, Mr. Woodsworth said.

"We condemn the Germans for submitting to the dictatorship of Hitler but we are no better than the Germans if we submit to these regulations."

In Ontario the regulations were "imposed so severely" that the people were afraid to say anything for fear they would be jailed.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King "doesn't look like a dictator, doesn't talk like a dictator but he is acting like one."

Employees of the Canadian National Railways had no assurance a Liberal government would not amalgamate the two large railway systems in Canada. The government's wartime financial policy of repatriation of Canadian Pacific Railway shares from England and their deposit in the Bank of Canada would "load" the country with another railway system.

Lapointe Praises Unity

Quebec and the rest of Canada today stand united, in contrast to 1917, Justice Minister Lapointe said at Quebec.

"Canada is a nation. "We don't want to lose the liberty threatened by dictators trying to control the occidental world."

The war meant economic conflict and Canada wished to "do its part" generously. But it was not the desire of Canadians to plunge their country into bankruptcy.

He was acclaimed when he said that "recruiting is on a voluntary basis—and we want to keep it voluntary."

"All my life I have worked for unity, I have carried the banner of Canadian union. People in other provinces have their ideas, too, and I have maintained that comprises sometimes are necessary in the cause of unity."

Supporters of Dr. Manion had made "false charges" that Canadian soldiers were ill-clad by the Liberals.

"We have made errors. Only a superman does not make errors. But when we make a mistake we correct it."

French-speaking Canadians held prominent posts in the armed forces of the Dominion, he said, and many Roman Catholic chaplains were at the disposal of soldiers.

"It's not like in 1917 when all Canada was against Quebec. Today the rest of Canada is with Quebec and Quebec is with the rest of Canada."

Should Have Invited Conservatives

Prime Minister King should have invited the Conservatives to join with him in a National Government at the outbreak of war and postponed the election until the end of the war, Leopold Macaulay, former Ontario Conservative leader, said at Stirling, Ont.

"Even if he had not formed a National Government, but postponed the election, Dr. Manion would have agreed with him as it would have been in the interest of the country to forget about elections until the end of the war.

"Hepburn is sincere in his 'win the war policy' and I agree with him," Mr. Macaulay said. "It is through the criticism of King's war policy that the soldiers' mothers' mothers received their allowances and that the soldiers received better equipment and clothing.

At Whitby, Ont., Sylvanus Appe, National Government candidate in Brant, charged that he and other members of the Toronto National Hockey League Club were forced to give up military training because of a lack of military equipment.

Signed Under Conditions

He recalled that Conn Smythe, Manager of the Maple Leafs, stipulated that when the members of the team signed their contracts last fall they were to take military training "so as to be prepared to go overseas at any time they were needed—we all were quite willing to go."

"Each morning members of the team went out to Exhibition Park for machine-gun training with the Toronto Scottish. Our instructors told us the machine guns were those used in the last war and they were not accurate, but that they were quite satisfactory for training purposes, although they wouldn't want to use them in a war against the modern German guns. The ammuni wnottaoinnnn guns. The ammunition was that left over from the last war, and sometimes it wouldn't go off, but it wasn't too bad.

"But we had to stop our training because when the Toronto Scottish went overseas they took the machine guns with them."

King Criticised by Drew

Large aircraft orders would have been placed by the Allies in Canada rather than in the United States but for the delay of Mr. King in adopting the British commonwealth air training plan, Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, said at Fort William.

Mr. Mackenzie King deprived Canada of an opportunity to build up a tremendous aircraft industry by refusing British proposals for the training of pilots in the Dominion. Canada thereby had been slowed in her development as a leader in world aviation.

The Fort William plant of the Canadian Car and Foundry Company would have received orders for at least 600 planes, rather than 60, if the British offers had been accepted in 1937, he said. Instead many orders had been placed in the United States.

Doubted Good Faith Charged

At Montreal, National Chairman M. J. Coldwell of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation said he doubted the good faith of Mr. King's promise not to introduce conscription in Canada.

Mr. Coldwell said he was confident last September that the Prime Minister would not introduce conscription but he had come to doubt it in the last six months.

The C.C.F. chairman claimed it was necessary to search for the hidden meaning in Mr. King's words. The Liberal leader had promised not to call a general election until after another session of parliament, yet when the Commons was convened Jan. 25 he had maintained his promise was fulfilled. There was nothing to stop Mr. King from fulfilling his non-conscription pledge the same way.

Gov't Empowered is Claim

The government already had the power to impose conscription because the militia Act provided that every able-bodied man could be called out for service. Pensions Minister Mackenzie had explained in parliament in behalf of the government that Section 64 provided that troops called out under the Act could be placed on Active Service either within or outside of Canada.

M. A. MacPherson, National Government candidate in Regina, at Lethbridge, Alta., scored the Liberal party for continuing its party lines in wartime and appealed for election of a National Government of men irrespective of party affiliation.

Labor Minister McLarty told a London, Ont., meeting that the government moved quickly to ensure efficiency in the war effort when war was declared.

Revenue Minister Ilsley continued his Maritime tour with a speech at Annapolis Royal, N.S., Attorney-General Conant of Ontario spoke at Pickering, Ont., at a Liberal meeting, Trade Minister Euler was at Mount Forest, Ont., Resources Minister Crerar at Swan River, Man., and Premier Thane Campbell of Prince Edward Island at Guelph, Ont.

Hon. Earl Lawson of Toronto addressed a Sarnia Conservative rally and C. A. Ronning, Alberta C.C.F. leader spoke at Edmonton.

Land 'Going Back' In S. Ontario, Scientist Says

Hamilton, Ont., March 12.—(CP)—Land in Southern Ontario, from an agricultural standpoint, is "definitely going back', John F. Simmons, of the Forestry Branch, Provincial Department of Lands and Forests, told Wentworth County Council today.

"Less than 10 per cent of the land is bushland, and this percentage is going down all the time", Mr. Simmons said. He stressed that forests were necessary for soil and moisture conservation, and hence reforestation was necessary if the land were to produce good crops.

"Mortgages and high taxes caused many farmers to cut down trees for commercial purposes, which they would not otherwise have done", William H. English, Reeve of Ancaster, informed council.

Better progress could be made in reforestation, declared William S. Milmine, Reeve of Saltfleet, if there were many small woodlots plants in the county, rather than one large woodlot.

Manning the guns is John Mills in this scene from "Torpedo Raider" to be presented next at the McCarthy Theatre. This smashing drama of naval warfare is reminiscent of the recent Graf Spee tragedy. The comedy hit "Money to Burn," opens on the same program.

On With the Dance

By ALICE ALDEN

SCATTER-BRAIN by day but beautiful young lady by night! For her no prettier evening style has been introduced than the tight bodice and bouffant skirt, which comes out slightly changed each season. This dress is pink net with an opalescent sequin top, and please keep in mind that it looks its best over a little corset of one kind or another. A pantie girdle may be sufficient, or a glorified ferris waist, new this season. Pink camellias might nestle in your hair, and you may want to keep long pink doeskin gloves on until the last waltz is over.

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Inculcation of Behavior Principles In Child Brings Mother Rich Reward

The mother of fourteen-year-old Lillian Harvey may never have heard of Cornelia, famous in history as a model Roman Mother. But Lillian's mother and Cornelia apparently had the same ideals of bringing up their children, and the same happy rewards for their devoted training.

Seneca tells us the inspiring story of Cornelia, a story that has warmed the hearts of mothers down through the long corridors of time. One day Cornelia had a visitor, a very rich and very important personage. Proudly the visitor displayed her jewels, and condescendingly asked Cornelia about her. Cornelia kept her visitor talking until her children came home from school. "And these", she said, presenting her children, "are my jewels".

When little Lilliam Harvey, in the eight grade of New York's Public School 115, received the $150 prize awarded to the winner of the Rebecca Elsberg Memorial for "continued improvement in scholarship, efforts at self-improvement in health, behaviour and helpfulness both in and out of school", her mother must have felt as Cornelia felt.

Lillian's mother wasn't able to have the proud privilege of seeing her daughter presented with the prize by New York's Superintendent of Schools. And Lillian wasted no time in getting to the hospital where her mother has been in bed for several months with a broken leg. Bursting with happiness, Lillian gave all her newly-acquired wealth to her mother "to help you get well, Mother".

An appealing sidelight on Lillian's personality was revealed in the fact that she wasn't a bit eager to discuss her home life with reporters. But a proud friend of hers, who went with her when she received the prize, revealed that Lillian's mother is a widow, living on a small pension, and that Lillian and her older sister had kept house for themselves and their seven-year-old brother since last October, when Mrs. Harvey had to be taken to a hospital with a broken leg. No wonder this little girl was praised for her "excellent conduct and helpfulness at home"!

The phrase of the award-citation that reward "helpfulness in school" was enthusiastically vouched for by Lillian's teachers—"She has always responded most willingly to any requests made to her by her teachers".

This jewel of a little girl gives a lovely light!

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Will you please tell me, in your column, the correct form of signature for a lady to use in writing to her personal maid or to any other servant in her household? Should it be Mrs. Albert Wald, or Mary-Louise Wald, or simply Mrs. Wald?

HALIBUT CREOLE—Place halibut steak in oiled shallow baking pan. Dot fish with butter; season with salt, pepper; sprinkle with finely-minced onion and green pepper. Cover with layer of dry bread crumbs. Bake in hot oven until vegetables are soft and beginning to brown.

Boil apricots in water until very soft, about 25 minutes; add sugar, allow to come to good boil, remove from fire and beat to pulp. Soften gelatin in cold water and dissolve in hot apricots; cool. Beat egg very light, add sugar, vanilla and beat again Whip cream and blend with egg. Arrange a layer of sponge cake, cut about one-fourth inch thick, in bottom of refrigerator pan, spread with apricots and cover with whipped mixture. Freeze, but not too hard. Cut in squares and serve with cream side up. Serves six.

Fashion Flashes

IT'S THE SAME STORY everywhere—red is used to tone up black, white or blue. Made for Florida is a smart pillow bag in white capeskin with a flower and leaf design in red wool embroidery. The bag is piped in red leather and there are white and red tassels.

You can't beat black and white. A lovely dinner dress has a black taffeta bodice worn with a full skirt of white satin with narrow stripes of black taffeta.

There's something new in silk prints all the time. A handsome suit has an accordion pleated skirt in yellow, gray, teal blue and red. The sheer silk blouse, tucked like a shirt, is pale gray, while the short-sleeved jacket is in coral pink.

It's good to look at southern resort clothes, for they give an idea of what will be worn come summer. A simple frock of spun silk in dusty pink is worn with a nubby linen cardigan striped in muted tones of rose, pink and violet. Both dress and cardigan are collarless.

Just right for suit wear is a small brimmed high-crowned sailor in fuchsia colored felt with big soft bow loops in front. Bow and wide crown band are of navy satin, and the veil is navy with a lacy edge.

ALL OF US are jubilant over the new chiffons. There never will be a lovelier material or one more to be depended on year after year. Lime, lemon, grey, and, in the case of today's gown, fuchsia, are some of the leading shades in both resort and northern night spots. A great many of the dresses are topped by wool jackets, others defy anyone to conceal pretty shoulder draping and graceful decolletages.

The chiffon, left, is criss-crossed high in front and cut into a low V in back. The elongated waistline is one to watch in both day and evening styles. A corset to go along is just around the corner.

Right, a gown as light in the hand, perhaps, as chiffon, is fashioned of imported starched crepe, which keeps its crispness regardless of many dry cleanings. Purple and fuchsia daisies are printed on a white ground, and green velvet ribbon brings in a third shade on the fitted bodice. A quaint-looking dress on the hanger, it is extremely chic on the figure. It has a double bustle-bow.

Deterents to Proposals — Old and New

The latest find of the Institute of Family Relations, after having completed a study of romance and engagements, is to the effect that more proposals of marriage are made in automobiles than in the home. But proposals made in the home are more durable, lead more unfailingly to marriage, and are therefore the best bets. Lack of privacy in the home is given as the reason why George defers popping the question. Apartments are small, these days, and be it house or flat, both seem to be infested with family interruptions.

Father may just have thought of a daring plan to stop the war in Europe, and is desperately in need of ears into which to pour the glad word. His arrival may coincide with the moment the shy young man has mustered up enough courage to slip his arm around daughters waist. George leaps to examine a vase upon the mantlepiece and while listening to father's plan his courage evaporates.

Today love is streamlined. The modern young man need not run the family gamut at all. He may arrive at the girl's front door and by honking the horn even omit weather pleasantries with the family. The girl is waiting. They're off a forty-five miles an hour, insured against anyone's barging in.

Now as to the durable quality of automobile proposals—If daughter keeps her head, minds her manners and avoids too hectic petting, the proposal is apt "to take'. If it's just a wild petting party, that's that—

With the introduction of portieres into the scheme of household decorations a generation or two ago, dad never felt safe for a moment from the menace of his girl's little brother, who had a horrid way of sneaking up. Nothing for it but to walk the icy streets in winter or sit in a public park, as mosquito fodder, in summer.

Dad had to be terribly and seriously in love to pop the question under such circumstances.

The Institute of Family Relations, taking into consideration Leap Year, has a word to say about feminine proposals. Dr. Paul Popenoe, Head of the Institute doesn't think women make a good job of asking the boy friend's hand in marriage. Out of 129 feminine proposals, 50 girls were turned down flat.

Perhaps it's because women are such novices at saying—"Will you be mine"? If you're old enough, you will recall the dreadful attempts at speech-making women made in the old pre-Suffrage days. Now look at them—with the greatest of ease they mount the platform or the soap-box, talk well and wittily, confounding hecklers and making a thoroughly good job of their special pleading.

Perhaps before another Leap Year dawns, women will have learned the art of proposing. It seems, according to Dr. Popenoe, that girls pop the question in a melancholy manner, utterly lacking charm or conviction.

All said and done, there are some things men like to do for themselves. They prefer neckties of their own selection, they feel more certain of the cigars they choose, and when it comes to proposing to a girl, while she may have skillfully managed all the skirmishes, men like to feel they have really done the job themselves.

CIGARETS ON WHEELS

A novelty which might make a nice present for some one is a small Venetian glass cart, with wheels that work and a tripod rest. The cart proper is a box with a lid, and it is meant for cigarets. The whole thing is no larger than the average cigaret box.

Train Child in Conversation

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D

In this country we are growing conservation-conscious. What meaning has this for our family and children?

Interest in the conservation of soil, forest, stream, wild life and other natural resources involves the problems of food supply and human health, including mental health. Then there arises the problem of social responsibility—"Am I my brother's keeper?"

At the meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, at Columbus, there was a round-table on "Education for Conservation". This problem of social responsibility kept coming up, and your reporter insisted that the child and his family are the most important items in our natural resources—health, physical, mental, moral (in the widest sense). To this there seemed to be agreement and an understanding that a similar round-table next year would embrace this field.

Responsibility in Family

Since that meeting I have been thinking of this problem of social responsibility in relation to responsibility of the child in the family—In the negative sense, that he learn to keep from doing what will infringe upon the right and possessions of others; in the positive sense, that he further the welfare and happiness of others.

It is human conservation that we talk about when we consider home citizenship in its widest sense. How can we hope to cultivate a wholesome attitude toward those natural resources not immediately in the child's environment until we can lead him to a similar attitude toward the public buildings, parks and other spaces which belong to the community in which he lives? And how can we cultivate a wholesome attitude in the child toward such possessions of the public until he learns at home and in his neighborhood to respect the rights and possessions of others there?

Personal Sacrifices

How can we hope to induce this child, as he grows up, to choose to make personal sacrifices for the larger social good, in terms of helping to conserve the natural resources, until he has learned to make personal sacrifices in his own environment?

In the home we parents have the problem of cultivating in the growing child, from babyhood, some basic inhibitions so as to conserve his life and the lives of others; also the possessions of others. In addition, we have the problem of cultivating in him a desire to co-operate with others in his home, and to share in the duties and responsibilities for the common good of the family. It means that the growing child will need constantly to learn not to do some things he would like to do, and to do some thing he would not like to do.

To this end we parents shall try to make painful what we never want the child to do and pleasant what we want him always to do. If we are to get far in education for conservation of our natural resources, material or human, we will have to begin at the crib.

Solving Parent Problems

Q—My sister says she is glad her 19-year-old boy has shown no interest in girls, that since he is always home, they need have no worries about him. I tell her she has more reasons to worry because he is always home and avoids the girls. Who is right?

A—Probably you are. At the present rate, this lad faces painful loneliness and feeling of inferiority later, if not now. Normally, the adolescent likes to mingle frequently with a number of boys and girls. That lad who begins going with girls unusually late may feel so timid about it as to "fall hard" for some one his inferior. The same holds true with girls, as a rule.

Q—What is a good way to train a child to be disobedient?

A—Make many commands and repeat them often.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Scarlet Fever

If your child should develop scarlet fever, or if you are even suspicious that he might have it, don't lose any time calling your doctor. I say that because so many complications may arise if the disease is allowed to carry on.

The kidneys are very often seriously affected in scarlet fever and if care isn't taken there is a great danger that the injury will be permanent. I know when I was called to see a child with the fever, or where it suspected he might have the disease, I always examined the urine first thing. And I kept on examining it, too. Sooner or later you are almost certain to find that some of the cells in the kidneys are not operating properly. Often elements of the blood, like albumen, will be found and then you know you have an acute infection which, if it isn't cleared up, will do permanent injury to the kidneys.

In Scarlet fever I always keep an ear on the heart. This very important organ is often involved in a bad case of the disease and here too, the duty of your doctor is to see that the heart doesn't receive any permanent injury as a result of carelessness in treating and handling the case.

I have known cases, too, where the eyes of a scarlet fever patient have been left weak and damaged for life just because the disease wasn't recognized in time and given the proper treatment. You see, scarlet fever releases poisons in the blood stream of the victim and these poisons attack various organs in the body, including the eyes.

Perhaps the most common complication with scarlet fever is in the ear—the middle ear. Since a great deal of the infection is in the throat it is liable to work its way into the middle ear and there set up an infection which is not only extremely painful, but may lead on to a mastoid or even meningitis.

Today they have developed a serum for the treatment and prevention of scarlet fever. It hasn't had the sure-fire results that vaccine has had with small pox, or anti-toxin in diphtheria, but it does help in some cases.

In the days when this preparation was first on the market, it wasn't as refined as it is now and sometimes patients suffered a serious reaction. I remember going once to a house where a mother was nursing three children with scarlet fever. She told me that she didn't think she had ever had the disease and she was a little worried for that reason. I told her about the serum they were just beginning to use an offered to innoculte her. Well, she agreed and I gave her the prescribed dose.

Next day when I went out to the farmhouse to see the children I found I was in a fine mess. The woman had reacted badly to the serum and her whole body was covered with something that looked like an aggravated form of hives. She was a pretty vigorous woman and I'll never forget the names she called me. However, she got better in a few days and she didn't get scarlet fever. But she had me scared for a little while. She had a reputation for beating up her husband and I was afraid she might start on me.

KING GOVERNMENT PREPARED WHEN WAR CAME—HAIG

Canada Had Been Quietly Preparing for Two Years Previous to Conflict States Liberal Candidate at Wallbridge

BOARDS FORMED

Asserting that the Mackenzie King Government had met successfully all criticism and every challenge thrust its way by parties seeking to destroy it, Mr. McLean Haig, official Liberal nominee for Hastings South, spoke before an enthusiastic gathering at Sidney Town Hall on Tuesday evening. He said that a united Canada was solidly behind the King Government's united effort for the successful prosecution of the war. "The first great challenge that Mr. King had to face was that which was thrust his way when Canada, in showing her allegiance to Britain, declared war against Germany, and the second challenge of the Liberal party was when Duplessis went to the electors of the province of Quebec asking them to support him and his platform of opposition to a united war effort." Both these challenges failed completely, said Mr. Haig, and today the Liberal party stands supreme in the confidence of the people.

In opening his address to the electors of Sidney Twonship, Mr. Haig denied the statement recently made by Mr. Harry Cory, that the letter received by himself from Mackenzie King approving his nomination as the official standard bearer of the Liberal party for Hastings South, was merely a form letter sent out by the party headquarters, and that the Prime Minister was actually in Winnipeg at the time the letter was mailed. "That letter was written and signed by Mackenzie King himself," stated Mr. Haig. "It was dated on Friday February 22nd and Mr. King did not leave for Winnipeg until the following Sunday."

Had Been Preparing

Mr. Haig praised the war effort of the King Government, stating that Canada had, for two years previous to the outset of the present conflict been quietly preparing for a war that was hoped would not come. The government knew exactly, prior to the war, what boards and commissions would be necessary. It was known that on the economic front a complete mobilization of forces would be necessary to support the war-time effort. The War Supply Board was formed and its officials were not chosen from political ranks, but instead were taken from the industrial, financial and agricultural fields. An Agricultural Supply Board Committee had been formed with the view of promoting an adequate supply of farm commodities and was functioning successfully. The War-time Prices and Trade Board would make it impossible for prices to soar as in the last war and would end profiteering.

The military front has not been neglected, stated Mr. Haig, but since 1935 the strength of the army, navy and air force had gradually been increased. The people of Canada would not stand for the expense of a large army during peace time but she has always been prepared for home defence. In the five months that the war has progressed, Canada has sent one complete division overseas and contrary to the assertions made by Dr. Manion, these men have been well equipped. The second Canadian division has been mobilized and is now in training and we have a navy for the first time in the history of Canada, with six destroyers and a flotilla leader. The Air Force has been increased until now over six thousand men are enlisted and Air Vice-Marshal Bishop recently said that today Canada's Air Force has no equal anywhere in the world.

Mr. Haig said that Dr. Manion's plank in the election campaign had been "National Government" but instead of a National Government it was a Union Government that he meant, and "there is quite a difference." A National Government must represent every part of the country but this is not necessary in a Union Government, continued Mr. Haig, stating that a Union Government could represent any section of the country and could even be formed from minority groups. "Dr. Manion's National Government is merely a vehicle on which the Conservative party hopes to get into power," charged Mr. Haig in closing.

J. L. McLennan Guest Speaker

Mr. J. L. McLennan of Toronto, was guest speaker for the evening and said "that the National Government was the brain-child of Dr. Manion." In July, 1938, Dr. Manion was elected leader of the Conservative party, but a great many Conservatives are wishing today that he never had been elected. Dr. Manion changes his colors like a "tree-toad," charged Mr. McLennan, and quoted the editor of the Kingston Whig Standard as writing that Manion's proposal of a National Government was like "buying a pig in a poke."

In referring to Canada's war effort Mr. McLennan quoted Gen. McNaughton as saying that the Canadian troops which had arrived in England were "the best that had arrived from anywhere."

"Criticism is all that Manion offers," continued Mr. McLennan, "he has no plank in his platform. One cannot reason with Manion because he 'has no reason.'" Dr. Manion once wrote a book entitled "Life as an Adventure" but do we want an adventurer to lead our country while it is at war, asked Mr. McLennan.

"We most assuredly do not want such a man at such a time as we are going through but should stick to something which we know will run, and of which we know the past record and then we'll have nothing to worry about."

Swinging to the accomplishments of the Mackenzie King Government other than its splendid war effort, Mr. McLennan referred to reciprocity and the trade agreements made with the United States in 1911, which encouraged trading as contrasted with the high tariffs of the Bennett regime of 1930 when tariffs were shoved sky-high with a consequent falling off of trade with the United States. Mr. McLennan mentioned the cattle export as one example of what high tariffs could do to trading. In 1935 when the Bennett Government was in power, the cattle exports from Canada to the United States were only one-sixtieth of what they were in 1939. "The trade during 1939 meant a lot of money in the pockets of the agriculturists and it is on the welfare of the farmers that the prosperity of the country depends."

In closing, Mr. McLennan urged the electors to continue upholding the principles of democracy. "Vote Liberal," he urged, "and lick the dictatorships."

Mr. Morley Sine, president of the Sidney Liberal Association, acted as chairman for the evening, while other speakers included Col. Roscoe Vanderwater and Mr. Harry Moorman, who introduced the candidate Musical entertainment was afforded dale who played several lively tunes by the "Austin Arcadians" of Stockwhich were much appreciated. The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

KING CHARGES

In place of the experienced administrators in the present government, including four from Quebec with long years of parliamentary experience, the people were asked to vote for a "mythical" National Government of which they knew nothing.

Asks "What is Platform?"

"What is the platform of the National Government party? When was it laid down? There has been no meeting of the party. There has been no meeting of its candidates."

Mr. King spoke in the Forum before an audience estimated at between 6,000 and 7,000. It was his first platform speech in Quebec and his third political meeting since the campaign opened. He will speak tomorrow night in Toronto.

Replying to charges that he had "scuttled Parliament" when he asked for dissolution a few hours after opening of the sixth session Jan 25 last, Mr. King declared those who made these charges were "prepared to scuttle the people" by denying them the right to choose those who would administer their government.

States His Opinion

If he had only his own feelings to consult Mr. King said he would have asked for dissolution immediately after the September emergency session when the government was authorized to declare a state of war with Germany.

"But that obviously would not have been in the interests of Canada because there were grave tasks we had to perform at once." He referred to the organization of Defence and Overseas Forces and the various war time executive bodies.

It was "unthinkable" that parliament should have prolonged its own life by obtaining an Act of the Imperial Parliament as was done in 1916. It would be denying the people their constitutional right of electing a new parliament every five years. Such action "is the beginning of the end of democracy."

Conservative leader Manion had "deserted" the party which chose him its leader in 1938. "Is Dr. Manion not doing in this election exactly what Mr. Stevens did in the elections of 1935?"

Mr. King referred to Hon. H. H. Stevens who left the Conservative ministry in 1934, organized the reconstruction party and was the only one of its candidates to be elected and who is now Dr. Manion's colleague in the National Government movement.)

Only One Returned

"Mr. Stevens was returned but not one of his candidates was elected. Think of what, as a consequence, became of the party, of its name, of its platform and its promises.

"It might be well for those who are being carried away by the name 'National Government' and by Dr. Manion's many promises, to think of that between now and Easter Monday.

"Suppose Dr. Manion is not himself returned. Is there any guarantee that any one of his followers will honor his pledge to form a National Government or to carry out a single promise he has made?

"Dr. Manion will say there is a possibility that I may not be elected. There is, of course, such a possibility but I do not think it is a probability.

"But supposing I am not elected. There are 15 gentlemen of outstanding ability by whom I have been surrounded in the cabinet for years past. Every one of them stands for the same policies as I do, are pledged to support and carry them out.

"They would see that not a moment is lost in carrying on Canada's war effort in accordance with the wish of the electors.

Reich Plans Big-Scale War As Weather Improves—Gayda

Italian Editor Says Ribbentrop Outlined Reich's Goals and Intentions — Gayda Refers to Relations With Soviet — Speaks of Peace of Future as Best International Balance of Powers and Rights of Each Country

Rome, March 12—(CP-Havas)—Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop told Premier Mussolini Germany will start large-scale military operations as soon as improving weather permits, the authoritative Fascist editor, Virginia Gayda, intimated tonight.

The German envoy's two-day visit "was designed primarily to inform Italy more directly of the Reich's goals and intentions at the end of the first six months of war, on the eve of the more intensive phase of military operations heralded by the coming of spring," Gayda wrote in the Giornale D' Italia.

Italian willingness to improve relations with the Soviet Union likewise was indicated in the article, which said Von Ribbentrop and Mussolini discussed "the inexplicable attitude of hostility adopted by the Soviet toward Italy, although today this attitude has been rectified considerably."

Post-War Settlement

Italy's role in any post-war settlement also was examined, the editor said.

The conversations dealt with "the fundamental theme of war aims—that is to say, peace aims—on which the declarations made by the two imperialistic democracies have not yet thrown the least light," Gayda said.

"Peace tomorrow," he added, "will have to consist of the best international balance of the powers and rights of each country, a balance in which the legitimate interests and rights of Italy must have their part in conformity with the large perspectives of European construction which served as the point of departure for the Rome-Berlin axis."

Old Albert College Buildings Have Been Dismantled by Wreckers

Piles of Brick, Lumber and Debris Now All That Are Left of Former Seat of Learning

ERECTED IN 1857

The once proud halls of old Albert College that played an important part in the educational work of this country are now a crumbling mass of brick, lumber and mortar.

For the past few days workmen have been demolishing the structure, and now the dignified building which made an outstanding contribution, important because of the men and women who have received a training there and who are making worthy contributions to this and other lands, are now just a memory.

A few days ago the Morton Building Wrecking Company of St. Catharines, started demolition of the building. Today ugly piles of red broken brick, large timbers, plank and lumber litter the campus. Last night only a gaunt skeleton of a wall reared its head against the dark outline of campus trees.

The material is being disposed of rapidly, W. Morton, in charge of operations said yesterday. The majority of stone, brick, large timbers all of which are solid pine and in a splendid state of preservation, will be sold at the site. Some material will be sent to St. Catharines, but this amount is negligible.

There are approximately 200,000 feet of joists in excellent condition while brick, which will be used again amounts to 300,000. Evidence of the ability of master builders of three quarters of a century ago is seen yet in the crumbling walls. Large blocks of solid stone that made up the foundation are in perfect repair. Slabs of slate, the original roof, lie in neat piles, unaffected by the elements of 83 years.

The College was erected in 1857 by the Methodist Episcopal Church through the sacrifice of its pioneer ministers and laymen. During its existence it has borne the name of Belleville Seminary, Albert and Alexandra College, Albert University and after affiliation with the University of Toronto, Albert and Alexandra Colleges were merged into a Methodist School for secondary education.

In addition to the work of a Collegiate Institution it had thoroughly equipped courses in Music, Expression, Art, Household Science and Religious Education. Its four successive principals, Rev. Dr. Carman, Rev. Dr. Jaques, Rev. Dr. Dyer and Rev. Dr. Baker, were men of fine scholarship, strength of character and wise administrators. Its teachers were always characterized by efficiency, thoroughness and loyalty.

The college was the recruiting ground for a number of the Methodist ministry while a goodly number of ministers of other churches received their training there.

Three hundred teachers and students and twelve nursing students responded to the call of the Motherland during the last Great War.

TONY

—BY ELIZABETH VERNON—

CHAPTER XXIX

There was a long pause Tony, flinching from the grip of his hand, was the first to break the silence. Timidly, she spoke.

"You did say—once—that you wanted me more than anything. And—if you would marry me, I would try to make you happy."

"Ah, don't—don't, Tony!"

At those words she shrank back into her chair. "Is it very wrong to have asked you?" she said breathlessly. And then she found courage to go on. "I would be so glad if you still want me, Matt. And— and Jacky. We would be very grateful, always. I would try to—to be what you want—" her voice died.

"Tony," Matthew Lake stooped over her as she sat huddled together in the chair. His hand gripped her shoulder. "Answer me this: do you still love Alan?"

She winced away from him, but he held her. "You needn't answer me, Tony," he said. "I know the truth. My poor child, why did you think that you could be happy with me?"

"I thought," she faltered, "that I could make you happy. And that would have made me happy. Jacky and I ran away, you know; and I have been a kind of maid in a public house. But I only earn fifteen shillings a week and our rent is eight shillings, and I don't think Jacky gets enough to eat—"

"Oh, my dearest!" The words burst from him as he gazed at the shabby slight figure. "I do love you!"

"But then, Matt—" she looked up at him, bewildered. "Won't you marry me?"

"While you love Alan?" The words came sternly.

"I would forget him."

"Do you believe that, Tony?"

At those words she looked away.

"You are a truthful child, he said. "In the last resort." He tried to smile, and at the bitterness in his voice the tears rose to her eyes.

"I—I'd better go now," she said. "I'm sorry. I didn't mean to bother you."

"Bother me? You'll stay where you are! I must think." He took a turn up the room and back again. His eyes were bent on the floor, that he might not see her. "Well—" he turned. He smiled, but he could hear himself speak with sardonic fierceness. You shan't go on working as a slavey in a pub, Tony—underfed, overworked. I know a man who will employ you—be glad to do it."

"Would he give me better wages?" Tony asked, nervously. "I don't mind very much. But I'm afraid for Jacky—"

"Certainly. The only drawback is the last girl he engaged walked out without notice. So his temper's none too good. I don't think he'll make any allowances."

"He won't need to." Tony replied with dignity. "I work hard."

"Very well. I'll ring him up now. He'll probably come round and interview you."

"But won't tomorrow do?" Tony asked quickly. It was clear that in spite of her brave words she was apprehensive of that interview. And perhaps, Matthew Lake reflected, she might have reason to be.

"No," he replied. "It won't. It's no good postponing things, Tony. And now we will have dinner together while we're waiting for your future master."

The light was fading. Slowly, moment by moment, the veils of dusk were draped across the sky. Hyacinth, seated in the window, could see her husband's profile dark against that background. He sat opposite, gazing with half closed eyes into the garden. His thoughts were his own. So might he sit if he were her husband of six years instead of six short hours. And she was motionless, as if a movement, a word, a deeper breath, might precipitate a dreaded crisis. For many minutes neither had spoken. Now he turned his head. "Have you unpacked your things, Hyacinth?"

She had felt her nerves tighten at the sound of his voice. But she raised her brows. "No."

"What were you doing in your room before dinner?"

"Just thinking."

"Thinking? That will do you no good, my dear. Spilt milk can't be picked up." He paused to knock out his pipe. "There is no one to wait on you here. You will have to do things for yourself."

"I am not used to it."

"You will get used to it. You are young and strong." His glance rested on her. She felt it. It was as if he had laid a hand on her. "Well, you won't have to unpack much for tonight," he said.

His words were calm, matter-of-fact. But at the sound of them panic rose in her heart.

Trembling, Hyacinth sought for words—for anything that might hold realization at bay. "Need we keep that old hag of a housekeeper?" she asked.

"Mrs. Brown? She works hard. She's cheap. I can't afford to lose her."

Hyacinth's eyes rested on a bowl of roses. Their colors glowed in the dimness. They gave the unkempt room an oddly pathetic air, as if it tried vainly to seem a little gay on the wedding day of its master. "It was nice of her to pick those roses," said Hyacinth, who did not usually notice niceness.

"I picked them," Bob Cheaveley said.

"You did?"

"Yes, to welcome you." He leaned forward. There was no mockery in his face. He took her hands in his. "I don't want you to be unhappy," he said.

She tried to reply. Her breath caught queerly, and in that second his voice hardened. "Pull yourself together, Hyacinth. There's no cause for hysteria or for weeping. You're set on a new road. That's all." He glanced round him. "This isn't the sort of life you meant for yourself. I know that. You think 'I could have married anyone.' But the men of position—which of them did you love? None. It was I whom you loved. You will be happiest with me."

She murmured something. She shook her head, trying to free her hands.

He smiled. "My girl, do you think I'm a fool? Do you think I don't know when a woman cares? You made it clear enough—once." His hand stightened on her wrists. He pulled her towards him. His face was serious. "Answer me; money apart, position apart— do you mind being my wife?"

She stared back into eyes as dark as hers, narrower, burning. She felt the color flame in her cheeks. She dropped her own eyes, unable to speak.

"You have answered me," he said. "Hyacinth, these last months of struggle weren't necessary; you made them so. You chose to fight, and you chose the weapons. Unfortunately for you, you haven't the strength or the brains to fight with me." Leaning back, he regarded her thoughtfully. "You went all out to get what you thought you wanted—wealth and the rest. Well, I don't blame you too much. You've had a bad life, a bad mother; and a bad streak runs through you. Your young sister had the same mother and a worse life. But you haven't Tony's courage, or her disposition. Yes, it's a good thing for you that you've come to me."

"I'll never be happy. I won't make you a good wife."

"No." He smiled. "I'll make you into a good wife. Some work and living are what you need."

"Bob—"

He disregarded her. "Why," he asked, "do you think I've taken all this trouble, waited these months and years?"

She shook her head.

"Because I love you," he told her.

Never before had he told her that. There was silence. She didn't move or speak. Somewhere, outside in the darkness, a night-jar uttered its long, long note. A bat squeaked, struck once on the pane and was gone.

Bob Cheaveley rose. "Time you went upstairs now," he said.

"No. I want to sit here a little longer."

"I said: 'time you went upstairs.'"

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and I said, Hay pop?

Yes indeed, pop said.

Meaning what, and I said, I just read a book called Wildcat Wilkins and it's all about the early pioneer days in this country when there wasn't even any houses unless you bilt one yourself, and if you wanted water you had to dig a well, and when dinner time came you had to go and shoot it.

You had to shoot practically all your meals, even breakfist, because there were no such things as Fluffed Oatsies or Teeny Klinkies in those days, pop said. But our fourfathers seemed to get along without them and still maintain a fair proportion of red corpussles. That was the life that made men out of men. Up with the rising lark and to bed with the setting hen, and not a lazy moment in between. By 7 in the morning you'd already cut down 2 giant oak trees, deftly snatching the eggs out of the birds nest as they fell, he said, and I said, And then you went and shot your breakfist.

That's right, maybe a bear, there's nothing better than a roasted bear steak after a couple of oak trees, pop said. And then you split your trees into rails and herded your bees into a fresh field of clover, he said, and I said, And then you went and shot your luntch.

A wildcat, maybe. you dont want too heavy a luntch with a whole afternoon's work ahead of you, pop said, and I said, Well what did you shoot for dinner?

Something substantial you may be sure, perhaps a mountain lion, pop said. Those were the days that started this country off right and it's our duty never to forget them, he said, and I said, Sure, pop, that's one reason why I want an air rifle for my birthday, to help me remember.

Pop quick changing the subject,

Wallbridge 'Townhallers' Gain First Fall in District Playoff

Defeat Glen Miller 6-3 in Wide-Open Hockey That Had Fans Thrilled

NEVER HEADED

The Wallbridge "Townhallers" gained the first fall in the district rural hockey play-offs for the Dr. J. J. Robertson trophy when they triumphed 6 to 3 over the Glen Miller "Paper-makers" at the Hume Arena last night. The second of a best-in-three series will be played in a return match here on Thursday.

Playing wide-open hockey, the type which the patrons of Canada's national winter sport enjoy, the Wallbridge sextette were never headed, despite the fact that the "Paper-makers" were on the offensive for the major part of the tussle and actually carried the game for the greater part of the battle. Outlucked in the early stages, as the "Townhallers" scored a soft opening goal, Coach Patrick's Glen Miller sextette literally carried the play throughout, but were continually thwarted by goalie Carson and his formidable defence. However, Wallbridge held a lead of 2-2 and 4-2 before the final session opened.

At the face-off Green raced in to bat home Rowbotham's pass-out with no defence shown on the part of the "Paper-makers" in such an early thwart. Glen Miller evened the count, however, as Anderson whipped in Johnson's pass and then Semark scored for Wallbridge and Beale for Glen Miller to make the count even again, but Goyer soloed to give the "Townhallers" an odd goal as the initial period ended. Semark and Muir scored for Wallbridge in the middle session and each scored a goal, from the sticks of Bangates and Rowbotham in the last stanza.

Fast, clean hockey on a keen sheet of ice was seen for two periods, but in the final session the teams became more serious and plenty of personal contact was seen to add excitement to the pastime as six penalties were dished out in the last 20 minutes. With the Glen Miller squad playing an aggressive type of hockey the fans can be assured of action personified in the second game of the series Thursday.

The line-ups:—Wallbridge— goal —Carson, defence—Goyer, Semark, centre—Ronsky, wings— Rowbotham, Green. Subs — Christopher, Vermilyea, Muir, Jarrell and Wood.

Glen Miller—goal—Loness, defence—B. Locke, Lamoire, centre—Lamore, wings—Drake, Beale. Subs —Johnson, Bangates, Davis, Anderson and Campbell.

Pete Bessone of Pittsburgh Hornets, with 96 minutes spent on the fence, had no rival within 23 minutes in penalty statistics.

Springfield Indians Determined to Hold Second Spot in Loop

By the Canadian Press

Springfield Indians have no hope of catching up with the first-place Providence Reds but they're bound they'll make second position in the Eastern section of the International American Hockey League by the time the playoffs roll around.

The Indians moved into second place last night by a 3-2 victory in a home game against the lowly Philadelphia Ramblers. The victory brought them a single point ahead of New Haven Eagles who were idle.

As far as the Eagles are concerned, Springfield will have a battle on its hands to keep second position because New Haven has two games in hand.

The Ramblers gave the Indians a good fight last night. Thibeault scored two goals for Springfield and Thurrier the other. Allum and Germann notched Ramblers' counters.

BRUINS DEFEAT RANGERS BY 2-1 TO HEAD LEAGUE

Eddie Wiseman Scores Winning Goal With Less Than Two Minutes to Play

TWO GAMES TO PLAY

Teams Play Again on Thursday but Rangers Now in Tough Spot

Boston, March 13—(CP)— Two wide-flung doors to the National Hockey League championship remained open to the confident Boston Bruins today, while New York Rangers needed all the breaks to win the desperate two-team struggle.

The Bruins defeated the Rangers 2-1 in Boston Garden last night when Eddie Wiseman, the half-pint wingman who came here in mid-season, tipped in a goal with less than two minutes to play. The crowd of 16,304 raised a tumult as the Bears approached their second successive league title.

The victory left Boston a point ahead and with two games to play before the end of the schedule, while the Rangers have only one game left—a meeting with Boston at New York tomorrow. Even if the Rangers should win that one, Boston still can take the title by beating the last-place Montreal Canadiens here Sunday.

Besides the league championship, the team finishing on top gets the right to open at home against the second-place club in the first round of Stanley Cup playoffs for the world title.

Bruins Come From Behind

The Bruins had to come from behind to win. Ott Heller drove home a 40-foot shot in the first period to put the Blueshirts ahead, while Phil Watson waited by the goal just in case the defenceman's shot failed to get by goalie Frank Brimsek.

Bobby Bauer, little right wingman of the Sauerkraut line, tied the score in the second, when he sank a passout from his centre, Milt Schmidt, who had skated the length of the ice and rounded the net. Schmidt, the league-leader in point-making, raised his point total to 41 while Bauer tied the other member of their line, Woody Dumart, for second place with 31.

Wiseman, obtained by the Bruins in a trade with New York Americans for the great Eddie Shore, deflected the puck just enough to push it past goalie Dave Kerr, when Art Jackson fired it from the side in the dying stages.

There were few hectic moments outside the scoring. In the second period, however Bryan Hextall of the Rangers drew a five-minute penalty for lacing Red Hamill with a right to the jaw when they collided.

SAYS ABERHART HASN'T ANSWERED ONE QUESTION IN FOUR YEARS

Red Deer, Alta., March 12 (CP)— Premier Aberhart defended the Social Credit government record at a meeting here last night that came to a close in the question period when some of the 700 persons attending became noisy.

Members of the audience interrupted with questions at the start of the meeting. One farmer charged the Premier had not answered a question for four years.

Mr. Aberhart asked for a hearing and urged his audience to defer questions and interruptions until the question period.

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

(By the Associated Press)

Avalon, Calif., March 13 — (AP) —Chicago Cubs prepared to set out for the mainland and their first exhibition game with the White Sox today minus a regular third sacker (Stan Hack), a regular centre fielder, (Hank Leiber), and their most famous pitcher, (Dizzy Dean). Hack, who has been recovering from an operation was due in from Los Angeles today but holdouts Dean and Leiber haven't been heard from lately.

St. Petersburg, Fla.—The two most recent arrivals in New York Yankees' camp, Joe DiMaggio and Red Ruffing, are full of ambition for the coming season. DiMaggio hopes to lead the league in batting again and take home and runs-batted-in honors as well, saying: "I think that if I can go through the season without getting hurt I can do it." Ruffing says he expects to win at least 20 games this year.

Winter Haven, Fla.—Bill Terry keeps trying hard to make trades that will strengthen his New York Giants. All he's been able to get so far is a ground keeper who has been serving Cleveland Indians.

Pasadena, Calif.—Jimmy Dykes' big problem seems to be what to do with all his Chicago White Sox infielders. He likes Jimmy Webb as understudy to shortstop Luke Appling and Bob Kennedy to fill in if Jack Hayes has knee trouble again. Don Kolloway also looks good and may oust Kennedy from the relief job.

Bradenton, Fla.—Les Scarsella, Buddy Hassett and Maxie West give Boston Bees three left-hand hitters at the top of the batting order. Casey Stengel thinks he'll try it that way for a while.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

Reminiscing in his sport column "Comment on Sports," Bill Walshe, of the Kingston Press, carried an interesting item of news pertaining to Picton's great "Little Men of Metal" junior hockey team of 1909 recently. Taken from the Feb. 25, issue, 1909, of another paper, Columnist Walshe said:

"Headed: 'Picton Has Gone Hockey Crazy" People drive in for miles to see every game played; excursion trains too, Trenton and Belleville send down big delegations. A regular Fair Day, the following is about Picton's O.H.A. junior team before the playoff game with Toronto Eurekas, which incidently ended in a 5 all tie.

"The craziest hockey town on the O.H.A. map is Picton.

"No doubt about it.

"When the 'Little Men of Metal' are playing in a game the town and half the surrounding country moves down to the hockey rink and takes lung exercise.

"Take Monday when the Toronto Eurekas played Picton there. When the Toronto lads arrived at 2 o'clock they found a crowd of 400 people at the station to meet them. The crowd followed them down town, cheering and chaffing them all the way.

"After dinner when the Eurekas went out for a stroll, they found the streets alive with people. It was like a country fair day. Farmers were in from miles around at noon and in the afternoon they came in in everything from buggies and buckboards to hay racks. The vehicles were all loaded to the gunwales with people. Everybody wore the purple and white of the Picton team. They paraded the town hall, blowing horns and snatching ribbons and badges. The Toronto lads lost their badges and ribbons early in the afternoon and immediately purchased bolts of red and white and kept up the distribution.

"The rink was besieged at 6.30 and at 7 o'clock when a special train of eight coaches came in from Belleville and Trenton and the buses from Deseronto, seven miles away, across the ice, arrived, the jam was fierce. While the game was on the crowd, which jammed the rink to the door, kept up a continual bedlam of cheers, whistling and horn blowing. Half the time the players could not hear the referee's bell. They backed their team to the limit, too, betting even money that Picton would win by from 3 to 7 goals, and threw their money around as if they had got it out of the town pump."

P. S.—We might add that the Toronto Eurekas downed Picton's "Little Men of Metal" that year in the semi-finals, but the famous Stratford "Midgets" came along to beat the Eurekas in the junior O.H.A. finals, 13 to 10 on the round.

The Peterboro' scribe seems quite elevated over the success of the Petes in the current intermediate "A" round robin series in the O.H.A., the Petes leading the pack quite handily, having won three of their four play-off games. Yes, Marse Perdue entertains visions of an O.H.A. championship in the Liftlock City, which isn't altogether improbable at that. Peterboro hasn't won an intermediate puck title since 1906, although they did win a senior pennant in 1926, so let's hope Frank Buckland's lads click this year. Regarding the hockey in Peterboro' today, the Liftlock City scribe says: "When ya see a championship club—a provincial winner—in the making, you can't help getting excited. Running something of a fever. Folks have to speak to you twice to get an answer. Or so it seems to us. Those roaring raiders of the ice lanes here are pointing toward a pennant, and their chances are pretty fair. Barring a letdown or injuries, the fast-stepping and bumping Petes should just about clean up on the present classy opposition. They've been a long time building up for this and some of the present Petes may have moved away ere another season."

Playing a wide-open brand of hockey, that the fans have clamoured for for some time, the Wallbridge "Townhallers" surprised the Glen Miller "Paper-makers" to notch a face-off goal and were never headed in the district rural play-offs for the Dr. J. J. Robertson trophy last night. However, from this corner we do not think that the better team won the night's play, despite the fact that Wallbridge sextette ran up a 6-3 score. The "Paper-makers" literally carried the play all night, but their defence faltered in the early stages. The Hinchcliffe-led Wallbridge squad took full advantage of the loose defence of their opponents and ran in an early lead, but for the latter part of the struggle the Glen Miller sextette literally swarmed the "Townhallers" citadel and carried the fans to their feet with enthusiasm. Actually there wasn't a dull moment in the entire sixty minutes of play and it's our guess that the "Townhallers" will not win the Robertson trophy without much effort on Thursday night.

It has been long years since Industrial Hockey has taken its proper place in Belleville's sporting picture. Tonight, however, our manufacturing plants again return to the sporting picture with a twin bill of Industrial Hockey at the Hume Arena when the Canada Cement squad meets the Alemite in the opening game and the two local hardware manufacturing companies—Belleville-Sargent and the Corbin-American, clash. Some years ago this city enjoyed a high-class industrial puck loop but with the calibre of players now available in the various plants we see no reason why the old-time rivalry should not again exist. It may be news, but practically every O.H.A. player in Belleville is employed in a local plant and those who are not , will be, pronto.

Detroit, March 13—(CP)—The Stanley Cup playoffs are not far away and Manager Jack Adams of the Detroit Red Wings has started lining up his reserves by calling up Bert Peer, star right wing of the Omaha club of the American Association.

Peer will have a try at big time hockey against Chicago Blackhawks Friday night in the Wings' last home game before the playoffs. If he impresses, his name will go on the list of 20 players eligible for the playoffs.

The 185-pound rookie from the Wings' farm club has scored 16 goals and five assists for Omaha since he was signed from Ottawa amateur ranks late in December. He is 26 years old and a veteran of Senior Ontario Hockey Association competition who campaigned for two years in England.

STUFF THAT BALL PLAYERS ARE MADE OF

STIRLING CLUB HOLDS MEETING

Awards Made to Prize Winners in County Seed Judging Competition

Stirling, March 13 (Special) — Special features of the program at the Stirling Community Welfare Club included the presentation of the Haggerty trophy and other awards in the Hastings County Seed Judging Competition and an address of particular interest to farmers by L. C. Roy, superintendent of Agriculture for Eastern Canada, Canadian National Railways. President Ernest Sarles presided over the meeting with an attendance of about one hundred members and guests recorded.

During the dinner, which was prepared and served by the ladies of the Stirling Women's Institute, Harold Wells acted as sergeant-at-arms and Art Duncan led in community singing. Special musical numbers were offered by Jimmy Armstrong, local talented musician. The presentation of the awards for the County of Hastings Seed Judging Competition was made by Mr. H. L. Fair, B.S.A.

Speaks on Agriculture

Introduced to the meeting by Mr. Earl Ormiston, the guest speaker, Mr. Roy, gave a very interesting and informative address on agricultural problems, touching on the growing of peas, cranberries and the production of milk and hogs. He dealt at some length on the subject of soil fertility and its relationship to successful farming. The sales problems confronting farmers were given considerable attention with the value of advertising being stressed, giving as examples the remarkable growth of the California Citrus industry and the Hawaiian Pineapple industry.

"There are probably too many people trying to help the farmer," stated Mr. Roy, but the "multiple diversities" of the agricultural industry make the problems more complex. The main problem of agricultural leaders at the present time is the bringing about of an understanding of one another's agricultural problems in the different parts of Canada, and particularly in the Eastern Provinces, so that all agricultural interests will agree on the policies that will prove most beneficial to them. Three methods of bringing this about are:

First: By grouping yourselves together, as you already have done. Co-operation is necessary because as individuals nothing can be done.

Second: Study your own problems through the adult and boys' and girls' organizations that you have.

Third: Work out a sound program. This is secured by the exchange of ideas amongst yourselves and profiting by the views and experiences of others interested in similar work.

Mr. Roy closed with a short talk on the wholesale and retail problems connected with the cheese industry, advocating modern merchandizing methods. The appreciation of the meeting to Mr. Roy was tendered by Mr. F. R. Mallory.

Dan O'Shea Grows Up

By SCOTT W. RYALL

Dan O'Shea did not see the man who shot big Jim Casey, the genial policeman, guardian of the Ninth ward's morals.

He was walking the beat with the officer. Casey had objected. He had said he didn't want kids under his heels when he had to catch master crooks.

But Dan, the red-headed newsboy, was insistent and Casey at last relinquished his night-stick because he "didn't want a man unarmed with him through the dangerous Ninth ward."

Then he guffawed, quieted enough to ring in from the Grimm street post, then turned in the alley back of Silverstein's warehouse. He did insist on Dan waiting outside for him there and even relieved him of his temporary custody of the long club.

"Wait under the light," he ordered and Dan did not argue.

Their attachment had reached that fine point where little differences of meaning and thought were immediately known. Casey did not want him in Silverstein's alley. There was no doubt of it, no joke, no denial.

The newsboy looked at the stars which shine even on the Ninth ward, wondered absently what would happen if one dropped, then leapt as if it had when Casey's roar rolled up the alley.

"Halt!"

There was a sharp report of a gun, sounds of running feet, muttered curses, then silence.

Dan's face went white. His tongue seemed stuck to the roof of his mouth and his heart pounded painfully.

"Casey!" he tried to call but the word came only in a whisper.

He steadied himself against the lamp-post, breathed deeply, then precipitated himself into the dark maw of the alley.

The officer was not hard to find. His spotlight had fallen from his hand, rolled a foot away and glared back into his pale face, against closed eyelids.

Dan stopped, walked slowly to the doubled form; looked down at the immobile lips which had so lately been chaffing him.

He tried to stoop, to touch the policeman.

A terrible fear was trembling through him.

Then he turned, raced through the alley and up Grimm street to the police telephone, found it locked and ran down to Mindlebauer's drug store. He was sobbing heavily when he lurched in before the astonished druggist.

"Call — the police — quick!" he gasped, "Casey—he's shot back of —back of Silverstein's!"

Then the matter was out of the boy's hands. They found Casey with the light still shining on his face. He wasn't dead but he was still unconscious when they lifted him into the ambulance.

Dan O'Shea watched and shivered at the back of the crowd. His hands clenched.

He stared at the ground and behind the fixed gaze a seething volcano of vengeful thoughts mingled with recrimination.

He had been right there. He might have saved Casey. He didn't know how but he was sure he might have done something. He might have taken the bullet.

He sought out Captain Atkinson.

"About Casey," he said wetting his lips bravely, "How—how bad is he hurt?"

Atkinson looked down kindly.

"Not bad. Don't worry, son. A cop takes those things and forgets 'em in a few weeks."

Dan looked intently at the officer. He suspected a doubt in the captain's mind.

Atkinson was watching him curiously, too.

The boy's face seemed pinched, hard. His hands were still clenched and teeth caught his lower lip.

"Captain Atkinson," he said slowly, "would it make Casey feel better—I mean if he—" He stopped abruptly then started over. "Would it make Casey feel better if the guy was caught?"

"I think it would make us all feel better."

Dan looked thoughtfully at his feet.

"Okay," he said soberly.

The captain looked doubtfully after him as Dan turned away but did no stay him and early next morning Dan had called the night riders; the boy's gang of the Ninth ward, in solemn session.

Dan took charge. He seemed vastly older since the day before and the boys obeyed his quick orders without question.

He scattered them toward the different city gangs within an hour and waited grimly, as self-appointed chief investigator for the reports.

Eight of the boys had come in with blanks when Izzy Lowenthal returned, proud as a peacock of the news he bore.

"It was a guy named Lefty Peters. Lives in Red Chief Dugan's territory." He fumbled in a pocket.

"Here's the address. I had to screw the dope out of Red Chief. Peters passed some of the Silverstein steal on one of the kids' old man. Then he asked another who sells papers, if he seen anything about a dead cop, and laughed. He was drunk then but the kid followed him home."

Dan trembled but his outward manner was calmly dignified as he took the paper.

In a few minutes he was down at the precinct station.

"About Casey—" he started with affected negligence but no further words would struggle from his lips.

"Casey's all right, son," boomed the captain cheerily, "it looked worse than it was. The bullet just nicked his skull. I saw him this morning laying away a bag of apples somebody sent him."

Dan sighed and sank weakly into a chair.

He straightened himself with an effort, crossed his legs nonchalantly and fished out the slip of paper with Lefty Peters' address on it.

"That's the man that shot Casey," he said calmly.

The officer took the paper slowly, staring at the boy.

"Son, do you mean that you—"

Dan coughed and his face flushed.

"I guess, Captain, we all gotta grow up sometime," he said with such a mature effort he embarrassed himself and rose hastily to cover his confusion. "Well, he must be better if he tackled apples."

He saluted the officer.

Atkinson was still staring, a little smile of understanding at the corners of his mouth.

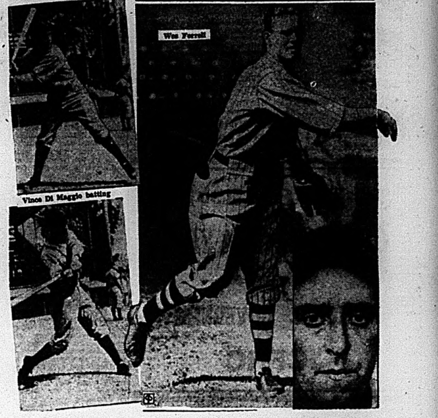
"I think I'll mosey up and say hello to Casey," said Dan, "you won't forget about that guy Peters?"

The officer rose, returned the salute.

"I'll put a squad on it right away, Dan," he said huskily. Then after his visitor "moseyed" he muttered, "Grown up over-night. Well, I'll be—"

He finished with an admiring push at the desk button.

Major Leaguers Attempting Comebacks Include Ferrell, DeLancey and Carleton



By WALTER L. JOHNS
Central Press Canadian Sports Writer

New York—While baseball fans and observers focus most of their pre-season glances on the raw recruits trying for places on the major league squads, they easily escape that very gallant little group —the comebackers.

There's several on the southern sod this year. Will they traverse the boulderous road, or fade out as the parade passes 'em by? Let's observe these "washed-up" hopefuls.

The case of Bill DeLancey, in the Cardinal camp should, and does, merit chief attention.

Tough Job

Bill, a Greensboro, N.C., product, came up to the majors as far back as 1932, catching eight games for the Cards that year after batting .328 and playing fine ball for Springfield in the Western association in 1931. A year at Columbus in 1933, and the young catching recruit was ready for the big time.

Bill caught for the Cards in 1934, hit .314 in 93 games; batted .279 in 103 games in 1935. Sickness overtook him. Bill had to go west for his health. He turned to managing in the minors. He recovered his health.

Bronzed and physically fit again, Bill is making that comeback this year. It's a tough job, for the Cards have two of the finest receivers in the circuit, Arnold Owen and Don Padgett.

Ferrell's Been Around

Wesley Cheek Ferrell, another North Carolinian, and James Otto (Tex) Carleton, one-time Cardinal and Cub star, seek to right-hand their way to regular spots on the Brooklyn Dodger pitching roster.

Ferrell, once the outstanding right-hander in the American league, when he won 20 or more games four years in a row for Cleveland, has been shifted around the majors in recent years as a has-been, finally dropping out of baseball after participating in only three games as a Yankee last year.

From Cleveland, Ferrell went to the Boston Red Sox, then to Washington, and then to New York. Only 32 now, Ferrell still has plenty of pitching stuff left. If he comes through, his comeback will be one worth remembering.

Carleton, purchased from Milwaukee, is 34 years old and already a veteran of seven years in the majors as a member of both the Cards and the Cubs. With Milwaukee last year, Carleton won 11 games and lost nine, pitching 202 innings, enough to make a youngster arm weary.

Indians' Al Too

Vince DiMaggio, the "friend" of all strikeout pitchers when with the Boston Bees a couple of years back, returned to the minors and there made one of the greatest comebacks in baseball history. Vince learned a new batting stance, became the home run king of the circuit. Vince will do his major comeback this year with Cincinnati.

Alfred John Smith, southpaw hurler, who spent four years with the New York Giants and since dropped back into the minors, lately with Buffalo, is being counted upon now by the Cleveland Indians as a left-handed hope. Smith won 16 games while losing but two last year. He developed great control, passing only 49 batters in 160 innings.

Silas Kenneth Johnson, veteran righthander, who saw eight years' major league service with Cincinnati from 1928 to 1936, and with the Cards later, is back on the Philadelphia Phillies' roster, seeking a new career in the big loop. Johnson started more games and won more —22— for Rochester in the International league last year, than any other hurler in the loop. Johnson began his pro career with Rock Island, winning 19 games for that club in 1928.

Heusser Back

Russell Peters, Cleveland shortstop candidate, was with the Athletics two years ago. Peters, who has been playing ball since he was 12 years old, is an infielder purchased from Atlanta. He batted .316 in 151 games. He has a tough job replacing Lou Boudreau, a 1939 star with the Tribe.

Ed Heusser, former Cardinal, won 19 games for Memphis last year. He hopes to make the return jump with the Athletics this year. A veteran righthander, he has been pitching pro ball for 11 years.

Clay Bryant and Phil Cavaretta of the Chicago Cubs might be included in the "comeback attempt" group. Bryant was kept out of action last year with an arm injury. He did get in four games, but that's all. Cavaretta suffered a broken leg early last season and took part in only 22 games.

STIRLING HOLDS NORWOOD TO 5-5 OVERTIME DRAW

20 Minutes Overtime Played in Order to Reach a Decision

BOMBERS ALWAYS LEAD

Stirling, March 13 —(Special)— Before one of the largest crowds of the season Stirling "Bombers" and Norwood "Hornets" battled to a twenty minute overtime draw in what was intended to be a game to the finish last night at Campbellford. The game, which was intended to be a "saw-off" semi-final of the Trent Valley Loop saw the determined "Bombers," with a three-goal lead at the end of the second period, overhauled by the fast skating Norwood squad and carried into overtime, at which point the managers of the tired teams called a truce making a second game necessary. The Norwood squad had come through a heavy three-game series ending the previous night, when they ousted the Madoc entry and the Stirling squad having grown a bit soft under a week's lay-off were equally willing to call it quits for one evening.

Stirling Should Have Won

Stirling played a bang-up game all the way and should have won the fixture after being lifted from seventh position to second position following a bit of misunderstanding last week. A large following of fans rooted for the "Bombers" in their brilliant effort as they gave all they had to get back into the hockey picture. Norwood fans, who evidently expected the game to be a push-over for their "Hornets," didn't feel support or interest sufficiently necessary to attend in very large numbers. Defeat for Stirling was a foregone conclusion in Norwood district. But they have plenty to worry about after last night.

Although reputed to be one of the fastest aggregations in the loop, never once did they have the lead over the lowly Stirling squad, who made them fight all the way to even the score. The winner of this series will take on Campbellford in the championship round (if there's any ice left.) Thursday night at Campbellford Stirling and Norwood will continue the feud to some sort of a conclusion "other than a draw."

Play Fast and Clean

Play was fast and clean throughout a scoreless first period with Armstrong, Fraser and Rothwell each serving penalties for minor offences. Early in the second Armstrong tallied for the "Bombers" on a pass from Ingram, who also scored from Morton with the latter giving Bolte the pass for Stirling's third counter. O'Leary served the only penalty of this frame. Early in the final period Puffer tallied twice and Rodgers once to tie the game up. "Hank" Ingram tallied twice for Stirling and Hill and Puffer shared the two Norwood goals to end regular time with the score tied 5-5. In the overtime, Ingram, who was the star of the evening, got his fourth goal on a pass from Fraser. O'Leary scored to tie it up again. Both goals were scored from close-in. With both teams dead tired the managers were willing to call it a draw and continue hostilities in another game next Thursday at Campbellford.

Puffer Rodgers and Hill along with Weir and Hill, turned in a good game for Norwood. Fox starred in the nets for Stirling with Ingram the pick of the lot. All players on the Stirling squad displayed more than usual determination to win and will prove a real threat in the next game, and possibly the finals. Never before this season have they received such loyal support as that now displayed.

WALL STREET

New York, March 13—(AP)—Aviation shares made a sturdy comeback today in a market confused by the dramatic termination of the Finnish-Russian war. Carrying plus signs were Douglas, Curtiss-Wright "A", United Aircraft, Martin, Chrysler, U.S. Rubber, U.S. Gypsum, Union Carbide, American Telephone, International Telephone and Great Northern Pfd. Hesitant were Bethlehem, Dow Chemical, Westinghouse and American Can.

Scandinavian dollar loans gained in an otherwise practically dormant bond market. Commodities slipped. Foreign markets declined.

Among Canadian issues Canadian Pacific dipped a fraction and Hiram Walker, Distillers Seagram and Lake Shore Mines held unchanged. Dome Mines came back a trifle and in the bond market, Canada 4s gained 1-8 of a point.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, March 13 (CP) — Toronto exchange was weak today. Trading was quiet and turnover totalled only 130,000 shares.

Dome slipped a fraction to 23¾, Lake Shore sold at 24½, down ½ and losses of a few cents appeared for Pamour, Macassa and Central Patricia. In the base metals, Steep Rock, Falconbridge, Pend Oreille and Aldermac were on the soft side.

Food and steel shares were inclined to weakness and the utilities and senior oils held firm to strong in the average. A gain of ¾ to 38¾ for Canada Malting were the main changes in the beverage group. Biltmore Hat and Bruck Silk weakened ¾.

Western oils were dull and unchanged except for a slight gain for Okalta, selling at 1.18.

Butter Prices Go Somewhat Higher

Toronto, March 13—Butter prices resumed their upward course on the Toronto open produce market yesterday after the trade had taken time out to digest the latest stock report, which was considered bullish in some quarters. No change was reported in eggs.

The butter market was strong from the opening, with light offerings clearing well. Early sales of top grade Ontario creamery solids were made at 28c per pound, but later business was transacted at 28 1-4.

Prints to the retail trade sold at previous levels, but churning cream reflected the advancing butter market by increasing to the range of 27c to 28c for No. 1 grade, on truck, country points.

Demand continued good for grade A medium and pullets on the egg market. Prices in both sections however, showed no change, with receipts ample to cover local needs.

RUSSO-FINNISH WAR REVIEWED

(By the Canadian Press)

The Soviet dictated treaty ending the invasion of Finland after 105 blood-drenched days inflicts a costly peace on the Finns at a price far higher than was demanded before the Red army invaded the republic's soil.

Last Oct. 5 the Soviet leaders, flushed with the new hegemony which their implied threats had easily gained over the Baltic countries of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, demanded similar concessions from Finland.

Wary but diplomatic, the Finns tried to negotiate, and the Russian proposal finally boiled down to this:

Finland to be given a strip of Soviet Karelia on her eastern border in return for an undefined but evidently narrow strip of the Karelian Isthmus directly northwest of the Russian metropolis of Leningrad; lease or sale to Russia for a 5,000-man naval base of the Finnish peninsula of Hanko, commanding the entrance to the Gulf of Finland; cession to Russia of an unspecified part of the Rybachi and Sredni peninsulas in the Arctic Ocean; exchange of some islands in the Gulf of Finland, and demilitarization of frontiers.

The Finns refused, principally on account of Hanko and the proposed loss of their carefully built-up Mannerheim line of defences on the Karelian Isthmus.

Finnish ski troops, with mobility offsetting the Soviets' sheer numbers, accomplished a modern miracle. Many military observers said the long-dreaded might of the Russian army had been proven a myth.

Defense Line Penetrated

But slowly and ponderously, with utter disregard for casualties, the overwhelming Russian manpower finally penetrated the Mannerheim line of defences on the Karelian Isthmus.

Swarms of Russian bombers, often 500 or more at a time, mercilessly devastated nearly every city and hamlet in Finland, although not a single important Finnish community yet had fallen into Russian hands.

Finally, after three months of war had depleted Finland's manpower and supplies peace negotiations were started behind the scenes. Neutral Sweden acted as an intermediary.

Just one week ago a Finnish delegation headed by Premier Risto Ryti went to Moscow to discuss Russia's new offer—although Russian leaders had said they never would deal with any Finnish government other than the one they themselves had set up at Terijoki.

Today, while Britain and France were ready to rush 50,000 soldiers to defence of Finland, the Finnish leaders chose a galling peace.

The terms gave Russia all the Karelian Isthmus, including the invested City of Viipuri, all the shores of Lake Ladoga and adjacent territory; a big chunk of northeastern Finland near the Arctic circle, part of the Arctic peninsulas, islands in the Gulf of Finland, and a 30-year lease of the Hanko peninsula.

The Finns must help Russia to build a railroad linking Russian white sea ports with Sweden, give customs-free access to Norway, and make a trade treaty with the Soviet Union.

Non-aggression was written into the peace treaty.

Towns and territories specified for cession to Russia were, pointedly, those where the Finns won their greatest victories. The Soviet Union's political leaders won at the Kremlin's council tables all that the Red army had failed to seize by force of arms.

In return, the Finns got peace and a sop of $120,000 a year rent on Hanko.

Today, less than 10 hours after the one-sided agreement was reached the cannon of Karelian Isthmus muttered their last, the drone of warplanes faded, and bayonets were sheathed.

The Finns prepared to retreat to their new and straitened frontiers, leaving the fields of honor to the grotesque dead—and to Russia.

Invasion Started November 30

On November 30, the Red Army invaded Finland. Its planes bombarded Helsinki and other Finnish cities. Just across the border, the Russians established at Terijoki a Puppet "Peoples' Government of Finland" under Otto Kuusinen, Finnish Communist who had been in exile for 20 years.

Declaring they would fight to the last man if need be, the plucky Finns appealed to the Moribund League of Nations, which promptly expelled Soviet Russia and started co-ordinating aid to Finland from neutrals. Sweden, Britain, France and other countries furnished some war equipment; the United States and others gave non-military aid.

While the world looked on in admiration and astonishment, Finland, one-fiftieth as populous as Russia, fought the invading hosts to a standstill for months.

One of the coldest winters in half a century aided Finland's defence and Finnish soldiers killed and wounded the freezing Russians by the thousands.

Early in January the Finns announced two great victories—annihilation on the eastern front of the Soviet 44th and 163rd Divisions of 15,000 and 18,000 men each. On February 19 they announced the slaughter of the Soviet 18th Division.

HON. HARRY NIXON BACK IN CABINET

The disagreement was over the Premier's continued attacks upon the Federal Liberal Government of Prime Minister Mackenzie King. When Mr. Nixon announced his resignation, he said he and all other members of his family would vote Liberal in the Federal election March 26.

"Mr. Nixon has re-considered his decision to resign and has re-entered the Cabinet," Mr. Hepburn announced to newspapermen after the conference.

"It was a complete misunderstanding. After the Cabinet Council I felt very much worried and concerned over his resignation. I decided that before attending next day's council I would see him myself and talk over the whole situation. I repeated what I said in caucus a year ago—That members of the Cabinet and my supporters in the House were privileged to vote and speak as Canadians on National issues.

Complete Understanding.

"We both regret the misunderstanding which arose and which culminated, unfortunately, in Mr. Nixon's resignation. We have now reached complete agreement and no one is more happy than I am."

Mr. Nixon was asked if he would appear on the platform Thursday when Mr. Mackenzie King addresses a federal election campaign meeting here.

"I am going away for a few days' rest," Mr. Nixon said.

"Then he'll be back at Queen's Park," Mr. Hepburn said. "He needs a rest."

"I endorse everything the premier has said," Mr. Nixon declared. "The unfortunate misunderstanding which arose regarding the principle of cabinet solidarity has been cleared away and I am happy now to rejoin my colleagues.

"I should have first discussed the whole matter with my colleagues and the premier. This business would never have happened if I had done so. But the premier has made it clear to me that the views I hold on national affairs are my own."

Points of Disagreement.

The matters on which Mr. Nixon said he and the premier disagreed when he announced his resignation were:

The legislature's vote criticizing the federal government's conduct of the war, which Mr. Nixon charged the premier had forced upon his followers;

Subsequent attacks by the premier on the Dominion's war effort;

Banning of the March of Time film "Canada At War"; and

The premier's charges of a "walk-out" or "violent disturbance" at the Royal Canadian Air Force Technical Training Centre near St. Thomas.

After yesterday's cabinet session, Mr. Hepburn gave a hint that the way might still be open for Mr. Nixon's return when he made it clear that the Provincial Secretary's resignation had not been accepted.

"All the ministers, including myself, expressed sincere regret at Mr. Nixon's action," he said. "It was a most harmonious meeting. All the ministers pledged their absolute loyalty."

FINNISH REQUESTS ALL ANSWERED

The House cheered this statement loudly.

Epic Story Will Live

"This epic story will ever be recounted in the chronicles of their own history and will remain alive in the memory of all people", Mr. Chamberlain continued.

He said the British Government had made plain "their readiness to give all possible help to the Finns in their gallant struggle against aggression."

Clement Attlee, Labor leader, following Mr. Chamberlain, declared "we all are agreed in admiration for the Finns in their struggle, and while we are relieved that the slaughter has been stopped we deeply regret the success of aggression".

As British had been willing to assist the Finns in defending themselves against aggression, said Mr. Attlee, "we should render them all the assistance we can in order to repair the damages of this unprovoked attack on their people".

Hore-Belisha Attacks Government

The government's decision not to give large scale aid to Finland until the Finns formally appealed for it was attacked by Leslie Hore-Belisha, former War Secretary.

"Is it not a pity, in relation to the magnitude of these events and of their far-reaching character, to plead as an excuse for inaction a pure technicality?" Mr. Hore-Belisha asked.

"While associating myself with the expressions of sympathy with the Finns," said Mr. Hore-Belisha, "is it not a fact that repeated appeals have been made by that country for assistance in materials and men?"

Mr. Chamberlain replied: "It is not correct to say that repeated requests for men had been made by the Finnish government."

Requests For Materials Answered.

The Finnish government, said Mr. Chamberlain, "made repeated requests for materials and every one of those requests has been answered.

"They had been informed as long ago as Feb. 25 that if they were to make an appeal to us we should be prepared and were making preparations to send them men as well as materials."

Only yesterday Premier Daladier of France declared Britain and France had 50,000 troops fully equipped at two ports ready to embark immediately if Finland should call.

In the circumstances in which they found themselves, however, the Finns decided not to make such a request, Mr. Chamberlain said.

Mr. Hore-Belisha asked for a full debate "in the light of these events on the whole conduct of the war".

Mr. Chamberlain declared in reply to a question that "at no time did we threaten the neutrality of Sweden." Sweden's neutrality was presumed to have been involved in the question of transporting allied troops to Finland.

Mr. Hore-Belisha's request for a debate brought a shout from a Labor member: "And discuss you too, you want us to fight the world."

When others asked about a debate Mr. Chamberlain replied, "that is not a matter I can discuss across the floor of the House."

Sir Archibald Sinclair, leader of the Liberal opposition, associated himself with the prime minister and Mr. Attlee in a tribute to the Finns asked if the government had accepted responsibility for statements in the press as to the quantity of material assistance given the Finns.

The prime minister declared "the government do not take responsibility for the statements" to which Sir Archibald referred and said "we have never made any official, complete statement of the amount of assistance which had been given Finland."

Asked for a statement on the actual amount of assistance given Finland, Mr. Chamberlain said he would have to have notice on the question, meaning he required time to consider an answer.

Russian Ambassador Ivan Maisky sat in the diplomatic gallery during the debate, leaving soon afterward.

Asked by Sir Archibald Southby, Conservative, if he was "satisfied that in these harsh peace terms accepted by the Finns there is a guarantee they will really be observed in spirit by Russia" and whether "the help offered by Britain and France to Finland had been rendered impossible by action of the Norwegian and Swedish government," Mr. Chamberlain replied:—

"It is obvious that I can give no such guarantee as asked for in the first part of the question. As regards the second part, a request for this help was not made by the Finnish Government."

In the midst of the exchange on the Finnish-Russian peace, William Gallacher, Communist, declared a settlement of the Finnish question could have been reached in November "without bloodshed if it had not been for outside pressure."

Shouts of "no!" came from various sides of the House.

Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax made a statement similar to Mr. Chamberlain's in the House of Lords.

Regret at Spiritual Injuries

Lord Snell, Labor leader in the Upper House, expressed "satisfaction that the physical agony of this miraculous little people has now ended, but with a feeling of regret that the spiritual injuries they have received will endure; that right has once more been defeated and wrong once more triumphed in the world."

Mr. Hore-Belisha asked: "Does the Prime Minister confirm Premier Daladier's statement that an expeditionary force of 50,000 French soldiers and still more British troops were actually ready? Wa sthis force promised to the Finns for their assistance, or were any restrictions placed on its use in defence of Finnish territory — restrictions that had the effect of causing Finland to believe it inadequate to repel Russian aggression?"

Mr. Chamberlain replied: "I have endeavored to obtain an accurate account of what was said by M. Daladier. Until I receive it I would prefer not to comment."

Lord Halifax Speaks in Upper House

As to actual assitance given Finland, Lord Halifax said in the Upper House that "for my own part I shou ldnot be afraid of the judgment of our fellow countryment if they had before them the full facts in regard to our contribution to Finland in her struggle."

Lord Balfour proposed a private session of the House of Lords to discuss the Finnish question, but the Foreign Secretary replied that in no circumstances would information that might be available at any session, public or private, lead to a different conclusion from that outlined in his statement.

"Too Late", Says Lloyd George

David Lloyd George said that "in my heart I am glad of the news" from Finland, but continued:—

"But it is the old trouble—too late. Too late for Czecho-Slovakia. Too late for Poland. Certainly too late for Finland .

"It is always too late or too little or both. That is the road to disaster."

Sir M. O'Dwyer Shot by Assassin In London, Eng.

Secretary of State for India, the Marquess of Zetland and Two Other Indian Officials Wounded

ASSASSIN ARRESTED

Police Surrounded Building and No One Allowed to Leave for Two and One-Half Hours After the Meeting Dispersed

London, March 13 (CP) — An Indian assassin today shot and killed Sir Michael O'Dwyer, former Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, and wounded the Marquess of Zetland, Secretary of State for India, and two other former Indian officials.

The scene of the shooting was a crowded meeting of the East India Association at Caxton Hall, near Westminster Abbey.

In addition to Lord Zetland, who was grazed by the bullet, the wounded were Lord Lamington, former Governor of Bombay, and Sir Louis Dane ,like Sir Michael, a former Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab.

Both Lord Lamington and Sir Louis Dane were wounded in the arm.

Sir Michael, who was 75, fell bleeding from a wound in the chest. Lord Zetland fell by the side of his presidential chair.

The Indian gunman shouted "make way" and dashed down the crowded aisle towards the door.

There was a stampede in the crowd for a moment and then two men jumped on the Indian.

No one of the audience of 150 was allowed to leave for 2 1-2 hours. Police surrounded the building.

Heard a Bang

Lord Zetland said: "I heard a bang close to me, then a sharp pain in the ribs. It knocked me out and while I was down I heard more shooting."

A bullet was found in his clothes after he was taken to a hospital.

While the two men held down the short, dark, thick-set Indian, a third took his gun away.

Police would not let any of the audience leave until statements had been taken. High officials of the India Office came quickly. Two doctors in the audience attended Sir Michael but he died almost immediately.

The East India Association, which Lord Zetland earlier had addressed "seeks the welfare of the people of India by lectures, discussions and social contact."

A man who saw the shooting said that as soon as the shots sounded everyone shouted "police."

"Then an Indian with what looked like a silver gun in his hand shouted 'make way' and began to push people as he came towards me.

"Before he reached me, however, two men—one an officer in the Royal Air Force—jumped on him and held his face to the floor.

"The police came and we were kept 2 1-2 hours and were unable to use the telephone."

Moira River Conditions Unlike 4 Years Ago

It was exactly four years ago yesterday that the Moira River jammed throughout its entire lower course with mountains of ice, went on the rampage which resulted in the worst flood ever experienced in the City of Belleville. Huge cakes of ice floated down the centre of lower Front Street on the crest of flood waters emerging from the course of the river by way of Bridge Street and practically every business on lower Front Street was forced to close its doors until the waters abated, leaving damage to the extent of thousands of dollars.

Today, however, an entirely different aspect presents itself to the citizens of the city. The Moira River is still covered with its winter-time coat of mail and is showing very little indications of an ensuing breakup. A few large cracks have appeared in the ice and in one place just below the upper bridge a small stretch of open water appears, but the river is still held solidly in the grip of the Winter-like weather which has prevailed throughout the past few days.

VERY FEW CASES OF CONTAGIOUS DISEASES

Very few cases of contagious diseases of any sort exist in the city at the present time, according to Dr. G. S. Cronk, who states that the city is very free from such trouble. Only the odd minor case of chickenpox and whooping cough have been reported to health officials which are now requiring medical care.

KIWANIS MEMBERS CONDUCT DEBATE

Subject of Instalment Buying Thoroughly Discussed at Luncheon

An interesting debate on the subject: "Has Instalment Buying Been Beneficial to the Purchasing Public?" was heard at the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis Club held on Tuesday with Eddie Logan and Charlie Tripp conducting the affirmative side and Eddie Shapiro and Jack McVeigh carrying the negative standard. It was announced that although these members were arguing on the respective sides, it did not necessarily follow, that it was their belief or opinion. The members judged the debate a draw but some fine points were brought out in the discussion that was allowed following the presentation of the facts. Bill Anderson was in the chair with Dave Ogilvie as Sergeant at Arms and Harold Carruthers as song leader. There was a large attendance of the members present. A roll call was held with each member giving his full name and it caused a great deal of merriment among the members.

Eddie Logan stated that instalment buying caused increased credits on definite terms, arguing that the more credit the more buying and that a better class of merchandise could be sold. He also stated that the average number of failures has not increased under the instalment plan of buying. He quoted Henry Ford as stating he endorsed purchases out of earnings. Eddie Shapiro argued that credit was not generally instalment buying and that instalment buying raised the price to the consumer due to credit losses. The speaker also argued that instalment buying had caused people to live beyond their incomes and that it had deprived people of the necessities of life trying to meet their payments.

Charlie Tripp for the affirmative was sure that homes were paid for on the instalment plan and that time payment on wheat had ensured the west's security. He also argued that life insurance was an instalment plan policy and that taxes of a club were paid by instalment. Instalment buying was creditted with giving the housewife labor saving devices that she could not otherwise afford. Jack McVeigh argued there was a considerable cost of outlay after the main purchase and under the repossession clause the only loser is the original buyer. "Pride of ownership cannot exist under the instalment plan of buying," said Mr. McVeigh.

SUPREME COURT TO HEAR CASE

Ottawa, March 13.—(CP)—Three youth, Harry and Louis Binder, and Arthur Roy Saunders will stand trial before a Supreme Court Judge and jury, Magistrate Glenn Strike decided today after a preliminary hearing on charges of printing and distributing anti-war propaganda.

The three face three charges under Defence of Canada regulations, relating to the printing and distribution of a pamphlet, containing such statements as—

"Withdraw Canada from the war. Speed the end of the slaughter. Vote Communist. Vote for Peace". It said the Canadian government and capitalist interests were conspiring "with the Imperialits war lords of Europe to make war against the Soviet Union, the Land of Socialism".

Evidence at the preliminary hearing was given by police officers and consisted mainly in the identification of copies of the pamphlet and other papers and of a multigraphing machine which it is alleged to have been printed.

Russian Attacks Answered by Finns, Fighting Lasts Until 11 O'clock

Helsinki, March 13.—(AP)—Russian attacks were answered by Finnish counter-attacks today in bitter war-end fighting that continued until the very moment when an 11 o'clock armistice ended the conflict as agreed in Moscow.

The Finnish High Command, issuing its "last communique" of the war, reported a few hours after the fighting ended that there had been no cessation until the very last.

"On the morning of March 13 the enemy continued to attack and our troops counter-attacked on the Isthmus, northeast of Lake Ladoga, and at Kuhmo up to 11 a.m. (4 a.m. E.S.T.) when both sides ceased", the communique said.

SELECT WINNIPEG AS HEADQUARTERS FOR AIR COMMAND

Two Training Groups Will be Stationed in Each Air Command

DEPOT AT TRENTON

Ottawa, March 13 (CP)—Defence Minister Rogers announced today the selection of Winnipeg as headquarters for No. 2 Training Command for which provision has been made in the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan. No. 1 Training Command, formerly known as Air Training Command, is located in Toronto.

Provision has been made for establishment of two training groups in each Training Command. No. 1 training group will be held responsible for all schools and depots in Central Ontario, the western extremity of which, for administration purposes, extends to the head of the lakes.

The defence minister announced also that Montreal will be headquarters for No. 2 training group, taking in Eastern Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces.

Change in Commands

Under the new organization of the Royal Canadian Air Force, four units now being administered through Military District No. 4, with headquarters in Montreal, will be administered direct from Air Force headquarters in Ottawa, these being No. 115 (Fighter) Squadron, No. 11 Technical Detachment, the recruiting centre in Montreal and the recruiting centre in Three Rivers, Que. At the same time, the recruiting centre in Quebec, which was administered through Military District No. 5, with headquarters in Quebec, will be administered from Air Force headquarters.

The new organization involves a change in No. 1 Aircraft Depot at Ottawa. This is officially converted into an equipment depot and a repair depot. The latter will be transferred to the R.C.A.F. Station, Trenton, where it will be under the direction of No. 1 Training Command.

80 Schools

With establishment of an overseas headquarters for the R.C.A.F. in England, No. 110 Army Co-operation Squadron, now overseas, will be under its jurisdiction for general administration.

Excluding 26 recruiting units which will be responsible directly to air force headquarters, provision has been made in the revised organization of the air training plan for 80 schools and depots.

In the No. 1 training group the number of service flying training schools has been increased from three to four and today's announcement also gave the locations as previously announced of other schools to be established under the plan.

Last-Minute Rush Looms for Drivers

March 31 is Set as Deadline for 1939 Plates and Licences

No extension of time will be granted beyond March 31 for use of the 1939 plates and licenses.

In making this announcement, J. P. Bickell, Registrar of Motor Vehicles urged all motorists to secure their permits and licenses immediately. While many car owners throughout the province have already secured their new 1940 plates, records show that there are thousands who face the prospect of finding themselves in the last-minute rush unless they act without delay.

Officials at the Motor Vehicles Branch declare that the motoring public could easily avert the inconvenience and annoyance of waiting in a crowd. "It's a job that will take a few minutes now but it may take hours later on", one official stated. "We have the plates and licenses ready; it's now up to the motorists, but March 31 is positively the deadline."

MANION LAUNCHES PERSONAL ATTACK ON HON. C. D. HOWE

Dares Transport Minister to Tell How Much of "Fortune" Made from Cost-plus Gov't. Contracts

CHARGES BRIBERY

(By Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Cornwall, Ont., March 13.—(CP)—Transport Minister Howe was challenged here last night by Conservative Leader Manion to tell how much of Mr. Howe's "fortune" was made from cost-plus government contracts.

"Is it because of his experience with this kind of contract that Mr. Howe is now in charge of the War Supply Board?" Dr. Manion asked.

Speaking to 3,000 persons in Cornwall Amory, the Conservative Leader replied to a radio address by Mr. Howe directed at Dr. Manian's election efforts.

Dr. Manion charged the Transport Minister with uttering a "common garden variety of lie" when Mr. Howe said the Government's determination to eliminate profiteering was not being well received by a small group associating themselves with the "so-called National Government Party" led by Dr. Manion.

Mr. Howe had said this group believed by a campaign of misrepresentation it could seize office and "restore conditions prevailing during the last war".

Not Getting Financial Help

"When Mr. Howe charges me with aligning myself with thugs and racketeers, it is a lie," Dr. Manion said. He wondered just whom the financial interests were working with in the election, anyway the Conservative party was not getting their support, because he had made it clear when he accepted the Conservative leadership he would work for the common people.

He termed Mr. Howe's address "an even mixture of falsehood and abuse" on a par with the speeches of "little Mr. Rogers" (Defence Minister Rogers).

Mr. Howe had accused him of "trying to bribe the people with their own money" when Dr. Manion proposed abolishing the radio licence fee, but Dr. Manion retorted that the government was "taking the people's money and only bribing their own party."

He charged the government with the "Hitlerite closing up of freedom of speech" by its sudden closing of parliament, by its ban on the broadcasting of political meetings and by its censorship of radio election broadcasts.

Making Different Statements Claim

He told the audience, a large part French-Canadian, that Liberal cabinet ministers were making widely different statements in and out of Quebec province ,trying to split that province off from the rest of Canada and keep it as a solid bloc for themselves.

Dr. Manion proposed more labor representatives on war boards and appointment of a labor man to administer the labor department. There was no one industrialist in the whole cabinet. He felt more diversified representation in the cabinet was essential. Of the 16 ministers, 10 were lawyers.

"I've nothing to say against lawyers, but they're just not good enough that 10 of the 16 cabinet ministers should be lawyers," he said.

Criticizes King and Government

Dr. Manion said the government of Prime Minister Mackenzie King, was "not the proper government to carry on in such a trying time, any more than it was a proper government in peacetime." Its record had been one of failure, lack of vision, imagination and courage.

It had failed to deal with the vital problem of unemployment. During its regime there had been 1,000,000 on relief and 500,000 unemployed, a state of affairs which could not continue indefinitely under the present economic system. An overthrow of this system might lead to Communism or Nazism.

He accused the Prime Minister of "scuttling" parliament on January 25 in the hope that the people would not be enlightened on the questions of the day when voting took place.

Dr. Manion reiterated, his Opposition to conscription and to railway amalgamation.

Sweden and Norway Blocked Offer of Aid By Britain, France

This is Statement of Finnish Foreign Minister Who Says Expeditionary Force Which Britain and France Offered Would Have Been Effective — Only Route Would Have Been Through Norway and Sweden Which Refused Passage

Helsinki, March 13 (CP) —These are the words used by Foreign Minister Vaino Tanner today in describing how Sweden and Norway blocked the offer of Great Britain and France to send aid to Finland:

"The western powers declared that they were ready to send a completely equipped expeditionary force if our country asked for it . . .

"This plan was carefully examined by our high command . . . The conclusion was reached that the dispatch of such an expeditionary force would have been effective.

"There was only one small point: how could these troops reach Finland? . . The Baltic road was closed. The road via Petsamo was long and difficult, and was occupied by the enemy.

"The only possible route was that of Sweden and Norway. . . . Finland approached the governments of these countries to obtain free passage of Allied troops. The same request was made by the Allied governments.

"But passage was sharply forbidden by the two countries in question because of their attitude of strict neutrality. This formal prohibition prevented Allied aid."

"Key to Scandinavia" Held By Soviet Policy Says France

Sweden and Norway May Have Reason to Regret Their "Neutrality" Policy

HARSH PEACE TERMS

By Jean Allary Havas Staff Writer.

Paris, March 13 (CP-Havas) —Future Soviet policy may give Sweden and Norway sad reason to regret the "neutrality" policy which barred Finland from formally requesting the direct aid offered by the Allies, French observers predicted today.

It is held here that Moscow now holds "the key to Scandinavia" as a result of the harsh peace terms forced on the Finnish delegation led by Premier Risto Ryti.

Diplomatic quarters here pointed to Foreign Minister Vaino Tanner's assertion today that Helsinki decided against appealing for the troops offered by France and Great Britain solely because Sweden and Norway had refused them transit.

It can be hoped, it was said, that Finland's neighbors will have no future reason to repent their unrelenting stand.

The terms imposed on Finland were regarded here as leaving the republic powerless to contest future Soviet demands, much as Czecho-Slovakia was made impotent by the loss of Sudetenland.

Paris realized yesterday that the Finnish delegation at Moscow would be forced to submit to Soviet terms. Signature of the pact case as no surprise, but the harshness of the terms did, since recent reports had indicated Russia had moderated her demands. The latter reports had largely stemmed from German and Swedish sources.

French quarters took it as a matter of course that Germany should have helped play Russia's game of deception, but believed it a strange and somewhat disturbing role to be adopted by Sweden.

WRITER KILLS SELF

Helsinki, March 13 (CP-Havas)—A young Finnish woman writer, Mme. Wuvas, shot and killed herself in the corridor of parliament today on learning of the peace treaty with Russia.

Additional Restocking of Local District Waters is Promised

Dr. Van Blakslee, Chairman of Committee, Gives Report to Annual Meeting

OFFICERS ELECTED

Additional re-stocking of local district waters with game fish was assured the Belleville Anglers Association at their monthly meeting held in the Y.M.C.A. last evening at which time the annual selection of officers, taken from the Board of Directors was also announced.

Dr. Van Blakslee, who for several years has been personally responsible for the re-stocking of district waters with game fish, through the co-operation of the Belleville Anglers' Association, revealed at last night's meeting that additional trout, maskinonge, pike and bass fingerlings would be supplied to district waters in co-operation with the Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries. Last year many millions of fry and fingerlings were deposited into local waters and the best season of game fishing enjoyed locally in years was the lot of local and visiting anglers, according to the statistics of the Anglers' Association and the Department of Fisheries. Requisitions for additional restocking were favourably received this year, Chairman Dr. Blakslee announced last night.

Elected President at the inaugural meeting of the Association in 1932, Joe E. Shortt was the unanimous selection of the Board of Directors as President for the eight consecutive term to head the Belleville and District Fish and Game Protective Association at its annual meeting held last night.

The officers elected last night were—

President— J. E. Shortt.

1st Vice President—H. Legate.

2nd Vice President—Dr. Van Blakslee.

Sec.-Treas.—I. G. Hefkey.

Chairman of Re-stocking—Dr. Blakslee.

Chairman—Casting and Contests—Fred Croft.

Chairman—Membership — "Cap" Bottum.

Chairman— Hunting — Russell White.

During the evening moving pictures were shown depicting the proper approach in the angling for speckled trout, maskinonge and bass.

President's Decision Will Depend on Progress of War

London, March 13—(CP)—While Sumner Welles was winding up his talks with British leaders today, The London Daily Mail declared that the President's decision on a third term depends on Welles' report.

"If there were a chance of producing a plan for peace parleys in Europe, and eventually a world conference of all nations, President Roosevelt would be ready to throw his weight into the balance and then retire from the White House in the autumn at the end of his second term," the editorial said.

"But should there be no peace loophole revealed by Mr. Sumner Welles' report and the war develops into a fierce European struggle, President Roosevelt will certainly run for a third term".

The newspaper added that the American Under-Secretary of State, here after talks in Rome, Berlin and Paris, had "so far found no foundation on which the slightest peace plan could be constructed".

'Draft-Roosevelt' Movement Away To Good Start

Manchester, N.H., March 13—(AP)—Official groundwork for a possible "draft - Roosevelt" movement at the Democratic National Convention was laid in New Hampshire today as the United States' first 1940 primary election gave the chief executive a full slate of delegates pledged to a third term.

Eight delegates at large and four district delegates, all committed to the president's renomination, were elected with the backing of a majority of the state's Democratic leaders, and under New Hampshire law, must vote for him at the convention until he gives them a formal release.

The rank and file of the Democratic party ignored protests against a third term and passed up alternative standard bearers, with the result that three candidates pledged to Postmaster General James A. Farley, one to vice-president John Garner and three unpledged ran well behind the Roosevelt slate.

The Granite State Republicans picked an unpledged delegation in accord with Senator Styles Bridges' aspirations for the G.O.P. presidential nomination. After a nip-and-tuck, five-cornered contest over the choice of four delegates at large, Bridges, Senator Charles W. Tobey and former U.S. Senator George H. Moses, a veteran of five national conventions dating back to 1908, captured three of the places.

With returns in from all but 14 of the State's 294 precincts, former Governor Huntley Spaulding was leading Governor Francis P. Murphy, 24,238 votes to 23,674 for the fourth place,

Clarke Lapp Describes Progress of Printing At Masonic Meeting

The revolutionary effects of printing in spreading knowledge and bringing education to the masses were traced by Clarke Lapp, advertising manager of the Ontario Intelligencer, in an address at the regular meeting of Quinte Friendship Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, No. 227, in the Masonic Temple last evening.

The invention of movable types by Johann Gutenburg at Mainz, Germany, occurred just five hundred years ago. At that time there were very few books and education was restricted mostly to the nobility and clergy. Gradually, from Gutenburg's invention, books became more numerous and the circle of education widened. Movable types made newspapers possible, and the speaker sketched the progress from the first small news sheets to the great newspapers of the present day. From Gutenburg's invention, which prevailed for 450 years, had come the invention of the linotype, which does the work of six typesetters, and other printing equipment which had expanded newspaper production.

Mr. Lapp traced the development of news services which today ensured a complete coverage of local, national and world news and told of the speeding of the transmission of news as a result of the invention of the teletype.

The press is the voice and servant of the people and so long as the freedom of the press was maintained so long would democracy prevail in this land, he concluded.

The speaker was introduced by Mr. Milton Fowler, and the thanks of Quinte Chapter was expressed by Mr. A. C. Wilkin.

Mr. Fred Stone gave a very entertaining series of vocal and violin imitations. He will be among the contestants for the grand prize of $500 next Sunday on the Ken Soble amateur radio program.

Messrs. Clarence and Bill Sligh assisted with the program. Mr. J. E. Bateman presided.

"A SAD PEACE" SAYS SWEDEN

Press Asserts Finland Now More Than Ever Will Need Sweden's Help

Stockholm, March 13 (AP)—From the welter of Swedish press comment on the Finnish-Russian war climax there emerged today a proposal that peace be insured by a defence union with Finland. Now, more than ever, the press said, Finns will need Swedish help.

The Conservative Svensko Dagbladet called the Moscow treaty a "hard peace" and asked what the Finnish people would say when they learn its terms.

"Many will say that Sweden is to blame," the newspaper said, "but at least the peace now must be guaranteed by Sweden in a defence union with Finland and possibly with Norway."

The Stockholm Tidningen commented that without Swedish material and help the Finns could not have held out as long as they did and added, "Sweden must stand side by side with Finland with all resources, including military."

The Dagens Nyheter said the war had demonstrated the limitations of Russian military power and the worth of Finnish arms, adding that Sweden must give Finland all possible help "in the new situation."

The general Swedish reaction was one of relief without jubilation — relief that ratification of the the Moscow treaty by Finland would leave Scandinavian neutrality intact, at least temporarily.

Enormous headlines told the news of the Moscow negotiations and crowds collected in front of newspaper offices to read bulletins in silence or to comment sorrowfully.

"A sad peace," was a frequent comment.

LLOYD G. BISHOP, PILOT IN R. A. F., KILLED IN FRANCE

Former Albert College Student Went to England in November 1938, Joined R.A.F.

WELL KNOWN HERE

Kingston, Ont., March 13 (CP)—Rev. Alfred Bishop of Pittsburgh township, received word today that his son, Pilot Officer Lloyd G. Bishop was killed while serving with the Royal Air Force in France. Pilot Officer Bishop was a Queen's University student when he went to England in November, 1938, and joined the R.A.F. He formerly attended Albert College in Belleville.

Surviving are his father and two brothers, Albert Bishop of Port Arthur and Frank Bishop of Strathcona.

Interest in Sports

The late Pilot Officer Bishop was one of Albert College's best-liked students when he attended that institution from 1934 until he left for Queen's University a few years later.

Athletically inclined he took generous interest in all sports and starred in basketball, getting his letter in that phase of college athletics. He was a power in school circles and made a splendid contribution to the college in all phases of its life and work.

A brother, Albert Bishop, taught at the college for a period of four years.

Faculty, staff and student body of the school mourn a gallant son who has given his all in sacrifice of freedom.

Experiences in War

Believed to be one of the first "Queen's" and "Albert" men in action, the late Pilot Officer Bishop had bombed a German submarine besides partaking in other action while on Coastal Patrol duty.

On one occasion while on Channel duty doing radio-telephony and other aerial drill, he had, to quote a letter he sent to his home, "my plane was blown clean out of my hands" when an oil-tanker he was using as a mark suddenly exploded in the sea. He was leading a formation of Hurricanes at the time, and was flying at 3,000 feet when the incident occurred.

Premier Risto Ryti and Delegation Which Accepted the Russian Settlement Passed Through Stockholm on Their Way to Helsinki

(By Max Harrelson Associated Press Staff Writer).

Helsinki, March 14 (AP)—Shrouded in peace, Finland today counted on new fortifications and a prospective alliance with Norway and Sweden, if need be, to save her from Czecho-Slovakia's fate.

Foreign Minister Vaino Tanner made it clear that despite the crushing peace that ended 105 days of war with Soviet Russia, Finland intended to take every step to protect her newly-narrowed borders from future threats.

Asked if fortification of the new borders would be permitted, Tanner said:

"Who is going to stop us?"

He added, "our military commanders say all borders are defens-

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Migrating birds and spring weather! No season ever seems so welcome as spring, not even the cooling autumn after a hot summer. This is partly because of our great interest in the spring activities of nature. The arrival of migrating birds is one spring feature everyone notices. First to come are the redwinged blackbird, bluebird and woodpeckers. Birds seem to come in waves. In a thirty-day period, half of the arrivals came in two days. These waves of bird immigration appear to have considerably to do with the weather, as many came with a coming low barometric condition which was accompanied by higher temperatures and southerly winds.

Election Officers Asked to Assist The Canadian Press In Securing Returns

Ottawa, March 14 CP)—Election officers should do whatever they can to aid The Canadian Press in promptly collecting accurate returns of the Dominion elections on March 26, Jules Castonguay, chief electoral officer said today.

"Every election officer and particularly every deputy returning officer, poll clerk and candidate's agent at the polls should do whatever he can to furnish to The Canadian Press, newspapers and their accredited correspondents, as early in the evening as possible on polling day, accurate statements of the results of the vote at every polling station," he said.

Mr. Castonguay pointed out that when deputies complete their statements of the result at each polling station the information they contain is public property. The chief electoral officer continued: "Every deputy returning officer and poll clerk as well as every candidate's agent should do what lies in his power to notify the number of votes cast for each candidate at their polling station to the press and to the candidate's organization with the least possible delay."

The chief electoral officer included in each of the 32,000 ballot boxes used on polling day a special memorandum to deputy returning officers requesting them to co-operate with The Canadian Press and its accredited correspondents. The returning officer for each electoral district has also been requested to co-operate with The Canadian Press in the collection of the results of the election on polling day.

ROGERS CALLED A "FALSIFIER"

Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion Carries Battle Into Defence Minister's Own Riding at Kingston

By Canadian Press Staff Writer

Kingston, Ont., March 14—(CP)—Conservative Leader Manion brought his steady attack on the Government's defence administration into the home constituency of Defence Minister Rogers here last night.

The Conservative leader, pulling no punches, assailed Mr. Rogers as a "falsifier" and "absolutely untruthful" in his statements. He denounced him as a man with "no practical experience in life whatever" and as one who had been a "complete failure", as Labor Minister before being transferred to defence.

Dr. Manion said that he attacked Mr. Rogers in Kingston riding only because the Minister had attacked him from many platforms, calling Dr. Manion "irresponsible" and similar epithets.

He said Finance Minister Ralston's most recent address indicated the equipment the First Division lacked when it went overseas, despite assertions by Mr. Rogers and others that it had been fully equipped.

Mr. Rogers had termed false Dr. Manion's charges that the Seaforth Highlanders of Vancouver had had only cotton underwear when they crossed Canada in midwinter, with the result many had been sick, Dr. Manion recalled.

He said General J. A. Clark of Vancouver, Commander of the regiment during the last war, had written Mr. Rogers giving him the right information but the Minister had not seen fit to make a correction. Now the General had issued a statement corroborating Dr. Manion's charges and stating that 500 men of that unit had been sick.

"This makes a falsifier of Mr. Rogers", Dr. Manion observed.

ALLEGED ASSASSIN OF SIR M. O'DWYER REMANDED WEEK

London Paper Hints That Assassination Might Start "Outbreak of Indian Terrorism in Britain"

GANDHI BLAMED

Many Officials in England Regard Shooting as an Isolated Incident

London, March 14—(CP)— A 57-year-old British Indian engineer, Mahomed Singh Azad, was arraigned today in heavily guarded Bow Street Court, charged with the assassination of Sir Michael O'Dwyer, retired Indian administrator.

The stocky defendant smiled as Detective Inspector Swain testified that Azad, after the killing last night at Caxton Hall, had said:

"I did not mean to kill him—I just did it to protest."

The prisoner was remanded in custody for a week after he waived questioning the officer.

The assassination overshadowed war news on London's front pages and evoked in one editorial a hint that it might start an "outbreak of Indian terrorism in Great Britain."

The Daily Telegraph indirectly blamed the Indian Nationalist leader, Mohandas K. Gandhi, for the gunfire that broke up a meeting of the East India Association, killed O'Dwyer and wounded two others.

The newspaper said, in part:

"In India, Mr. Gandhi talks of the virtues of passive disobedience but it has often happened in the past that his opposition to the Indian Government has been translated into acts of violence by those who profess adherence to his political principles."

Regarded as Isolated Incident

Most newspapers, however, regarded the shooting as an isolated incident.

The assassin was overpowered by police before he could escape

Finland Hopes for Aid In Reconstruction Work

President Kallio in Radio Address Says Country Will Depend Chiefly on Own Efforts but Also Needs Outside Help

COUNTRY UNITED

Helsinki, Mar. 14 (CP-Havas).—Finland's rights and the army that has shown its capacity to defend them are still intact, President Kyosti Kallio told the Finnish nation in a radio speech today.

The Finnish leader said the country hoped for aid in the tremendous task of reconstruction but would depend in this task primarily upon its own strength and its own unity to see it through.

The struggle, he said, had welded the nation as never before and he urged the people to preserve this unity as their utmost precious possession.

"One consolation remains," he said. "Finnish rights continue to exist. Our moral victory is an accomplished fact. We count on those who hold the same ideals as we to aid us now in the heavy task that lies before us.

"We must assess as its true value the aid that has been given us up until now, but we must count above all on ourselves. Our union must remain our principal source of strength. In the unequal struggle, from the point of view of relationship of forces, we were able to preserve our union tact.

"Our sorrow is great, but our wisdom must sustain us in our effort for reconstruction. Our political life the form of our state, survive like the people themselves. Our army has remained intact and ready to defend our liberties. The struggle tempered and welded us together.

"We bow before the thousands of heroes fallen for the country. We above all thank Field Marshal Carl Gustav Mannerheim who remains for all of us the symbol of heroism of our soldiers.

"It is now our duty to take charge of the invalids, the families of the dead, and all the other victims of the war, including all the evacuees.

"Disappointment was great in the attitude of Sweden and Norway which refused transit which would have enabled us to resist the invader victoriously. I hope, however, that it has become clear to our neighbors that an unbreakable and durable union must be established among the northern countries.

Submarine Captain Reported to Have Sunk 24,600 Tons of Shipping On Second Cruise

Berlin, March 14—(AP)— The submarine captain who sank the British aircraft carrier Courageous Sept. 18 reported sinking 24,600 tons of shipping on his second cruise, the German High Command announced today.

Its communique said:—

"On the western front, no special events.

"South of Strasbourg one French plane of the Mureaux type was shot down by German anti-aircraft artillery.

"Lieut.-Capt. Schuhart, returning with his U-boat from his latest cruise against the enemy, reported sinking 24,600 gross registered tons. Thus Lieut.-Capt. Schuhart, who in September last year destroyed the British airplane carrier Courageous, in the course of two cruises against the enemy has sunk a total of 66,566 tons."

Sinking of the 3,303-ton German steamer Eschersheim yesterday two miles from Rudberg Kude Light off the Jutland coast in the North Sea was reported by the German news agency.

(A report from Copenhagen said the ship apparently had been scuttled and that 22 crewmen were saved. The ship was bound from Bremen to Oslo with coke.

(It was reported at Bergen, Norway, that a German warship seized and took to a German port the Norwegian freighter Balder.)

Buses Supply Extinguishers

PROPHESIED RIGHTLY

Minneapolis, Minn., March 14 —(AP)— Charles Anderson, 52, was being questioned at his burglary trial. "How many times have you been convicted of a crime?" "Five times," answered Anderson. "And this'll be the sixth." He prophesied rightly. After three hours deliberation a jury convicted him.

Norse Paper Warns Against Scandinavian Defence Alliance

Oslo, Norway, March 14—(AP)— The Liberal newspaper Dagbladet warned Norway today not to enter into negotiations for a defensive alliance with Finland and Sweden.

Norway's Foreign Minister Halvdan Koht said this country already had agreed to "consider the possibility" of such an alliance and similar word came from Sweden.

The newspaper pointed out that the third clause of the Finnish-Russian Peace Treaty forbade Finland to enter an alliance against the Soviet Union, and this excludes any defence pact.

It said that if Norway had declared its willingnes to discuss such possibilities, "we must assume that answer was given before the peace conditions were made known.

"If the cabinet should propose a pact, the Storting (parliament) must reject it at any cost."

The Dagbladet previously had urged active Norwegian intervention to help Finland fight Russia.

Neutral observers agreed that a defence pact would be welcomed in many sections of Norwegian and Swedish public opinion due to the deep feeling that Finland suffered unduly both in war and the new peace, but the non-aggression article in the Russian treaty was regarded as a possible stumbling block.

Finland's President Kyosti Kallio today described a Finnish-Norwegian-Swedish alliance as an "inescapable necessity."

SWEDEN FAVORS COLLABORATION OF NORTH NATIONS

Swedish Foreign Minister Finland Become Another Czecho-Slovakia

REICH'S ATTITUDE

Swedisr Foreign Minister Says Swedish Position Has Become Worse

Stockholm, March 14 —(AP) — The Swedish Foreign Office announced today that the Swedish Government, in reply to a question from the Finnish Government, had declared itself ready and willing to "discuss the possibility of a defensive alliance."

Norway's Foreign Minister, Halvdan Koht, made a virtually identical announcement soon after President Kyosti Kallio of Finland in a broadcast from Helsinki said the need for such an alliance was apparent.

The three northern nations, moving for joint defense discussions, apparently were spurred by Russia's terms exacting vital territorial concessions from Finland as the price for ending the Finnish-Russian war.

Sweden and Norway found cause for concern in the rail and air right-o-way Russia won across the Finnish territory to the Swedish and Norwegian frontiers.

Sweden, taking stock of changes in Scandinavian's strategic position as a result of a Soviet Russia's inroads on Finland, is prepared for an "unbiased examination" of the situation lest Finland become another Czecho-Slovakia.

Apparently she favors some sort of defensive alliance of the north countries to insure that the Russians will not follow up the Moscow settlement with a march to Helsinki as the Germans followed Munich with a march to Prague.

There remained, of course, the possibility that Germany herself might stand in the way of any such Russian move.

A Swedish stand for closer collaboration of the north countries—perhaps an outright alliance—was hinted last night when Swedish Foreign Minister Christian Gunther told a special gathering of parliament that the "danger is not over" and that "as a result of Finland's altered frontiers our own positon has become worse, viewed generally, than it was before the Russian-Finnish conflict."

Asks Gov't Answer Current Rumors

London Daily Mail Asks What 'Extraordinary Wave of Appeasement Talk' Means

London, March 14 (CP)—The Daily Mail today demanded that the government answer current rumors that appeasement talk may result in new moves for peace between the Allies and Germany.

In an editorial dealing with the end of the Russo-Finnish war the newspaper declared that "at this moment there is an extraordinary wave of appeasement talk in Europe and America" and that "it has spread to London."

The Mail said much talk "has been favored by the tour of Mr. Welles (Sumner Welles, United States Under-Secretary of State), by developments in Finland and by the flying trip paid by Ribbentrop to Mussolini and the people. It is strengthened again by the decision of Mr. Welles to revisit Rome on his way back to America.

"In the United States Senator Key Pittman, Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and many others drop hints of an Easter truce.

"What does all this mean? Have any sort of proposals been made by the British and French governments to Welles? Is the President seeking to work through Mussolini and the Pope to produce a possible basis for a peace conference?

"The people must know the answer to these questions.

"The government should end the prevailing uncertainty by stating the position of France and ourselves in unequivocal terms."

Traffic Delayed In Many Sections Throughout Ont.

Highways Almost Impassable During Early Part of Day Because of Ice

MANY MISHAPS

Motorists Find Hills Almost Impassable in Many Places—Busses Run Late

By the Canadian Press

Numerous minor mishaps were recorded in Ontario today as highways were covered with a blanket of wet snow after a freezing rain.

At Fort Erie A. T. Elliott suffered a cracked vertebrae in his back as he attempted to save himself from a fall on an icy sidewalk. At Napanee a Kingston woman, Mrs. Montgomery, suffered a broken leg when the car in which she was riding left the road and crashed into a pole.

One person was killed and 11 hurt in 25 accidents on Toronto streets.

The victim, William Roberts, 57, was in collision with three automobiles, police report. He first came into collision with a car driven by David Kay, then one operated by George Watson, and a third time by a car driven by Carl Collins, police said. Mr. Roberts was getting to his feet when struck the third time, police added.

Snow and higher temperatures today came to the rescue of traffic impeded by ice-glazed highways and city streets in many parts of Ontario. The rain yesterday was followed by a sharp drop in temperature, accompanied by high winds, before it was succeeded by snow.

Today the ice that wasn't covered by snow was melting and traffic conditions were getting back to normal. However the pre-Easter onslaught of winter emphasized the complete blocking of many tertiary roads to motor traffic.

The storm hit all that area between Toronto and Windsor. East of Toronto it seemed to veer away from the lakeshore but 50 miles north was felt severely. The provincial highways department did its best with ploughs and sand, but motorists found many roads, especially on hills, unnavigable last night. Travelling was still heavy and slippery today.

Most serious traffic tie-up was reported from Stratford. Highways officials said nearly every north - south road was blocked. East-west highways were heavy

BRITISH SCOUTS FLY OVER HELIGOLAND

Paris, Mar. 14 (CP-Havas).—The only activity reported by military authorities today was a British scouting plane over Heligoland and a flight by a single German aircraft over the eastern English coast.

Bad weather almost completely paralyzed air operations over the lines. On the Rhine-Moselle front there was the usual patrol activity but no clashes were reported. On the Rhine front casemates on opposite sides of the river exchanged some machine-gun fire.

"Nothing to report," said this morning's official communique.

PEDEN BROTHERS TO JOIN ARMY

Intend to Fight for England Not for Glory on Racing Track

Buffalo, N.Y., March 14—(CP)—Torchy Peden, veteran Vancouver six-day bicycle rider and his brother, Doug, said today they were retiring from the board track and enlisting in the Canadian army.

Torchy told friends: "We are through with six-day races. We are now going to fight for our country.

"I have won 34 races, which is more than any six-day rider in the world. Doug, my brother, has won six races.

"I have had all the glory I want and I think Doug has, too.

"From now on we intend to fight for England not for glory in the bicycle saucer."

'Never Saw Soldiers Your Equals' —Mannerheim

Helsinki, March 14—(AP)— In a final order of the day to his Finnish troops, Field Marshal Baron Carl Gustaf Mannerheim tonight estimated Russian dead at 200,000 and Finnish slain at 15,000 in the 105-day war which ended yesterday.

Calling today's peace "exacting," the aged military leader made clear his bitterness at giving up "the ground we cultivated with sweat and labor," and loss of "nearly every battlefield", where Finnish soldiers shed their blood, "to an alien race."

The Field Marshal told the Finns they had "paid the last penny of any debt they might have owed the West."

Mannerheim said: "We are proudly conscious of the historic duty which we will continue to fulfill: Defense of that western civilization which has been our heritage for centuries.

"Our fate is hard now that we are compelled to give up to an alien race, a race with a life philosophy and moral values different from ours, the ground which for centuries we have cultivated in labor and sweat.

"I have fought on many battlefields, but I never saw soldiers who were your equals.

"From whatever part of the country or from whatever rank of society you came, I am proud of you.

CABINET POLLED BY THE PREMIER

Ministers Declare They Gave No Interview to the Toronto Star

Toronto, March 14 — (CP)—The Globe and Mail today published an account of how Premier Hepburn created a precedent in Ontario politics by calling a reporter for one Toronto evening newspaper into a cabinet meeting in a move to discredit the accuracy of a report in another Toronto evening newspaper.

The Premier had read an article in the Toronto Daily Star which quoted an unnamed cabinet minister as saying the premier had been forced by his colleagues to seek out provincial secretary Harry Nixon and ask him to withdraw his resignation. Mr. Nixon withdrew the resignation Tuesday night.

In the presence of the Telegram reporter the premier yesterday polled his cabinet ministers individually after saying: "We want to say on our honor that none of us has given this interview to the Toronto Star. Is that correct gentlemen" Each of the 12 ministers in turn signified his agreement.

Earlier in the day Premier Hepburn had asked a Toronto Star reporter at a press interview to name the cabinet minister quoted in his story. The reporter declined to do so but insisted he had interviewed an Ontario cabinet minister and that the interview had not been fabricated.

MANION SCUTTLED PARTY POLICIES CLAIMS SPEAKER

D. J. Coffey, K.C., of Toronto, Speaks at Read in the Interest of McLean Haig, Liberal Candidate in Hastings South

REVIEWS WAR EFFORT

Speaking in the interests of Mr. McLean Haig ,the official Liberal candidate for Hastings South, at the Parish Hall in Read on Wednesday evening, Mr. D. J. Coffey, K.C., of Toronto, declared that Dr. Manion had "scuttled" the policies of the old-time Conservative party in favor of the newer vote-appealing "National Government" and, if elected, would form a "Ghost Cabinet" out of the 198 candidates, who are now the standard bearers of the one-time Conservative party.

It was the unfair criticism lodged against the war time efforts of the Mackenzie King Government, which forced the election at the present time, stated Mr. Coffey, and Mr. King chose the date of March 26th because of the improbability of its interfering with the major operations which were expected on the Western Front as soon as Spring opened. What was the use of continuing parliament in the face of such criticism, was the attitude taken by Mr. King who said, "why not come to the people now?"

War Effort Main Issue

The main issue of the present election is of course the "prosecution of the war," and the splendid effort, which the King Government has put forward is well known. "We all must do our part," said Mr. Coffey, "but what is Dr. Manion's policy? What is he going to do? This he hasn't told, so his policy is a 'myth'." We know what the King Government was doing, but we don't know what Dr. Manion's intentions are, and at a time like this it would be dangerous to "change horses in the middle of the stream."

What did the King Government do? We all admit that our governments for the past twenty years have not been awake to the dangers of war, but since the war started, a War Supply Board has been formed, comprised of men, who had the interests of the country at heart and they are carrying on with economy and speed to the best interests of the country. The fact, that the War Supply Board has yet to become the target for criticism from Dr. Manion proves that its operations are above reproach, Mr. Coffey said.

Claims Manion Denounced National Government

Mr. Coffey said, the inconsistency of Dr. Manion is proven by the fact, that only nine months ago he denounced a National Government as being impracticable in Canada, but now he comes along and tells us what a wonderful thing it is. Dr. Manion claims to have been misquoted in his stand on conscription but in his book "Life as an Adventure" he favors conscription as the only fair and just manner of raising an army in wartime. Mackenzie King is the exact opposite of this, claimed Mr. Coffey, as his word can be relied upon, but Dr. Manion he said is criticising the King Government in the hope of getting votes.

The outfitting of troops in the present war has been grossly misrepresented, said Mr. Coffey, with the stories of their lack of equipment being entirely without foundation, as has been proven by the fact, that Mr. Chamberlain has said that the English were "profoundly impressed with the Canadian soldiers," navy equipment in 1935 was contrasted by Mr. Coffey with the present increased size of the navy of the Dominion. At the present time the Canadian government is spending approximately one million dollars per day on its war effort with expenditures for the next year expected to reach over five hundred millions. Will Dr. Manion spend more money than this? asked Mr. Coffey.

Only Conservative is Claim

"When the veneer is taken off the National Government, it is only Conservative," claimed Mr. Coffey in closing, and the question is, "do we want to go back to a regime such as the last Bennett government, or do we wish to keep in power a government which is capable of running the country, one which will aid in the production of foodstuffs and will protect the interests of the people of Canada, so that the money will go to those who earn it, instead of into the hands of the profiteers."

Mr. McLean Haig, Liberal candidate, spoke briefly, in refutation of statements made by Mr. Harry Cory to the effect that he (Mr. Haig) had not been officially recognized by Mr. Mackenzie King as the official Liberal candidate.

The Mackenzie King Government had weathered with flying colors, the wave of criticism launched against it since the outset of the war, claimed Mr. Haig, and it was proved beyond all doubt, that the people of Canada were behind the united war effort when the electors of the province of Quebec ousted Mr. Duplessis and his agitation against a united front. Mr. Haig touched lightly on the military and economic fronts of the present war and made special mention of the various boards which had been set up in an effort to control prices and prevent profiteering. Activities on the military front had included the sending of one division overseas, while a second was under training here in Canada. The navy, he said, for the first time was taking its place in the convoy service.

In closing Mr. Haig appealed to the electors to exercise their franchise on March 26th. "There is only one Liberal candidate in the riding and when you vote for that candidate, your are voting for the Liberal Government, the government whose experience and record merit your support."

Mr. J. Hanley acted as chairman for the evening, while other speakers included Mr. Mackenzie Robertson of Belleville, who introduced the candidate, Mr. Stewart Dies, Mr. Harry Moorman, Mr. Edward Roach and Mr. Mackenzie of Deseronto. The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

Fordson Tractors Now on Display

All Equipped With New "Ferguson System" Doing Away With Use of Wheeled Implements

Unexcelled performance is claimed by the designers of the new Fordson tractors which combine all the latest developments of tractor building as well as the exclusive feature of the hydraulically controlled "Ferguson System," doing away entirely with the use of wheeled implements. Light and compact with ample reserve power and unheard-of manoeuvrability, the new tractor has been designed especially for working in cramped quarters and is the idea power-plant for market-gardeners and small farm operators, but is also designed to pull with ease 14-inch 2-bottom plows as well as other newly designed tillage equipment, all controlled automatically by the "Ferguson System."

A full car load of the new Fordsons were delivered to the Trudeau Motor Sales of Belleville, Wednesday morning, pending disposal throughout the surrounding district, and are lined up in front of their salesroom, where interested agriculturists are giving them a minute inspection.

FINLAND HOPES FOR ASSISTANCE

"People of Finland! You can be proud of the role you have played as the vanguard of western civilization."

Transport Assembled.

The Ministry of Supply today began to assemble trucks, automobiles and all other available transport to evacuate the population and movable property from the areas ceded to the U.S.S.R. under the peace pact.

There are at least 250,000 people who will have to find new homes. Many of the 80,000 inhabitants of Viipuri, the 6,000 inhabitants of Kakisalmi, and the 8,000 of Sortavala have already been evacuated from those war-razed zones now passing into Russian hands but the task of making the population shift a permanent one has yet to be carried out.

Along the north borders of Lake Ladoga the thawing snows will bring to light, Finns believed, at least 50,000 Russian corpses. The entire area will be dangerous for all living beings until it is cleaned up.

Along the southern shore of the lake the Russians take over a number of important industrial centres, notably a number of lumber and cellulose plants of recent construction. The new frontier also cuts across all the streams hitherto used by the Finns for floating cut timber down to the mills and to Viipuri for export.

Arrangements Made For Firemen's School At Queen's University

Ross A. Winter, M.A., director of extension at Queen's University announced Tuesday night, arrangements had been completed for holding a firemen's training school at the University on April 11 and 12th.

The course will be open to members of permanent as well as volunteer departments from Eastern Ontario. The course is being held with the co-operation of the Fire Marshal's Department of Ontario and the Dominion Association of Fire-Chiefs.

Deputy Fire Marshal J. E. Ritchie, Toronto; Prob. Joslin Rogers, Provincial Analyst, Toronto; Dr. A. C. Neish and Prof. D. S. Ellis, Queen's University will deliver lectures and give practical demonstrations. Members of the Kingston Fire Department under Chief James Armstrong, will give demonstrations with the use of the city fire apparatus.

The course is the first of its kind given in the history of the university.

"It is the policy I have advocated," said ex-Mayor George A. Reid, "That is the trouble today with the fire departments. We are not getting scientific training. Please remember I am not criticizing or finding fault with our department. But I do contend that firemen should be given training as men engaged in any other activity. That is the policy I advocated ten years ago when I was Mayor and I have not changed my mind a particle."

TRAFFIC DELAYED BY WINTER STORM

but passable. Scores of automobiles ditched last night, were still ditched. No serious accidents were reported.

Galt reported the heaviest snowfall of the winter followed by rain and sleet storm. Minor motor accidents were numerous. Driving was hazardous with ice below the snow, but the weather was milder. All highways were open.

East Ontario Hit

The storm moved eastward during the night. Most serious results in Eastern Ontario were reported from Belleville and Peterborough. Belleville said city streets and highways were almost impassable today because of the sleet. It was impossible to keep enough sand on the roads to allow normal traffic movement.

At Trenton a number of transport trucks were tied up, unable to negotiate the sharp upward incline of No. 2 Highway leading from the town. Buses were one to five hours late. It was raining today and temperatures were going up.

A Peterborough hockey team spent the whole night on the road returning from a game at Owen Sound.

Snow fell throughout the night in Sudbury district. There was little drifting. On well-travelled highway sections slipping hazards were greater. The highway to Sault Ste. Marie was open.

Motorists Stranded

Motorists were stranded all night in northern part of Waterloo County, Kitchener reported. A sleet storm followed by sugary snow made motor cars useless for travelling on some roads. At Wellesley, near Crosshill, five motor cars were stuck with no immediate prospect of getting through. Others were stranded near Linwood and Millbank.

All planes in Windsor area were grounded because of icing conditions. A shipping tie-up between Detroit and Buffalo, caused when wind blew ice against the shore, was expected to be broken today.

It was reported from Leamington that heavy damage was done to fruit trees when ice formed on the branches and broke them.

The rain and snow ended a swamp fire on Point Pelee. Game Warden Frank Oper said many muskrats and pheasants were burned to death. Had rain not come, the fire would have reached Point Pelee National Park, he said.

CO-OPERATION REFUSED BY GOV'T, MACAULAY SAYS

Provincial Conservative Declares at Deseronto Meeting Criticism is Most Valuable

CANDIDATES SPEAK

Deseronto, March 14 —(Staff)— Lashing out at the Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King for his failure to accept the Opposition's offer of co-operation, and his campaign criticism of the National Conservative Party policies, the Hon. Leopold Macaulay, M.L.A., predicted here last night "that if the war lasts three years, as the Prime Minister has said it will, there will be a National Government in Canada by that time whether he is elected or not."

He charged the Prime Minister with "misconceived functioning," adding that he was not the man for leadership in wartime. "If so," Mr. Macaulay said, "he would have formed a National Government like Chamberlain and called in the leading men of the other parties, instead of dividing the people on domestic problems."

"While the house was burning," the speaker said amid laughter, "he provoked a row in the family parlor as to what was to be had for supper. There was nobody to man the pumps."

Did Not Measure Up Is Claim

The Prime Minister, the speaker charged, has not measured up to wanting responsibilities because he has not profited by the last war. He was not around here so he could not know what was going on. It took three years to get a National Government in those days."

Scoring the Liberal Chieftain for his failure to accept the co-operation of the Opposition in the fundamental policies of a country at war, Mr. Macaulay said "the war he is conducting is a Liberal one, not a Canadian one."

Veering his attack, the former Minister of Highways charged the Prime Minister with deliberately scuttling the Parliament in order to lock up the evidence of business that should have been given to the people. "The commander of the 'Graf Spee'" he said, "left behind a bunch of old scrap iron and a hulk, but when Mr. King scuttled his parliament, there was not a mast left sticking out of the water."

Parliament Regarded As Asset

The speaker did not think Britain would have won the war of 1914-18 if it had not been for the criticism given to help correct mistakes. It is the only way to get things done and to have changes made, he said. "Britain did not scuttle her parliament, when the opposition criticized it. She regarded it as an asset."

Criticism made concerning the armed forces of Canada by the opposition was not, as the Hon. Norman Rogers stated, intended for detrimental reasons. "It was given to improve the services, and they won't be improved as long as Mr. Rogers is Minister of National Defence," Mr. Macaulay said.

"Mr. King," he continued, "wants to give us an anaesthetic to squash the pains of criticism, but he'll find us tough birds to put under, at least until March 26th, when a new doctor will take over the patient."

Referring to the Ontario Government vote of censure, he reminded his audience that Ontario pays one-half of all expenditures of Canada to the Federal Government. "If this war is badly managed, in Canada, then Ontario suffers," he said. He declared there was no collusion between Premier Hepburn and Colonel Drew regarding the vote. "It was a Liberal Government resolution introduced into the House."

Criticises Censorship

Scuttling of radio broadcasts, Mr. Macaulay charged, was not as Mr. King stated, to keep important facts from Germany, but to prevent the British way, even in wartime, of discussing facts and the truth in the open. He openly attacked what he termed the "fine toothcombing" by King appointees of broadcast copy 48 hours before it went on the air.

Stating that a Liberal friend had told him that the Prime Minister desired to stay in power long enough to break the record of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the speaker reminded his listeners that that meant two years more. This election is not a case of one man's personal ambitions, but to consider ways of coolly, carefully, conducting the war to a successful finish, he said.

King Ministers were spreading propaganda through Quebec, not to promote unity but to secure a solid bloc of votes, Mr. Macaulay charged. "The eastern province is littered with pictures of persecution of their people by Ontario and the other provinces regarding conscription. Conscription is not the issue," he said, "while Mr. King's placarded "unity" is nothing but a mealticket, a Shibboleth, and a political headline to get into power."

The gagging of parliament; the censorship of radio and alleged barefaced attempt to manipulate the soldiers' vote will get the Liberal Government nowhere, he declared.

Predicting that over fifty percent of soldiers resident in Canada will lose their votes in the election, Mr. Macaulay charged the government with "giving the troops leave in a period which is spread over the date of election."

Spread Over Day of Voting

"They know that 90 percent of the soldiers will vote against them" he declared, "and they have given troops leave from March 16th to the 26th, which is spread over the day of voting."

"In all urban municipalities, soldiers are going to be deprived of their votes because they are not on the voters' lists but the soldiers voting time has been fixed at from March 18th to 23rd. Thus when the troops report back on the 26th, it will be too late," he said. Soldiers living in rural municipalities can be sworn in."

He scored Defence Minister Rogers as "one of the most unsatisfactory Canada ever had to allow his soldiers to be treated this way." The measure was passed by order-in-council behind closed doors, he said, adding that the soldiers' vote is too sacred a thing to be trifled with by order-in-council instead of out in the open.

Other speakers who addressed the meeting included the candidate for Hastings South, George H. Stokes; George A. Tustin; Mrs. Charles Payne; Gordon Blake and Dr. Harold Welsh, M.L.A.

Entertainment was provided by Jack Scott, Belleville elocutionist, whose numbers received well-merited acclaim. Chairman of the meeting was William House, Trenton.

LIBERAL GOVERNMENT CANDIDATE

WE are at war. Canada has pledged all her resources in defence of our freedom and the liberties which we enjoy.

At this time Canada is called upon to play its part, both at home and abroad. Conditions and circumstances are changing so rapidly that a Youthful Approach will help solve some of our National problems, both in peace and in war.

As a young man I solicit your support on March 26th. I pledge whatever abilities I may possess to the service of the Electors of Hastings South, and to make whatever contribution I can to Canada in both our war and post-war problems.

Hepburn Intends To Take no Part In Platform Activity During Campaign

Toronto, March 14 —(CP)— Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario announced Wednesday that he intends to take no part in platform activity during the Federal election campaign but reserves the right of criticism when he feels that "criticism is justified."

The Premier, who in the Legislature last month sponsored a motion of criticism of the Dominion Government's war effort as "so little", ended long speculation upon his part in the campaign during an interview.

"Whenever I feel that criticism is justified, I will criticize," he said. "I want the people of Canada to judge the Mackenzie King government's war record when the full fury of the conflict strikes us within the next few months. Let them judge the government a year from now.

"In my opinion there should not be an employable man in Canada on the relief rolls. They should be in the army or working in industry."

The Premier said he is "just as free to criticize the King government as my Ministers are to praise it."

"I don't expect to take part in any platform activity," he replied in answer to a question. "I intend to criticize where I feel criticism is due, but I don't intend to take either side. My one regret is that I campaigned so extensively in the Dominion election of 1935."

Mr. Hepburn campaigned actively on behalf of the Liberal party in the 1935 election.

KISS YOUR TIRED FEELING GOODBYE!

Pepless Many Suffer Low Blood Count—And Don't Know It.

The baffling thing about low blood count is that you can weigh about as much as you ever did — even look healthy and strong, yet — you can feel as if you had lead in your legs, dopey, tired and pepless.

Low blood count means you haven't got enough red blood corpuscles. It is their vital job to carry life-giving oxygen from your lungs throughout your body. And just as it takes oxygen to explode gasoline in your car and make the power to turn the wheels, so you must have plenty of oxygen to explode the energy in your body and give you going power.

Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today. They are world-famous for the help they give in increasing the number and strength of red corpuscles. Then with your blood count up, you'll feel like bounding up the stairs as if you were floating on air. Ask your druggist for Dr. Williams Pink Pills today.

AT THE BELLE

"OF MICE AND MEN"

No one who had read the book when it was first published, ever expected to see John Steinbeck's "Of Mice and Men" appear as a film. It was too daring a subject, treated with a stark reality that was unheard of in films. And yet a film version, true to the very spirit of Steinbeck's finest novel, is now on the Belle screen and proves once again that the screen is more powerful than the printed word.

"Powerful", describes "Of Mice and Men" accurately. Directed by Lewis Milestone with his genius of getting the most out of his material, "Of Mice and Men" brings with it a cast that is, without exception, unusually excellent. Burgess Meredith, Betty Field, Lon Chaney, Jr., Charles Bickford, Roman Bohmen are the top names in this cast.

"Of Mice and Men" was considered dangerous film material because it treats of an aspect of American Life that is known to few—the lives of the "bindle stiffs", or migratory ranch hands, who wander from ranch to ranch doing seasonal work, always hoping that some day they will have ranches of their own.

Specifically, the story is of an abiding friendship between two of these homeless, friendless men—Lennie, huge, hulking and not too bright, and George, small, alert, and the protector of his large companion. Their fellow ranch hands are a motley crew, cast with a consummate skill by Milestone. Charles Bickford as the understanding leader upon whose wisdom the others depend; Roman Bohnen as the one-armed oldster with a pathetic wish to live on his own, away from the ranch; these are just two of the many unusually excellent lesser performances in "Of Mice and Men."

But it is the three leading characters that make this picture one that will win applause throughout the country. Betty Field—a rising star who has only played schoolgirl roles in films until now—turns in a performance as the puzzled, unhappy wife of the ranch owner's son that is startling in its depth and intensity. Burgess Meredith, as eGorge, the protector of Lennie, has topped all his previous stage and screen characterizations with the realism he gives this role and Lon Chaney Jr., proves himself a true son of his gifted actor-father. Taken all in all, Hal Roach's "Of Mice and Men", is an experience that no film fan should miss.

RUSSO-FINN SETTLEMENT

The Russo-Finnish peace settlement will not soon cease to intrigue men's minds as these two nations start to set their damaged houses in order. The Finnish foreign minister says that a proferred Allied expeditionary force, fully equipped, would have been effective in saving Finland, that Britain and France offered them aid, but that Sweden and Norway blocked the only accessible way to Finland as he said they refused to permit the passage of Allied troops and that this refusal was made though Finland and the Western Democracies had requested the two Scandinavian countries to allow the passage of help to the Finns. The British Prime Minister has stated in the Commons that the British offered men as well as war materials if Finland would appeal for help but that Finland did not appeal. Vaino Tanner's statement is that 'the Finns had considered the situation and decided that the Scandinavian nations' refusal to allow the passage of the expeditionary force prevented Allied aid.

Italy's opinion of the Soviet seems clearly defined in Count Ciano's newspaper, which declares that the Soviet Russia was fearful of a crack-up or revolution if the war were not ended and that hence the peace agreement is not a Soviet victory. Another Italian newspaper calls it a compromise. Ciano's paper talks of "creakings" in Russia resembling those of the days before the Russan revolution. Other Italian papers however see enhancement of Russian military influence and status.

Prime Minister Chamberlain truly foretold how the fame and name of the Finnish defence would be recounted in chronicles of that country and live in the memory of all people. That much is assured. As was said in the British Commons there is great sympathy in Britain for Finland in the tragic end of the war. And there is also some solace in that these people who have been bearing a burden even greater than heroes could bear will now have peace with the bloody ordeal over. Finland has fought a heroic fight and will start on her program of recovery.

British newspapers place the blame on Hitlerism as the author of all the threats with which civilization is faced. They see that the end of Hitlerism is the only chance of a settled Europe. They say the peace in the north means a still greater determination of the Western Democracies to end the regime of Adolf Hitler.

FIFTEEN WEEKS OF NORTHERN WAR AND ITS COST

Russia is believed to have lost half a million men, half killed and half wounded. The great share of deaths is to be blamed on winter and the nature of the fighting that many of the wounded died of cold.

It was a high price for an adventure at the hands of even a vast nation for three and a half months of war.

Finns, though they knew the land and had their defences, suffered enough losses which are put at 15,000 killed and 35,000 wounded. For a small nation these were heavy as they included mostly young men.

Back of the losses in men which were so large, Russia has also suffered heavy loss economically. The Soviet Union, while a vast country of potential wealth, is so unorganized that it is not rich in the sense in which other nations are called rich. Her equipment was submitted to criticism all through the war except that of the air force which was used against cities though the Finns shot down hundreds of the Soviet warplanes according to reports.

WHEN THE BIRDS NORTHWARD FLY

Somewhere in many places along the line between here and the places of warmth where dwell our summer birds when the winds howl and snow blows and blockades the north, there is a stirring in the world, for the delightful creatures are planning their spring and summer vacation in the northern United States and Canada. In the northland millions of people wait the feathered songsters who make the air melodious in a way that not even a thousand orchestras can.

Some are on their way to the north from the tropics. The birds know nature for it is nature that provides them with food. The little fellows who are as wise as anything in nature hear the challenge of nature as the goddess of spring waves them to the northern states and Canada. Food is growing more abundant and the food routes are those they follow to the spring and summer territory. The sun urges them to move, and even in birdland there is a spirit of courting and birds' thoughts turn to the romance of the north. Rich as the southlands are, the north is their great romantic country where they raise their young. Up from faraway pampas of the Argentine, from the drenched forests of the Amazon, from Mexico's tablelands, from the rich Louisiana marshes and the the valleys of the sheltered states in the United States the little fliers by the millions start in the springtime.

Not long from now will come the robin, the most popular of birds because of his cheery voice, his good looks, his kindly interest in man and his noisiness, particularly in his first spring melodies and chants on arrival. But he is not the first of birds. The small birds of the highways and open fields, the horned larks beat him. Storm cannot hold these early comers who are generally here about the end of February. These birds are relatives of the European skylark. They are dull brown and inconspicuous and their faces are marked with black, white and yellow. There are tufts on the side of the head which makes it easy to identify them.

Crows have been very scarce this winter. Sometimes they are plentiful late in winter. Robins, bluebirds, blackbirds, kildeer, Canada goose and wild ducks take chances of snow and ice and work their way northward. Robins sometimes arrive before the last snowstorms. They will be due shortly.

A vast throng of birds will arrive in April when the soil is free of snow and ice. Others will have to wait until May has food for them such as insects. By that time the trees and air are full of feathered songsters and the symphonic music of the birds will be heard in the land.

There are very few persons who take no interest in birds. Who does not love to think of them in winter and wish for the days when they return with song? There is a human wistfulness about the movements of birds. We miss them when they are gone, we dread their parting. We anticipate their coming. The autumn seems dull without them.

Birds are not like men—they are free as the winds that blow—at least they live according to the seasons but man cannot do that. He has to stay in one abode, while the man's feathered companions can choose their residence. Fortunately when they come north the country has nice homes or locations for their homes, some in the grass, some in the mud, some in the trees, others in buildings, some in posts and so on, as any schoolboy can tell. Perhaps that schoolboy and the schoolgirl have the most interest in the birds for the birds teach them lessons in industry, in kindliness, and in the finer things of life. They make boys and girls thoughtful and careful of animal life.

Robot Guide for Telescope

Los Angeles, March 14—Palomar Mountain's 200-inch telescope will serve as the fifty-five foot long hand of a gigantic electric clock that unerringly pursues the stars instead of the hours.

A new invention, it was disclosed today, will guide the "eye" through the heavens. Its other applications will improve the accuracy of household electric clocks and provide industry with an unprecedented time standard for regulation of its machines.

This robot astronomer, consisting of a dancing wire that has much in common with a violin string, will move the million-pound telescope at a rate which will keep it set on any speeding star.

It is described as a "thinking robot" in that it automatically increases or decreases the huge tube's motion to compensate for variations in the bending of starlight by the atmosphere. Unless a telescope is moved continuously in step with the spinning of the earth an object soon passes out of its range.

Measuring only fifteen inches in height and weighing less than ten pounds, the pygmy robot astronomer was invented and developed by Henry E. Warren, head of the Warren-Telachron Company.

The first of these wire robots has proved so successful in controlling the movement of an 18-inch Schmidt telescope on Palomar that Dr. Fritz Zwicky of California Institute of Technology is able to leave the robot in full charge while a half-hour exposure of an exploding star is being made.

While Mr. Warren was developing his "dancing wire" machine he was visited by a friend, Edward J. Poitras, control engineer on the 200-inch telescope, and the latter's search for a mechanical device to drive the telescope was ended.

By joining a piece of nickel-steel wire to a piece of beryllium-copper wire it was possible to produce a 10-inch wire with a vibration frequency unaffected by large temperature changes.

A tiny magnet normally "kicks" the wire sixty times a second. But a powerful alnico magnet, hidden in a weight attached to the wire's lower end, acts as a magnetic "brain", which permits the robot to increase or decrease its vibrations by as little as one a second. Thus it is able to move the telescope as much faster or as slower as the robot itself decides is necessary to keep a star in view.

Like the hand of an electric clock, the 200-inch telescope will be geared to motors the speeds of which are synochrized with electric "kicks," kicks that are timed by a wire baton held by one of the world's most sagacious mechanical men—New York Times.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

MARCH 14TH, 1920.

Rome was not built in a day, neither will a Bigger and Better Belleville be built in a day or a year. It is better to build slowly than to build unwisely and too speedily.

Mr. Frank White, who has been connected with the Ontario School for the Deaf for some time, has been selected by the Police Commissioners to become a member of the Belleville Police Force and he will be sworn in for duty shortly. Mr. White was a member of the Metropolitan Police Force in London, England, for four years and he served overseas during the Great War for three years. The salary attached to this appointment is $1,000 per year.

The thirty-eighth anniversary of the founding of the City Mission will be observed on the evening of March 18th.

30 YEARS AGO

The Belleville Kilties Band played in Greenock, Scotland, on March 1st, and was highly commended by the press in that city.

The average Bellevillian is in favor of having civic work properly done and paying a decent wage in return. A proposition which the City Council will handle with care is that looking to the amalgamation of certain civic offices It is proposed that the duties of City Engineer, Assessor, Building Inspector and Manager of the Waterworks be performed by one man and that he be paid a gross yearly salary of $1,000. With all due respect to the gentleman who were afflicted with this more or less brilliant idea, it is rank nonsense to expect the duties of the four offices to be properly performed by any one man—much less to expect them to be performed for $1,000 per year. Unless the council is prepared to see civic work botched and bungled, it should not expect men to perform impossible tasks.

40 YEARS AGO

Mr. J. A. Davis, who has been in the service of the G.T.R. here for some time, will leave shortly for Chicago where he has accepted a good positon with a railway running out of that city.

Blow the whistles, Rosmore is relieved — the new postmaster takes office tomorrow.

A number from the city and district assembled at the residence of Mr. T. Farnham at Cannifton last evening and gave that gentleman and his wife a genuine surprise. A most enjoyable evening was passed.

Whiskers

Peter the Great of Russia got rid of beards, or a lot of them, in Russia by imposing a tax on them. He decreed that beards were a luxury and everybody above the lowest class had to pay 100 rubles for the privilege. Clerks were stationed at the gates of every town to collect the beard tax. Ancient Turks thought so much of their beards that slaves had to shave in order to show their degradation.

Charles XII had in his army a heavy bearded soldier with whiskers a yard and a half long (so history says). It was not until the battle of Pultowa in 1724 that it was discovered the soldier was a bearded woman. She was taken prisoner and was taken to the czar. —Detroit Free Press.

Darrow's Spirit Fails to Appear

Chicago, March 14—(AP)—Claude Noble, a magician, stood on a bridge in Jackson Park, held out a Hymn book, and called upon the spirit of Clarence Darrow to manifest itself if it could.

Hopefully, he stood in silence for a full minute. Then he turned to the newspapermen and said: "No manifestation".

It's been the same story for more than 75 years.

Noble, who came from his home in Detroit, to conduct the experiment yesterday, said magicians had been trying to get a glimpse into the Great Beyond since the days of Conte.

Herman the Great tried, and then Harry Keller, Houdini and Howard Thurston. Now its Noble's turn, and when he's dead, he said, Blackstone would carry on, or Dante, in Europe.

There are always arrangements made beforehand. In the case of Darrow, the great criminal lawyer and agnostic, they were agreed upon at a meeting in a Detroit Hotel three years ago.

"I was there and so was Howard Thurston," Noble said. "Thurston believed in spiritualism, but Mr. Darrow did not. But Mr. Darrow agreed to try to manifest his spirit if I would give him the opportunity".

Just a year ago yesterday, on the first anniversary of Darrow's death, Noble conducted his experiment in the hotel room where the pact was made. This year he chose the bridge over the lagoon into which Darrow's ashes were strewn.

Noble asked his small group of witnesses to bow their heads in memory of Mr. Darrow. Then he said the Lord's Prayer and called out:—

"Clarence Darrow, I am here in fulfillment of the pact that we made with each other. If you can manifest your spirit to me, do it now".

Darrow had promised to try to agitate the book so that it would fall from Noble's hand. The magician trembled, but nothing stirred the book, not even the wind.

WINDSOR WOMAN HURT IN COLLISION

Mrs. Rose Thomas Sustains Cut Forehead, Chest Injuries and Shock

Trenton, March 14 (Special)—Two cars were damaged and Mrs. Rose Thomas of Windsor suffered a cut forehead, slight chest injuries and shock as two motors collided at the corner of Dufferin and Dundas Streets in this town last evening. Mrs. Thomas was riding in an auto being driven by Mr. Floyd Courtney of Windsor when another auto driven by Mr. Gordon Vardy in the opposite direction, allegedly cut directly in front with Courtney being given no opportunity to avoid the collision. Mrs. Thomas was taken to the home of Mr. Thomas Kain, where her injuries were treated by Dr. Jack Farley of Trenton. Mr. Vardy was charged with reckless driving but was later released on bail. Both cars were badly damaged.

They Know Not Fear

William Richard Taylor. Remember that name.

He was captain of a Glasgow collier the Yewdale. Nazi 'planes attacked her.

They dropped bombs. They swept the decks with machine-gun fire.

Captain Taylor did not budge from the wheel, even when he had been hit by a bullet.

He brought his ship into harbor, and as they went to bring him ashore he died.

How shall we honor such men? Far too many of us still take for granted their heroic service to the nation, even though the coming of the bomber has immeasurably increased the perils of their work.—London Daily Herald.

SPRING BY A PESSIMIST

The Spring of which the poets sing
Is such a most elusive theme,
And really does not mean a thing
Unless it's on the map.
The first fine day, you're sure its here,
But don't shed any clothes,
For up there comes a howling blast,
And long before the blow has passed,
Why Spring is off again.

For one fine day, there's five of rain
And then "Old Sol" peeps out again.
But just when you think you feel his ray
Another blizzard is on the way,
And Springs sneaks off again.

When next he tries to ride the map,
He drops the "Flu" right in your lap,
And then with dizzy, aching head,
You take his gifts and go to bed;
And almost wish that you were dead,
For surest thing, this is the Spring.

When you're run the gamut of the sneeze,
You start to cough and then to sneeze,
And try to dodge the slightest breeze.
Let's try forget this ticklish thing,
They call the vibrant, glorious Spring.

Now why make light of such a theme,
I wonder one can be so mean;
But truth will out, at any rate,
And I feel sure I'll get the gate.
That I should dare to be the one,
To villify the poet's song.
Perchance I too may be all wrong,
About sneezy, breezy, wheezy, Spring.
(With apologies to Poet Nana.)

Woman's Missionary Society Of Belleville Presbyterial Holds Fifteenth Annual Meeting

The fifteenth annual meeting of the Belleville Presbyterial of the Woman's Missionary Society of the United Church of Canada, convened in Holloway Street United Church, Belleville, on Wednesday and Thursday, March 13th and 14th., with delegates in attendance from the five sections namely Prince Edward, Madoc, Napanee North, Napanee South, and Belleville.

The church was resplendent with lovely bouquets of Spring blooms and the tables in the basement were beautifully decorated in St. Patrick's Day favours.

A meeting of the executive was held in the forenoon when the several items of business were discussed. Mrs. F. L. Hooper, the president, conducted an impressive devotional period based on the sayings of Jesus, with each member taking part in the service.

The convention proper convened at 2.10 p.m. with a large attendance of interested workers. The service opened with the convention hymn and the theme prayer, "Stir us, O stir us, Lord we care not how, but stir our hearts in passion for the world".

On the platform were seated Mrs. F. L. Hooper, president of the Belleville Presbyterial, who gave a brief address urging the women to a greater achievement throughout the coming year. Mrs. Spafford, vice president of Belleville section and she being the convener of committees, made the following announcements.

Resolutions and nominations—
Mrs. W. S. Gordon, Tweed; Mrs. Truscott, Tamworth; Mrs. W. A. Ashley, Napanee; Mrs. Scott, Picton; Mrs. E. L. Fraser Trenton.

Courtesy—
Mrs. Morrison, Tweed; Mrs Fred Westover, Aiken's; Mrs. Haggerty, Tamworth.

Gives Devotional Talk

Mrs. S. O. Gay, an ex-president of the Belleville Presbyterial gave a most impressive Devotional talk based on the theme "Choose Ye", as found in the Book of Joshua.

Mrs. Gay said as time goes on man has fallen far short of the creature which God created in the beginning. Because of this power of choosing which is left to each individual, many of God's plans have been frustrated because folks have not done as Joshua "as for me and my house we will serve the Lord".

Have we as missionary women hindered our Saviour's work. In this day when our soldiers' pledge their loyalty to their country surely our Eternal King has a right to expect whole-hearted service, always remembering that willing discipleship is loyalty and God must do the guiding as he has a definite purpose for each one of our lives and although the way of Jesus is not easy still Jesus walked that path triumphantly.

Mrs. E. K. Hubble spoke re the publishing of the reports of this convention and referred to the table of press scrap books on display.

Mrs. H. D. Williams had a wonderful display of literature and in her brief address she told of the outstanding leaflets, books on India, China and other countries, which were for sale with a special book entitled "Should Missions go on" by Basil Matthews and which is very appropriate in these trying days.

Mr. William Connor presided at the organ throughout the session.

Miss Lazelle Brown and Mrs. H. B. Fetterly were in charge of the registration.

The Holloway Street Circle served an appetizing luncheon on Wednesday while the supper that evening and the dinner on Thursday were in charge of the W.M.S. of the church.

Year's Work Explained

"The story of the Year" was given by the Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. M. E. Knox, who reported 84 auxiliaries, 2 affiliated societies with a total membership of 2,138.

There are 13 Mission Circles, 21 C.G.I.T. groups, 60 Mission Bands and 31 Baby Bands.

The challenge to increase membership is ever before members, and the decrease in membership in some societies is a major problem stated Mrs. Knox.

In the report forms returned most secretaries said the worship services were characterized by reverence and sincerity and were considered the most helpful part of the service.

Mrs. Knox felt the report forms as used for the first time this year, had been successful when properly filled out.

Mission Band

Mrs. A. McCreary as secretary of Mission Bands, felt encouraged in reporting seven new Mission Bands with an increase in membership and givings. With a total membership of 1,090 members $931.19 had been raised during the year.

The following Bands received their recognition certificates and they were presented by Mrs. McCreary—Holloway Street, Belleville; Bethel, (Plainfield); Cherry Valley; Demorestville; Elmbrook; Melville; Queensboro.

Eldorado, Madoc, Mt. Pleasant, (Rawdon); Napanee, Stirling, Switserville and Union bands had the green seals affixed to their certificates.

In closing, Mrs. McCreary appealed for the co-operation of the auxiliary members in assisting the children through Band work.

Continuation of Afternoon Service

The report of Christian Stewardship and Finance was given by the Secretary, Mrs. E. Osborne, who felt encouraged despite the decrease in givings, as better reports had come in to her department. The use of monthly envelopes had been of great value in most auxiliaries, she said. Active finance committees, personal canvassing, well prepared programs, had helped in increasing funds for the work. Some societies reported the younger women showing more interest.

"World Missions and World Peace", were discussed in an inspiring address delivered yesterday afternoon by Miss Winnifred Thomas, General Secretary, Toronto, who left with her hearers a message of spirituality and encouragement.

Mrs. F. L. Hooper, president, introduced the guest speaker and paid heartfelt tribute to her untiring efforts, to her sympathetic understanding and to her qualities of mind and heart that have so especially fitted her for the office she holds.

In opening her address, Miss Thomas stressed particularly that the women of the Missionary Society should not lessen their efforts for the extension of God's Kingdom at this time of war when so many calls of a patriotic nature were being made on the women of Canada. While the war is a grim necessity, and all should assist war work, nevertheless it should not be done to the disadvantage of missionary work. The Christian Church is the chief agency in bringing about Christ's Kingdom of truth, justice, brotherhood and love, in the world. It would be a tragedy if at such a time, the church of Jesus Christ became weakened.

Continue Efforts

"We of the Woman's Missionary Society," she said, "are committed to the extension and growth of Christ's Kingdom. We must not endanger it by the temptation of dropping some of our church work for patriotic duties. Rather let us sacrifice some other time for war work and do our legitimate share without neglecting the cause to which we are dedicated. There are thousands of women who will knit and sew; there are very few, even among churchwomen, who take the time to further the 'ongoing' of Christ. Even from a patriotic point of view the kind of work we are doing is needed by our country and our God. So let us make our war work an extra sacrifice, and not at the expense of this essential work of the church."

Miss Thomas discussed another danger that war has brought....... that in the face of the conditions today of tragedy, suffering, the failure of cherished causes, women are apt to lose faith. One of the greatest tests comes to a Christian at a time like this when she cannot understand or comprehend the tragedy and suffering of the world.

Encouraging Era

"In spite of this, in the realm of world missions," she said, "we are living in one of the most eventful periods in the history of the church. Looking back one hundred years over the missionary enterprises of the Christian Church one realizes what is being achieved and accomplished, not only for missions, but as the foundation of world peace."

For the first time, the Christian Church is established in every country in the world; it is a living, vital church and the great conferences of Oxford, Edinburgh, Madras and Amsterdam bringing together representatives of seventy countries, showed that Christ had won to Himself men and women of every race, nation and kind on the face of the globe. Christianity is proving itself today universal in its meeting of human needs.

Transformed Lives

In our day there is seen in world missions the amazing transformation in lives made by Jesus Christ not only in this country but in the foreign fields. In India it is the transformed lives of the lowly "untouchables", that is impressing the multitudes and winning the middle classes. China has been an example to the world as the Christians have put into practice the virtue of forgiving their enemies and have in their hearts no bitterness for the Japanese. Thus the Christian spirit is making its contribution toward world peace.

Through world missions a fellowship is built up that even war cannot destroy. Races usually antagonistic are drawn together by a common loyalty to Christ and this fellowship will hold.

If in one hundred years of missionary endeavour, as have just passed, such great accomplishments have been recorded, it is not unreasonable to suppose that concentrated efforts for world peace, a project on which a few have been engaged for about ten years, can have similiar success and that we can take faith, commit ourselves to the cause which will gather momentum and go on. God purposed world evangelism and world peace. Human endeavours will be linked with His wishes and cannot fail.

Memorial Service

An impressive Memorial Service was conducted by the Evening Auxiliary of King Street Church, Trenton, as the names of the deceased members of each section were read, Mrs. Nostrand Sprague placed a red carnation on a cross of evergreen and read extracts from a suitable poem. The hymn "Breathe on Me Breath of God" was sung, after which Mrs. Fred Burrows led in prayer. The following were the names of the deceased:

Supper Meeting

At the supper meeting held Wednesday evening Rev. R. E. Newman, pastor of the church, was master of ceremonies and proposed the toast to "The King," followed by the National Anthem.

Mrs. Newman brought greetings to the gathering on behalf of the ladies of the three United Churches who were entertaining the delegation. She hoped that all in attendance at the sessions would catch a fresh vision of the Cross at this Easter season and so new life would be radiated to the various auxiliaries.

Alderman Rollins represented His Worship Mayor Thompson and extended the keys of the city.

Greetings from sister societies were given as follows:

Prince Edward County Branch Of Red Cross Very Active

Picton — Prince Edward County branch of the Red Cross continues to ship large bales of articles to headquarters in Toronto. Representing the work of the past three weeks, the following articles were shipped recently: 80 dozen pairs of socks, 4 scarves, 2 sweaters, 11 dozen wristlets, 33 dozen T-binders, 4 dozen slings, 12 dozen abdominal binders, 1 dozen ice bag covers, 3 dozen face masks, 8 dozen handkerchiefs, 3 dozen pyjamas, 6 hospital gowns, 24 dozen hot water bottle covers, 2 dozen pneumonia jackets, 6 pairs bed socks, 13 quilts, a quantity of children's clothing, the latter two lots being used for refugees.

A group of women who are doing very fine work with little publicity but finding satisfaction in good work well done, is the Ladies Auxiliary of Post 78, Canadian Legion.

This live group, composed mainly of wives of veterans of the last war, last week completed a quantity of children's clothing to round out a bale being sent through the Red Cross for distribution to children of Polish refugees. The Red Cross group of Picton Collegiate and Vocational Institute has been working on the same project and the Auxiliary aided them in completing the bale.

The Auxiliary has also completed eleven pairs of flannelette pyjamas and these are being sent to members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment at Quebec.

Money has been raised by holding social evenings and card parties, proceeds going to buy wool and other materials. At the party Thursday night there was a large attendance and of interest was the drawing of the lucky ticket for a quilt made by the Auxiliary. The lucky ticket, drawn by Phil Dodds, was held by Mrs. Robert Thompson, Picton.

In euchre, prizes went to Mrs. Leta McGiffen and Jas. Livingstone, high, and Mrs. W. McWilliams and John Harrison. Refreshments were served and dancing followed. These weekly parties are attracting increasing crowds.

The Auxiliary also furnished refreshments recently at the Armouries, has remembered soldiers with cigarettes, co-operated with the Legion in making a recreation centre available and holding social evenings for the men.

The Phi-Del-a-Tee club held a social evening in the United Church S.S. Tuesday night. Phil Dodds had charge of a St. Patrick's program.

Active at Eighty

One of the most active workers for the Red Cross is Mrs. James Morton whose clicking needles have turned out a nice lot of socks. Two pairs which she sent into headquarters here yesterday were unusual in that the wool from which they were made was carded, spun and dyed by her. Mrs. Morton is over eighty years of age.

Farming under difficulties is very realistically demonstrated by Warden George E. Thompson these days, as it has fallen to his lot to act as nurse-maid for a set of triplet lambs recently born on his farm near Springbrook. With the mother of the lambs unable to supply enough nourishment for her offspring, feeding time sees Mr. Thompson busily engaged at the barn preparing bottles of milk with nipples attached from which the hungry lambs quickly appease their appetites.

TONY

— BY ELIZABETH VERNON —

Alan mounted the stairs. He looked at the scrawled, dirty walls, listened to the harsh noises and smelt the odors that rose from below. His face darkened a little.

He reached the attic landing. There was only one door. It stood ajar. He knocked. There was no answer.

He entered the room. It was small and bare, tidy and clean. To all appearances it was empty. He never knew on what impulse he approached the bed and looked under it but that impulse was rewarded. Something crouched, as he had once seen Tony crouch, in the dark corner.

He smiled. "Come out here, Shrimp," he said.

There was a scrambling. Quickly Jacky obeyed. She emerged and hurled herself at him. "Oh, Alan I am glad to see you!"

He stooped to be half throttled by her embrace. Tony's little sister. He smiled at her welcome of him. To see her was, somehow, an earnest of future happiness.

"We don't have visitors," she explained. "So, when I heard your footstep I thought you were the police."

"Quite," Alan replied. "What could be more natural?"

"You needn't smile." There was pride in Jacky's tone. "The police did come after us. But they didn't catch us."

"No. You and Tony seem to have been brilliant in your choice of a fade-out."

"Won't you sit down!" said his hostess.

Alan seated himself on the bed.

"Where is Tony?" Jacky asked.

"At Matthew Lake's," Alan replied shortly.

"Will she be pleased to see you?" Jacky asked.

"Probably not—as she has chosen to run away from me."

"Jacky looked up into his face. You sound angry." She put a suddenly timid little paw on his arm. "Are you?"

"Very, Jacky." He smiled, but there could be no doubt of the truth of that reply.

She sighed, gazing down at her feet, kicking her legs to and fro. "I said you would be. But Tony said no. And she said, anyway, she wouldn't ever see you again, so it didn't matter."

"Well, that's where she made a mistake."

"Are you sure it's a mistake, Alan?" Jacky frowned up at him. "Tony said there was a letter from you, saying you didn't want to marry her."

"A letter?" Alan rose. For a long moment he stood, staring down at Tony's little sister. "I think I begin to understand," he said at last.

"Would it be wrong to show it to you?" Jacky asked. "I do know where Tony keeps it. Sometimes she reads it, if she thinks I'm asleep. Then she's very unhappy."

"You had better let me see it, Jacky. If I wrote it, it's my property."

Jacky rose. He watched her open the drawer in the table. She pulled out a folded paper. Alan took it. Carefully, he read the letter. Then he put it in his notecase. "Thank you, Jacky," he said.

"Please, Alan," Jacky's lip trembled. "Don't look so angry."

He laid a very gentle hand on her shoulder. "It's all right, Shrimp."

"Will I come and live with you, the way you promised?" she whispered, as he bent to kiss her goodbye.

"Yes."

"Oh, lovely! Then I won't worry any more."

"No, Jacky." Gently, he took her shoulders and looked down into the friendly little face. "It's best to trust the people that you love."

x x x

"Well, Tony," Matthew Lake took her empty coffee cup, "as your future employer has arrived and is waiting in my study, it is time you went to be interviewed."

"Yes, Matt." Obediently she rose.

"Come along, Tony," he said, and smiled to himself—a strange smile.

He held the door open. He gazed down at that glossy little head. Their footsteps sounded loud on the marble-flagged floor. They approached the door at the end of the hall. Tony began to falter.

"My—my spelling isn't very good," she said. "Will he mind?"

"No."

Something in the curtness of that reply, something in Matthew Lake's face as she glanced up, struck her. She stopped, so suddenly that he nearly fell over her.

She faced him. "Matt, who is it?" Her voice all at once was breathless, as if she had been running.

"What?"

"It's—Alan?"

"Yes, Tony."

For one second the color had flamed in her face. Now she was very white. "I won't see him! I won't see him! I hate him!" Wildly, she glanced at the distant front door. "Matt, let me pass!" She would have run down the long hall.

"Listen, Tony."

"No."

A door opened. A quiet voice said, "All right, Matt; I'll deal with this. "A strong hand took Tony by the arm and faced her round. She did not see Matthew Lake turn on his heel and walk away, without one backward glance, into the shadows of the hall. Firmly she was propelled into the study. The door closed behind her.

Alan looked at her in silence. She had gone to the other end of the room—as far from him as she could get.

"Well, Tony?" he asked. "What excuse have you for this past month?"

"I don't need an excuse. I won't speak to you."

"Oh, yes, you will. Tony, come here."

She made no reply. In a flash, she was at the door. But he was there as soon. He turned the key in the lock. He crossed the room to where she wavered.

"When you are my wife, Tony, you will have to behave better than this."

"Your wife?" With wide eyes, like jewels, she gazed at him. "I wouldn't marry you if you were the last man on earth!" But her courage failed her a little.

Very slowly she came out from behind the table.

"That's better. Now, Tony, my poor little goose, so brave and so silly, did you really think I wrote that letter to your mother?"

"I saw it." Her voice was sullen. In her eyes were shame and anger and—love.

"What you saw was a very clumsy forgery," he told her.

There was a long silence. She spoke at last. Her voice now was strangely different—weak, halting, timid as a bird's.

"Then—then you didn't?—" But that voice failed. She gazed round as if for support. She found it. Alan lifted her in his arms. He carried her to a chair and sat down. "Didn't you write it?" The words came at last.

"No, Tony." In love and tenderness he smiled down at the slight form in his arms. But her head was bent. She could not see his face.

"Then—you're very angry at me, Alan?" she whispered.

"Don't you deserve that I should be?"

"Yes," she murmured. "Because I didn't trust you. And because I was angry at you. And I was rude." She gave him one fleeting, frightened glance. She made a quick movement to hold his hands, as if that weak grasp could stay any purpose of his. "But, Alan, I have been punished; truly I have—" She pressed his hand against her heart as if she might hope to make him feel the pain that had been there. "You don't know—" She raised her eyes to his. Whatever he might think or say or do—that, said her timid glance, would be right; for was she not his own?

"My little sweet." He bent his head.

Quiet, in his arms, she drew a long breath. And, he thought, on that sigh she slipped into her haven. Yes, after many storms, a dreary voyage, many battles; safe at last in harbor.

Libby's Deep Browned?

Cooked the NEW Way!

Something NEW in BEANS!

The appetizing, rich-brown colour, finer mealy texture, and tempting flavour of LIBBY'S DEEP BROWNED BEANS are made possible by a new patented process of cooking—exclusive to LIBBY'S. This new cooking method INDIVIDUALLY bakes each bean to a deep brown colour—penetrates right through to the centre, achieving a uniform degree of tenderness and deliciously-mealy richness. There isn't a "hard" or "mushy" bean, and LIBBY'S new cooking method brings out to the full the rich, zestful flavour. LIBBY'S DEEP BROWNED BEANS are done just the way you would want to do them yourself, and LIBBY'S save you the long, hot hours in the kitchen necessary to proper bean cooking. LIBBY'S confidently say to you: "Try LIBBY'S DEEP BROWNED BEANS—and if you don't think they're the best you've tasted, LIBBY'S will pay you DOUBLE YOUR MONEY BACK!"

We suggest you try

VIIPURI OCCUPIED BY RUSSIA BEFORE FIGHTING ENDED

Country in Happy Mood After Red Army's Final Triumph Against Finland

ANOTHER BULWARK

Moscow, March 14—(AP)—Jubilant Russia announced today the Red army's final triumph against Finland — occupation of Viipuri, which the Treaty of Peace already had made Russian.

The besieged city apparently was the last active sector of the 105-day war. An army communique said the Russians occupied it yesterday, five hours before "hostilities ended on all sectors of the front in conformity with the peace treaty."

Tass, Soviet News Agency, reported crowded mass meetings throughout Russia to acclaim the peace which the Soviet Union scored as a gain strategically and materially.

An editorial in the government newspaper Izvestia declared that the changes in the Finnish-Russian border were reasonable and just.

"The treaty," it added, "revealed that neither during diplomatic negotiations nor after a military success does the U.S.S.R. present to even its smallest neighbors a demand incompatible with their national dignity or independence." The newspaper asserted that Scandinavian countries were relieved because peace had dissolved any direct threat to their independence or of their being involved in war.

Important Economic Corridor

Aside from Russia's territorial gains, it was pointed out that the U.S.S.R. may have won her most important economic corridor to Scandinavia and the Atlantic through extensive transit rights across the Petsamo district to Norway and the agreement to connect the Murmansk railroad with Sweden.

Copper mines go to Russia, it was pointed out, with the territory ceded her near Lake Ladoga and she is expected now to make a successful bid for part of the exports of the nickel mines in the Petsamo area which remain Finnish. They were being developed by the International Nickel Company, a Canadian concern.

Strategically, the border has been pushed from 20 to 90 miles from Leningrad and from 40 to 75 miles from the Murmansk railroad.

Also, the new peace makes Finland another bulwark in the diplomatic, commercial and military safeguards with which Russia has been surrounding herself. Finnish soil was added to that of western Poland within the expanding Soviet frontier and that of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania as Russian military bases.

All this, as well as the new Russian-German accord and commercial agreements with Bulgaria and Iran, has been engineered or forced in little more than six months.

GOVERNMENT WINS SEAT

London, March 14—(CP)—J. J. C. Henderson, National Conservative candidate who had Prime Minister Chamberlain's backing, won a Parliament seat today in a Leeds by-election.

Henderson defeated Sydney Allen, British Union candidate, by a vote of 23,882 to 722.

The seat was vacated by Sir John Birchall, Conservative, who in 1935 polled 25,915 votes against 14,060 for A. J. Dobbs, Labor.

JAPAN BELIEVES REPORTS GROUNDLESS

Tokyo, March 14.— (AP)—The Japanese War Office today disclaimed knowledge of a recurrence of fighting between Japanese and Russian troops on the Manchoukuo—outer Mongolian border, saying it believed such reports were groundless.

Unconfirmed Manchoukuoan advices reaching Shanghai said Soviet troops had advanced five miles and were moving up men and equipment on the Trans-Siberian railway.

Last summer's outer Mongolian border fighting was halted by an Armistice Sept. 16.

ALLEGED ASSASSIN REMANDED WEEK

from the hall when he fired four pistol shots. The former Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab died almost immediately from a wound in the chest.

One bullet grazed Lord Zetland, Secretary of State for India. Others struck the arms of Sir Louis Dane and Lord Lamington, both former British administrators of Indian provinces.

O'Dwyer was Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab when Brigadier General R. E. H. Dyers' troops on April 13, 1919, fired into a mob at Amritsas, killing 400 persons. O'Dwyer always defended Dyers' order.

O'Dwyer once called Gandhi "the biggest imposter that ever fooled the credulity of a people or frightened a cowardly government."

Butter Holds Firm In Quiet Trading

Toronto, March 14 — Although the trading pace slackened, butter prices held firm at the previous day's advance during yesterday's session of the Toronto open produce market. Eggs continued to move at former levels.

Buying interest waned on the butter market, but Ontario offerings remained light and there supplies cleared at unchanged prices. Western butter sold throughout the day at 28½c per pound. Prints to the retail trade were adjusted more in line with prices of solids, top grades selling at 29¼c to 29¾c per pound. Buyers offered the firmer price of 28c for No. 1 grade churning cream, on truck, country points.

Demand on the egg market was concentrated on grades A-medium and pullets, while trading in A-large was slow. Fresh receipts arrived in ample volume to satisfy local needs. Prices in both sections maintained previous levels, with Government inspected lots of graded eggs commanding a ½c per dozen premium.

McAllen, Tex., March 14—(AP)—Twenty-three fruit pickers, mostly of Mexican extraction, were killed today in their truck which was struck at a grade crossing by a Missouri-Pacific passenger train. Seventeen other pickers were injured.

It was the most disastrous wreck in Texas history.

The train carried the vehicle for about 600 yards. Bodies were scattered along the tracks.

GOV'T CARRIES CAMPAIGN

Denying Mr. King's charge that he had "scuttled the Conservative party," Dr. Manion said in Kingston, Ont., that he is "leading the Conservative party along the best lines — placing our country first and our party second, serving the nation and the empire, rising in times of crisis above petty political ambition."

Unified and Unashamed

The Conservative party will emerge "after this period of national and international crisis, as it did after 1867 and 1917, unified and unashamed."

He recalled that the National Government plan had been endorsed by a caucus of Conservative members of parliament. Conservative leads in all provinces, with one exception, and Conservative Associations across Canada.

Premier Hepburn somewhat clarified his attitude towards the election when he said in Toronto he intends to take no part in platform activities during the campaign but reserves the right to criticism when he fels that "criticism is justified."

He said he is "just as free to criticize the King government as my ministers are to praise it" and added that he "doesn't intend to take either side."

Merely Election Cry is Claim

The words "National Government" are "merely an election cry—they are applied to a party which is not national and has little chance of forming a government," Justice Minister Lapointe said at Quebec, in a 15-minute election address over the national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Mr. Lapointe said there was "nothing to justify" Conservative leader Manion's use of the word "national."

"His so-called party is an attempt to unite the remnants of the Conservative party, already wrecked by dissension, with the odds and ends of no parties at all.

"He would amalgamate them for one purpose only—to march into office upon a platform of reckless and impossible promises.

"We have asked Dr. Manion to say who his supporters and supporting parties will be. We have asked him to give us the names of his brain trust. Perhaps he has delegated the selection of his cabinet to his supporter Colonel Drew (Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative Leader)."

"Col. Drew is the leader of the Provincial Opposition," said Mr. Lapointe. "He has not shown sufficient faith in Dr. Manion's cause to offer himself as a candidate. Is he the cabinet maker of the shadow government?"

Lapointe Asks Question

He asked if "Col. Drew's Cabinet" would include "Mr. Hepburn (Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario) who succeeds in devoting the time that might profitably be employed to the affairs of Ontario, to providing the material for the comfort and amusement of German broadcasting stations."

"Will the shadow cabinet of the shadow government include Mr. Herridge, leader of the New Democracy party) who not long ago said some very unkind things at the National Conservative Convention?

"Perhaps Dr. Manion will tell us. We can imagine the national character, the harmony and unity of purpose of such a cabinet."

Dr. Manion should say why he had lost faith in the old Conservative party. "That party has played a great historic part in the history of Canada. It once had political principles.

Department Defended

"Perhaps you will ask yourselves whether a man who is unable to maintain unity of a party, who is prepared as an election trick, to throw away the substance of Conservatism for the shadow of a National Government, is fit to govern this country."

The record of the Federal Department of Transport was defended at Port Arthur in a broadcast address by Transport Minister Howe.

Mr. Howe predicted the return to power of the present government but said that if the result of the voting is otherwise, he will seek an opportunity to work as a dollar-year man in any capacity which might be assigned to him in an effort to aid Canada's war effort.

Canada's errors in the first Great War were not rectified until a National Government came into power, Dr. Herbert A. Bruce, National Government candidate for Toronto-Parkdale, said at Toronto.

During the last war when he was Inspector-General of Canadian Medical Services overseas, Dr. Bruce said he recommended complete reorganization of the Canadian Medical Services "but partisan influences at once intervened and the government found itself handicapped.

"It was my experience during the period in question which helped to create my strong convictions in favor of National Government in time of war."

Sold Out Farmers is Charge

The Mackenzie King government will go down in history as the government that "sold out" the farmers, Col. T. L. Kennedy, former Ontario Minister of Agriculture, said at Murillo, 15 miles west of Fort William.

"Thousands of barrels of the best quality apples were allowed to rot last year because government men—professional politicians who had never been farmers—sold out the farmers.

"They enforced a ruling that only apples which met export grading could be sold. This meant that apples with a keeping quality of less than four months, which includes the best eating apples produced in Ontario, went to waste.

"The Bacon Board formed in Ontario did not have a farmer in its membership, yet the processors were represented."

The King administration had enforced "conscription of every hog in the country" by establishing arbitrary prices but feed was not conscripted. The price of feed had advanced 30 per cent since the hog price was established.

Have Free Market

"Dr. Manion's policy is not to conscript men, hogs or anything, but to give everyone the advantage of a free market," Col. Kennedy said.

At Ingersoll Defence Minister Rogers traced the Dominion Government's steps in the war and declared that any business man who "multiplied his business by 10" could not expect the expansion to take place without trouble.

"We caught up with the equipment problem in a sound and sensible way," he said. "We have reached the point where labor and industry are organized so that no problem should occur in the future."

The Defence Minister said he wished to ask Conservative leader Manion three questions.

"I would ask him first: 'Was Great Britain prepared in the sense that he says we ought to have been prepared?' and the answer is 'No.'

Only Two Deficiencies

"I would ask him: 'Was the Conservative party in 1914 prepared in that sense of the word?' And the answer is 'no' beyond all contradiction.

"I would ask him: 'Did the government of which he was a member in 1930 to 1935 make an effort to attain preparedness of that kind?'"

There are 100 items in a soldier's personal equipment, Mr. Rogers said, and in only two items was there a deficiency when the First Division of the Canadian Active Service Force went overseas. Those were web equipment and flannel shirts.

The reason that web equipment was not provided, he said, was that the webbing first offered to the army was not up to standard. The deficiency in flannel shirts occurred because flannel was not available in sufficient quantities.

M. J. Coldwell, National Chairman of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, reiterated at a Federal election campaign meeting at Windsor his party's "unalterable opposition" to conscription and advocated immediate steps to guarantee a proper living to members of Canada's fighting forces after the war.

Open to Interpretation

Last autumn he had been under the impression that there would be no conscription because only the New Democracy group favored it, Mr. Coldwell said. But careful reading of statements made by Prime Minister Mackenzie King in the House of Commons and one by Hon. Ian Mackenzie, former Defence Minister, in the House Sept. 12 had left the matter open to several interpretations.

At that time Mr. Mackenzie had declared that section 64 of the Militia Act was explicit, giving the government the right to send men called up under the Act anywhere in Canada or beyond the Dominion's boundaries for the defence of the country .

While the C. C. F. had tried to have this section amended, the government was not willing and the government which would take office after the election would have that power still.

Unalterably Opposed

"The C.C.F. is unalterably opposed to the conscription of manpower in Canada for service beyond the seas," he declared.

Mr. Coldwell said he was confident any government would do its utmost to bring the war to a successful conclusion. The post-war period had to be faced, however, and while the other parties were throwing abuse at one another the C.C.F. was being recognized generally as the only party offering a constructive program.

Premier Thane Campbell of Prince Edward Island said at Windsor that the Canadian people would cling to the guidance of the Liberal party in preference to the "shadowy and unknown" national government offered by Dr. Manion.

Leopold Macaulay, Conservative member of the Ontario legislature told a Napanee, Ont., meeting the presumption of Mr. King that the Liberal party alone could unite parliament in the war effort was "a falsehood and an insult."

Trade Minister Euler spoke at Welland and Labor Minister McLarty at St. Catharines.

FINNS TO DISCUSS DEFENCE ALLIANCE

Look Forward to Discussions

Nevertheless, with the great Mannerheim line and most of Finland's other frontier defences ceded to Russia and a Russian naval base to be established on the key peninsula of Hanko under Tuesday's treaty of Moscow, Finland looked forward to discussions soon aimed at a defensive alliance with Sweden and Norway.

ible."

These northern neighbors already have agreed to talk it over at Finland's initiative, Tanner said, although they refused such an overture when the war was in progress.

To the mourning public of Finland, which lost thousands of its sons and much of its wealth in the futile struggle against invasion, the government broadcast a plea for continuing in peace the co-operation and unity that was so characteristic in war.

Another Chapter in History

That epic struggle, the government said, was now just another "chapter of history," and Finland must turn to the task of restoring her ruined cities and humble homes laid waste by Soviet bombing planes.

The grim Finnish army prepared for step-by-step withdrawal from its snowy battle fronts as provided for both armies in Russia's truculent peace terms.

First withdrawal, a minimum of seven kilometres (about 4 1-2 miles) is scheduled tomorrow in the Lieks area, with similar retreats to follow in other sectors on a schedule that calls for the last removal from the Petsamo area April 10.

Premier Risto Ryti and the delegation which accepted the Russian settlement passed through Stockholm today on their way home to Helsinki from Moscow.

The government already has been informed of the main points of the treaty, but Ryti is bringing the full details.

Ratification May Be Delayed

Foreign Minister Tanner indicated that the formality of ratification by the Finnish Diet might not come for several weeks.

The sad old Finnish Field Marshal, Baron Carl Gustaf Mannerheim, declared in his final order of the day that Finland has "paid to the very last penny any debt we may have owed to the west."

Baron Mannerheim estimated the Russian dead at 200,000; the Finnish at 15,000. Foreign military observers, however, placed the figures at 250,000 Russians killed and 250,000 wounded compared with 30,000 Finns killed and 35,000 wounded. They said the unusually high ratio of dead to wounded was due to the bitter cold, which spelled death to nearly every gravely wounded man.

SWEDEN FAVORS COLLABORATION

Russian Railway

Gunther pointed to provisions in the peace of Moscow advancing the Russian frontier toward Sweden in the Salla area and providing for construction of a railway through that zone to link the Russian Murmansk railway with a Finnish line connecting with Swedish Hadaranda at the head of the Gulf of Bothnia.

These, he said, are "conditions that are of evident interest to us."

Gunther said that Sweden's role in the initiating of Finnish-Russian peace talks was that of an intermediary, that Sweden put no pressure on Finland to accept Moscow's terms and that Germany had not tried to influence the Stockholm government.

More Purposeful Policy

Now that peace has been achieved he said that "the northern countries should be prepared and added that the question of strengthening their co-operation should be submitted to "an unbiased examination."

(At Helsinki, Finnish Foreign Minister Vaino Tanner said that Finland had taken the initiative in asking for conversatons looking to a defensive pact with Sweden and Norway to insure her altered borders against further violation.)

The Swedish newspaper Socialdemokraten said that only "a defence alliance in life and death" of the northern countries could insure future safety and appended the warning:

"We do not believe in the durability of the new peace, and we do not believe in peace guarantees from a power which has dismembered and violated a free people."

Woman's Missionary Society Holds 15th Annual Meeting

Rev. H. B. Herrington, chairman of Belleville Presbytery spoke of "The Great Task" and the individual responsibility that is needed in order that all the Christians work co-operatively to bring in the Kingdom of God and to make Christ known to people everywhere.

Mrs. W. R. Fletcher of Marmora graciously responded to all the greetings and closed with the message as found in Bible passages:—"Come—tarry — and then go into all the world.

Worship Service

The evening worship service was ably conducted by three young ladies from the Mission Circle of Holloway St. Church. The Scripture reading was taken from 62 Chapter of Isaiah. An inspirational address followed. The speaker stated that God did not want us to bow down to the inevitable. "A strong wind is blowing against us and we do not know when or where we shall be rescued. In these troublesome times the faith and loyalty of every Christian is at stake." A missionary from the Orient has said that the price of one pair of silk stockings paid for four bullets and killed one Chinese. This excellent discourse was concluded with a beautiful poem entitled "Faithful in Little," and a prayer by Miss Marion Daniels.

Stewardship Drama

A Stewardship drama was put on by the ladies of Picton Evening Auxiliary entitled "Great Possessions." An executive meeting of Presbyterial was to meet to discuss the budget for the coming year. Owing to poor crops and threatened drought all maintenance must be cut, according to all the ladies of this executive except one. Mrs. Brown, a drab little country woman, generally looked down upon, suggested all share what they had. She said she hated to pull down the structure already built up. Our possessions are so many and so abundant we cannot handle them all and a depression of plenty has followed.

Finally this executive president resigned her chair in favour of the little farmer woman who had lived so near to God and His handiwork of nature. The drama ended by the budget remaining as it had been. It had taken the one who had the least of worldly possessions to make the others see the value of sharing.

A solo, "All in the April Evening" was rendered by Mr. Harry Ackerman.

Dr. J. Lind

Dr. J. Semple of Bridge St. Church introduced Dr. Lind, who spoke on his work while a medical missionary in China.

He was heavy in heart, he said, over what had gone on in Finland during the past few hours as he had been over similar conditions in China.

Dr. Lind urged his listeners to make an effort to understand the Easterner. Canadian citizens know very little of the personality of the Chinese in Canada today, who have reason, he felt, in many ways to point a finger of accusation at us.

Canadian citizens have exploited the markets of the East in such ruthless fashion, he stated, that they are considered hard in a materialistic way by the Orientals.

These barriers should be thrown down and the Easterners shown that the missionaries are sincere.

Progress Made

Dr. Lind spoke of the progress in education, expressing the happiness experienced when two years ago it was announced by Madam Chiang Kai-Shek, that teaching Christianity would be allowed in the schools throughout China.

Hospital work has also been greatly benefited by modern methods introduced by the Christian doctors. China of today he said, is turning to Christianity as never before.

Dr. Lind closed this stirring address with a prayer for the cause of Christ in China.

The offering was taken by members of the C.G.I.T. group of Holloway St. and dedicated by Miss Lazelle Brown.

The evening benediction was pronounced by Rev. McClintock.

SPRING FASHION NUMBER

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, THURSDAY, MARCH 14, 1940

COLOR RUNS RIOT

in the SPRING MODE in Belleville Shops

Important navy sheer frock with crisp white lingerie frills. In rayon sheer.

Colour harmony is the dominant theme in the fashion picture presented by the Belleville merchants this Spring. Fashion in festive mood spilled all her colours at once and Spring 1940 is as colourful, for flowers in a riot of hues blossom everywhere, bright plumaged birds perch jauntily on sailor brims or beret crowns and high colours accent black or navy in suits and coats.

Designed for living, the 1940 styles for men and women alike, could not be more becoming or more wearable. In costume and novelty jewellery, a great deal of which is to be worn this year, Belleville shops offer perfectly fascinating examples of the finer types. Even the shoes for milady this Spring keep step with the colours endorsed. House furnishings are gay with the new trend towards colour shedding the drabness of the Winter months and stepping forth in a bright new colour scheme.

It's Springtime in BELLEVILLE

Milady Is Reminded of the Approach of Easter

Latest in Spring Finery Now On Display in Belleville Shops

"Everything was quiet and peaceful in a Belleville home the other evening when suddenly the head of the house glanced at the calender.

"Robert", she said, "do you realize it is just two weeks until Easter?"

There was a rustle as the newspaper fell to the floor, and the senior member of the household drew nervously upon his after-dinner cigar. Political and war news vanished in the blue cloud of cigar smoke, to a place of secondary importance, and he wondered if he could obtain income tax exemption on Easter finery.

"Well?" he demanded.

"Well. I saw the loveliest ensemble on Front Street, and I think you should see it," she said. "It is a Queen Elizabeth shade of blue. It is going to be quite popular again this year, with more variation of shades you know. Besides, I think it is high time that you were looking about for a new spring ensemble for yourself."

"As a matter of fact," he admitted "I was looking at some of the new spring suits the other day. Something in tweed, I think, will meet my requirements."

On Right Track

And according to a number of Belleville shops today, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Q. Citizen were on the right track for their Easter finery. With Easter less than two weeks away, merchants are making plans for what they expect will be one of the biggest Easter businesses in recent years.

But because Easter is much earlier than usual, the realization of its approach is a slow process among all but the merchants.

One definite trend, insofar as milady is concerned, will be the presence of furs in the 1940 Easter parade, due to the earliness of the season.

Furs in Order

"Furs, definitely, will be worn this year," declared one fashion authority today, pointing out that fur boleros, chubbies and silver fox skins will be among the more popular variations of these accessories. Anticipating demand for fur accessories, large stocks have been made available for the Easter business and it is anticipated that it will exceed past years.

Next week, the fashionable stores which influence the trend in women's wear will begin to show the newest spring models in anticipation of the coming Easter season. Among the newer shades to be favored will be variations of Queen Elizabeth blue, with shades of pink also showing the way.

Tweed Suitings

Insofar as the men are concerned, tweed suitings will be favored with teal blues and green favcred. Due to the fact that Easter is early, there is also expected to be a larger demand for top-coats. Style leaders are returning to the set-in sleeve in men's top-coats and tweeds will be in favor for these garments.

Both men's and women's wear will be currently influenced by military styles, authorities disclosed, with the trend leading away from the dark shade of winter.

Feminine, and very natural is a new rose lipstick designed for pastels. For greys and misty blues, there's one called pink heather, a dainty, subtle note. Cream and dry rouge are available in the same shades.

Spring jackets and skirts tell a colorful story. Bold plaids and soft pastels are seen in new longer jackets, flared, pleated or belted skirts.

Importance of Costume Jewelry

With the deceptively simple frocks of Spring, costume jewelry becomes more than ever important in every smart woman's wardrobe.

Outstandingly new, and especially suited to the lovely new greys, is the gunmetal and grey jewelry shown in such an infinite variety of pins, necklets and bracelets, which promise to be premier rivals of the glittering gold which still holds high fashion place.

To blend with the new Springtime pastels, there is exquisite coloring in the delicate star sapphire, the moonstone pink and star ruby shades shown in necklets and bracelets of pearls. The same trend to muted tones is followed in the plastic costume jewelry so popular for Spring—the gay necklets and bracelets of bud and blossom, leaf and bubble, which are to be found in colorings to match every ensemble or form clever contrast with black.

Seed pearl brooches are among the loveliest of the ornaments for Spring, and for coat lapels and sweater or dress novelties there are gadget and floral pins galore, all the way from gay toy soldiers to Disney birds and beasts, fascinating frivolities to delight all and sundry who are gadget-minded.

Today's Fashion

By VERA WINSTON

SHEER WOOL, trimmed with richly-colored embroidery or elaborate self-fabric ornamentation, is the choice of many smart women. Here is one such dress, done in a beautiful rouge-red with wool embroidery of chalky gray. The embroidery is used at the hem and in a band below the shoulder yoke and at top of sleeves. It has a plain, round neck gray bone buttons to the waist; gray leather belt and an eight-gored skirt. Fine for the travel wardrobe, and a find for the college girl.

'Native' Prints in Spring Costumes

Following the mood for gaiety and color, Spring frocks and print ensembles show many "native prints" in riotous color schemes of soft muted tones. Gay Javanese prints with exotic patterns are contrasted with other softly muted prints in which South American designs are used with native pottery and baskets as inspiration. Mexican prints and bright Hawaiian colorings are seen in other prints, but usually in sportswear.

Daytime costumes make use of the very exotic and colorful Javanese prints, or the quaint garden prints loved by most women because of their fresh Spring-like colorings. Mixtures as lively as any Spring garden are seen in close florals or amusing stripes or checks.

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton, March 14 Special) — Trenton has banished all comers in the race for the Ontario Bantam championship and will fight it out with Preston in the finals for the Provincial title. The teams will play home and home games with goals to count on the round. The locals are expecting the toughest of opposition and have not discounted the west town team one iota. Lesperance and Fitzpatrick are the two main cogs in the Trenton machine and are in the pink of condition for the deciding battles. All hometown supporters hope for is a fast ice surface when the tiny champs clash.

Home and School Club

Members of the Dufferin Home and School Club and St. Georges Anglican Church heard Mrs. Simmons of Stirling deliver addresses early this week. The speaker is well known in this district and is the widow of the late Canon Simmons of Toronto. Completing her speaking visit here yesterday Mrs. Simmons returned to her home at Stirling.

District Deputy Night

One of the largest turnouts of the season heard District Deputy Right Worshipful Brother Hilton McCartney of Wellington speak to the Trenton Masonic Lodge on Tuesday night. At the meeting were visitors from all sections of Ontario and three English airmen late of the Royal Air Force in England were among those present. In the banquet hall after the address the Masons enjoyed a luncheon and social get-together.

Lindsay Speaker Addressed Conservatives

The first in a series of meetings in the committee room on Dundas Street took place on Tuesday night, when guest speaker Sam Hughes, Jr. addressed one hundred and fifty followers of the National Government. The Lindsay lawyer spoke on behalf of George H. Stokes the Conservative candidate for the riding of South Hastings. Near the close of the evening Mr. Stokes accompanied by Richard Arnott, M.P.P. arrived at the meeting and the Conservative candidate was warmly welcomed as he passed up the aisle to the platform. Mr. Stokes delivered a few brief remarks urging the voters to return the Manion government if they expected a united war front. The guest speaker Sam Hughes was introduced by William H. Ireland, who was called upon to move a vote of appreciation, when the speaker had finished. William House, Sr., acted as chairman for the evening.

Salvation Army Drive

The Salvation Army drive for war funds got underway here this week and already the sum of $500 and upwards has been collected by the canvassers. With more than a week remaining campaign officials feel confident that the drive will be fully subscribed at least.

Legion Campaign

Officials are satisfied with the amount collected in Trenton and the district for the War Services Campaign sponsored by the local branch of the Canadian Legion. A total in access of $1,000 was taken in by Legion canvassers during the personal contact canvass.

R.C.A.F. Band and Wishart Campbell Featured by Salvation Army

Trenton residents packed Canterbury hall on Monday night to hear a musical programme featuring the Trenton R.C.A.F. Band and Wishart Campbell internationally known baritone singing a number of his popular radio songs. This evening of special entertainment opened the Salvation Army drive for the War Work Funds. Mayor O. G. Alyea introduced guest artist Wishart Campbell.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supepr ma said to pop, Really, Willyum, I mean really, it's incredible how low some women can stoop just to take deliberate advantage of an axsidental situation.

I'm afraid the world is full of low stoopers of varying sexes, pop said, and ma said, Jessica Trimble is so notoriously lucky anyway, she ought to be the last to be the first to take a mean alvantage. All year she has born off the choicest prizes at every bridge game with unflagging consistency, while all I ever win is some thifling trinklet just for form sake. Even when my score is higher than hers, wich it practically always would be if she didn't hold such fabulous cards that she can just go ahead and play them with impunity ,even then it invariably turns out that her prize is more desirable than mine, ma said.

You deserve great credit for not abandoning the game entirely, pop said, and ma said. To add insult to injury Jessica always makes a straight faced claim that my prize is much perferable to hers, so the last time we played I took her up on the assertion and made a compact to exchange prizes with her the next time no matter who won what, and this afternoon by some unforseen miracle I won the darlingest silver and gold thimble and all Jessica won was a couple, of packs of cards, and she came sailing gaily up to me exclaiming, I dont know what I'll ever do with a thimble, and these lovely cards are a godsend, but a bargain is a bargain and nobody can say Im not a sport. I told her I wouldnt dream of saying such a thing, but I assured her I knew how I'd feel in her place, so I'd strain a point and excuse her from the compact, but she insisted like a leetch and snatched the thimble like a vulture, it's the last compact I'll make with her, and there's nothing to laugh at, ma said.

Pop keeping on thinking different.

Miniature Waists, Slim Clinging Lines In Dresses

Double Silhouette Trend in New Designs

Designers have created delightful new frocks with "smallest possible waistlines," and either slim clinging skirts or wide swaying ones. A double trend growing out of the chic simplicity preferred by smart women, and the eager desire for perpetual youthfulness in their clothes, gives to the Spring fashion picture a dual effect. Milady may be suave and sophisticated in the new slim draped gowns, or she may swing along in strictly 1940 fashion with wide rippling hemline in her short skirt. But always, her waistline is tiny and trim, her bodice either sleekly fitted or softly molded. And her sleeves may be amusingly puffed out at shoulders, or very simple.

Distinctly wearable, the new fashions, are created for Canadian activities. Sports costumes are as youthful and gayly colorful, yet simply designed. Daytime clothes subscribe to the rigid simplicity of tailored wear, and afternoon frocks are as soft and lovely as a pretty woman could desire.

Drapes, Corselets, Long Tight Bodices Popular

Even coats may be draped this season with soft front fullness and larger-than-ever pockets placed casually high at the hip-line. Shirrings and tuckings give softness to the tops of dresses and the V-neckline is again popular although the "sweetheart" neck is shown in many soft dresses. Cut-outs, tuckings, and finely pleated effects give further variation. There is a little embroidery, a deft use of braiding or Trapunto work, but in general manipulation of fabric accounts for the elaboration and trimming on most costumes.

Swirling tucks, slimly tapered gores, wide rippled circular effects, or the ever-youthful pleats, give new interest to skirts. Fitted waistlines and basque treatments accentuate the rippling fullness of some skirts. Softly draped hiplines and front fullness gives accent to the slim clinging lines of other skirts. Tiers are shown, and amusing bell-tunics are quaint and pert in some youthful models. The slim tunics liked by some women are in evidence here and there, but in general the skirt line is designed to creat an effect of height unbroken.

Dramatic Evening Fashions Narrow or Wide Skirted

From the simple beauty of daytime clothes designers give full sway to their inventive genius in evening modes. Slimly draped jersey dinner gowns look very new and distinctly Canadian. Inset girdles and softly draped bodices accentuates this long slender line. And sleeves and high necks are seen in most of these.

Wide-skirted and romantic, sheer evening dresses of net or lace, stiff chiffon or crisp marquisette, are worn by tiny-waisted women. Off-shoulder lines are lovely, sometimes with tiny puff sleeves low at the shoulders in old-fashioned effect. Back fullness sweeps out in an occasion satin creation, and dramatic bustle bows are lavishly draped to give slender front lines and full graceful skirts in back. Tiers and tiers of net or lace ruffle down the skirts of some youthful frocks for Easter dancing parties. A few of these are sprinkled here and there with tiny bows of ribbon or sprigs of flowers.

Make-up Tints Are Important

The new yellows, ranging from butter and banana to mustard and gold, require rouge and lipstick with yellow rather than blue undertones. Yellowish red make-up will take an important place beside clear, bright reds, and the rust shades are sure to become popular.

The rusts will be red with brown undertones. This doesn't mean that orange shades will be revived. Seldom are they subtle enough to be flattering to the average complexion.

Most shades of yellow are naturally becoming to the dark-haired woman with dark eyes and white skin. If she is slightly sallow, however, her makeup must compensate for the fact that yellows usually further accentuate sallow tones.

Greenish Yellows

Greenish yellows, like chartreuse, are best for the woman whose coloring is distinct—either absolutely blond or absolutely brunet. It takes a lot of skillful making up to enable the brown-haired woman whose coloring is neither quite blond nor quite brunet to wear chartreuse.

Clear, bright yellows, as well as scarlet, royal blue, sharp green and black with stark white accents, are colors which the woman with vivid coloring might well consider. The dramatic coloring of one whose eyes are almost black, skin pearly white and hair dark, often makes muted, misty tones in clothes seem wishy-washy.

On the other hand, pale, soft colors may, by contrast, make the girl whose coloring is not vivid seem to be so.

Sturdy Shoes Worn With Spring Suits

In Paris, all eyes are turned toward Spring. Present conditions, tactfully dubbed "unsettled," bring up many questions but provide few answers. What women will wear is one of the uncertainties involved with many others in the issues of the war.

That tailored clothes will fill the majority of wartime social needs for Paris women is a safe conclusion. Tailored suits and ensembles in ordinary years cut a wide swath in the French capital in Spring, and this trend is re-echoed in London and again on this side of the water.

Early editions of Spring shoes for town wear take good account of the tailored aspect. In outline, and often in leather, they are sturdy types, with thick soles, bulky and low heels and trimming details few and entirely removed from 'fussy'.

Leading colors for the "sturdy" types are box and reversed calf with color contrast the most unusual method of achieving trimming effect. Self-color patent is the decorative note for antelope. Platform soles of one or another are enormously important, with thick crepe soles for the more definitely sport models.

Clogs will be fashion-prominent for Spring, and new developments show them in the discreet tailored and afternoon styles, far removed from their early beachwear genre. More dressy, but never fussy, are the stepins adapted from the Louis Quinse period, with square toes and draped or big-buckled front. Typical evening slippers are quite out of the war picture, with suits worn in the evening, whether cocktail styles or long-skirted tailleurs.

AT THE McCARTHY

• "TORPEDO RAIDER"

Actual naval combat between British and German ships in South American waters....blazing with adventure and gigantic drama.... now showing at the McCarthy Theatre where "Torpedo Raider" is on the screen.

You will see the most terrific sea battle ever portrayed on the screen—between a German battleship and English light cruisers off the coast of South America. You will thrill to a tender saga of father and son that will move you to tears and poignant sympathy as well as joy. You will see the might and power of the British Navy marshalled against the stealthy depredations of the German sea raider "Zeithen" equivalent to the "Graf Spee", "Deutschland", and the "Admiral Scheer", with which you are so familiar. And above all this, you will see a grand film drama......it is not a "news" film, but a grand and glorious triumph of Britain on the sea.

The Higgins Family in the laugh crammed feature comedy "Money To Burn", and the closing chapter of "Overland With Kit Carson" in which the identity of "Peg-Leg" is revealed, will be presented in addition to the sea battle story of the century "Torpedo Raider" the week end program now at the McCarthy Theatre.

AT THE CAPITOL

"THE LAST EXPRESS"

A new, colorful and romantic detective character is brought to the screen by Kent Taylor in "The Last Express", Universal's Crime Club production currently baffling audiences at the Capitol Theatre.

As Duncan MacLain, private sleuth who pursues beautiful blondes as fearlessly as he tracks down killers, Taylor ferrets out a murdered from a collection of a dozen suspects, recovers $300,000 in ransom money and places a gangster chief behind bars while solving one of the most puzzling cases of detective fiction.

An outstanding cast was assembled for the picture, headed by Taylor and Dorothea Kent, the latter as a blonde "mystery" woman. The supporting group include Greta Granstedt, Don McDonald, Paul Hurst, J. Farrell MacDonald, Shaw and Lee, and Edward Raquello.

New York City and its giant subway system is the modern setting for the mystery, which maintains an air of eerie suspense until the final fadeout. A cross-fire of threats and gunplay from two sides, the District Attorney's office and a gangster mob, catches the detective "in the middle" and keeps him there all through the story until the final solution.

Otis Garret directed from the screen play by Edmund L. Hartmann, Irving Starr was the producer.

And on the same program the Capitol brings to the screen Tex Ritter Western in "Roll Wagons Roll", an action packed story of the pioneer trek to Oregon. The 8th chapter of the thrilling detective serial "Red Barry", and Bola Mola Land a cartoon complete the bill.

New Fur Styles Permit Wide Variety of Choice

This fur season is characterized by the greatest variety of choice. Although the basic fitted or flared silhouette remains static, design variation is given scope through the medium of skilful diversion and detail. The designer's art naturally finds its best expression in the soft loveliness of the furs.

Here outlines run the gamut from grandma's hug-me-tight to exaggerated full box styles. But utterly different cut and detail definitely label these 1940 spring fabrics. Manipulation of furs reaches new heights in ingenuity, showing the use of pleats, darts, puffs, odd pockets and collars dressed like sashes and producing a more flattering courselet waist.

Past seasons have been a proving ground for the popularity of furs in the wardrobe, aside from the coat, and this spring furs are being shown in various guises, jackets, capes and stoles. The most noteworthy jackets draw their inspiration from military themes, as evidenced in epaulette shoulders, fitted waist and swallow tail effects.

The stole also seems to be gaining in importance in several versions of daytime and evening wear, as grey and brown colors set a precedent by taking their place with the ever popular black.

Silver fox should reach a new peak of popularity this spring for boleros, stoles and jackets. A breeze-weight" silver fox jacket or a natural silver tipped skunk would be a year-round acquisition to one's wardrobe. The newest innovation in fur treatment will be the stole fronts convertible into muffs, lengths ranging from the short bolero to the thirty-two inch coat.

Baum martens, mink and dyed fitch, in stoles, capes and boleros will be popular with the discerning as will be squirrel, skunk and also such flat furs as caracul and Persian lamb, in fitted and swing jackets.

The swagger box coat, furriers state, still ranks as the favorite, but gaining rapidly is the taste for the fitted styles.

Spring Hosiery Golden Colours

Three color groups are among the most popular hosiery tones for Spring, as seen on smart women. A "wine group" of colors blend beautifully with wine or navy or print frocks or costumes having the rosy colors popular this year. Ranging from a pale light rosy cast, to a deeper and more neutral tone, these are designed to blend with costumes or prints of this color group.

Apricoty and coppery colored hosiery, in a "sunny" group, are worn with short sporty costumes, giving the sun-bronzed appearance to the legs always popular after the resort season. These colors are worn with brown, beige or black.

Navy Leads in Spring Tailleurs

The classic tailleur, long preferred by many women as the perfect all-day suit costume, is once more with us, but softer, more elegantly designed and frequently touched with satin edgings or otherwise given a dressier look. Fine stripings such as the chalk stripes, are also liked. And in the new longer jackets, these fine striped weaves give a decidedly smart appearance because they are so slenderizing.

Lapels are longer this year on many of the new suits, and skirts may have inverted pleats instead of the slim plain skirts of last year. Smart pockets and flaps add interest. Simple one-button styles are preferred.

Easter Vogue Says Cottons For Young

Put your little girl in cottons for Easter—they're far and away top fashion favorites with the youngsters. Adorably styled with snug waists and full flared skirts, they boast shirrings, tucks, bright button trims and bowback sashes for added charm. The pinafore pops up this Spring as one of the most delightful fashions for youngsters and you'll be seeing lots of them. Full flared princess frocks, Dutch pocket frocks and dirndls continue in popularity and take to new trims for fashion interest. "Flower-fresh" prints on white or pastel grounds, striped seersuckers, lively polka dots, stiped florals and the new "little girl" pastels are just a few of the New Spring cotton crop. And besides being so pretty, cottons are wonderfully practical. They keep their lovely colors after repeated launderings, they're easy to iron—and in most cases, cottons shrink very little.

Fashion Details

Youngsters love to dress like "mummy" or "big sister" and designers show adaptations of Spring's smartest fashions in miniature. The military influence so prevalent this Spring is evident in coats and suits. You'll see shining brass buttons, double breasted closings, gay military capes— and these styles are often referred to as "soldier boy" fashions. The double-breasted jacket is a Spring star—with buttons arranged in narrow file or flaring out to achieve shoulder width for the military touch. Soft herringbone tweeds, nubs or herringbone weaves as well as pastels in solid and two-tone effect are especially smart. Small plaids and pastel checks and "neutrality colors" such as beige, grey and young blue are also headed for Spring success.

Easter coats in Parents' Magazine's Young Blue are fitted and gently flared. Teen sister's is in coachman style with silver buttons. Her felt beret is dyed to match. Big- and little sister wear leghorn Bretons with Young Blue ribbon.

Jackets and skirts in Parents' Magazine's Young Blue prove that youth must have its swing in graceful gored skirts. Teen sister's jacket features the new knapsack pockets. Big and little sister's socks are dyed Young Blue to match.

Spring Hats Gay With Primroses, Bows, Veils, High Colours Lead

Easter, always the signal for the appearance of new Easter hats for the Canadian ladies, has long been accompanied by the trembling anticipation of the Canadian male. In the past few years, he has succumbed silently, though unwillingly, to the Eugenie Tricorne, the Baby Bonnet, the Skyscraper Crown. By this time, he has been through most of the pernicious forms of Millinery Madness, as evidenced by his female tormentors, and is ready for just about anything.

This year, he will have a pleasant surprise. Hats do have a definite character and personality, to be sure. But the idea of caricature or exaggeration is definitely "out." Naturally, there are some women who seem fated to choose the wrong hats...but at least this Spring they will have an abundance of charming and becoming styles from which to choose. Hence, the margin of error is bound to be lessened. In fact, just about every type of woman is accounted for in the Easter line-up. The hats are all different, yet alike in their purpose...to bring out the charm and feminity of their wearers.

The Victorian and Southern influences have cajoled some charming bonnets and tiny hats from the leading millinery designers. These are copied in every price level, but are not extreme or difficult to wear. They have a tendency to soften the face, and are charmingly naive with their feathers, bows and many types of veils. Straw, belting and satin are used for these "little" hats, as well as felt. Naturally, they are primarily for the small or youthful face.

Flower hats are enjoying continued popularity. Little toques made completely of daisies, sweet peas, pansies, and other small artificial flowers will grace the head of many a smart woman. These have an especial charm and dignity for older women, and also have the ability to flatter unsophisticated types. There are small sailors, too, made ingeniously and trimmed with velvet ribbons, veils or snoods. Colors are legion...ranging from white to bright reds, or "natural" flower shades.

A new and interesting trend to watch is the calot or skullcap hat, which is making an entrance this Easter. Tiny velvets, satins, straws ...often trimmed with a solitary rose or ribbon "chou" are being featured by the more high-fashioned milliners. These are worn far back on the head, and usually have a face veil to set them off. They reveal a considerable portion of the face, so are recommended primarily for those with well defined features.

All in all, the "sweet and simple" trend is in the lead for this gay Spring. There will be an abundance of white, but color is stressed and stressed again. Not just any color, but carefully chosen hues of red, blue, violet, in a subtle range of becoming, wearable hues. Black and navy refuse to be eliminated, however, and still make some of the smartest hats.

There is another style of hat that seems slated for a large share of interest. This is the cloche...the simple, small hat that is worn casually and without fuss. Almost invariably it is a felt, with or without ribbon binding, and is effectively worn turned up or down. This year it will be seen with suits as well as coats and tailored dresses, in a variety of sizes and innum-Severest Critic will approve!

It's definitely a feminine Spring ...and unless the female of the species goes out of her way to make a poor choice, her Easter hat is almost certain to be a charming and colorful one, that even her Severest Critic will aprove.

MIX-AND-MATCH WEAR IN FOR BUSY SEASON

The color and gaiety of the smart Jackets and Skirts promises many a fashion trick for Easter paraders! Not only do they typify the new season, but with a little ingenuity you can give them the proverbial "nine lives"! They'll go along to the office to daytime dates and to sport events... feeling at home wherever they go!

The patriotic note in the Paris collections is expressed in tri-color effects both in dresses and in trimmings. Two-piece tea dresses in stiff black silks are trimmed with enormous cabochon pockets, with the motifs repeated in head-dresses with flowing veils.

Manning the guns is John Mills in this scene from "Torpedo Raider" to be presented next at the McCarthy Theatre. This smashing drama of naval warfare is reminiscent of the recent Graf Spee tragedy. The comedy hit "Money to Burn," opens on the same program.

FOR HANDBAGS

Specially devised for the handbag are some little glass capsules of sun-tan oil. The oil comes in two consistencies, for a dark or a light sunburn, and each globule holds enough for one application. One gets at the oil by snapping off the end of the container.

Choose Clothes That Suit You

Don't be a clothes horse. This is indeed the time to get rid of any notion that your figure is simply something on which to drape clothes. Your figure is something which clothes are supposed to glorify.

Come to the aid of your instinctive good taste by refusing to buy any spring costume for no better reason than because "they" are wearing it.

"They" may be wearing it. But unless it is really becoming to you, forget about "they" and find one that becomes you.

Variety For Every One

Fortunately, there's such a wide variety of styles from which to pick and choose that nobody should even be tempted to stop shopping until she has found what is right for her figure, colouring, background and mode of living.

If you just aren't as slim as a reed through the middle and know very well that you won't be soon, don't try to wear the new elongated-torso silhouette anyway.

There are other less difficult, less revealing silhouettes which are just as new and just as becoming. The bloused-bodice, for example.

Don't Follow Blindly

If you have a long face, turn your back on halo hats or any other type of hat which lengthens the already too long lines of your features. If you have big feet, don't feel that you have to buy flat-heeled sabots. There are comfortable, chic shoes which will make your feet seem smaller instead of larger than they are.

In other words, don't start to assemble a spring wardrobe with the idea that you must have this, must have that. Know what is new and know what is smart, don't decide definitely on any silhouette until you have seen it on yourself.

String along with really chic women of the world in the firm belief that clothes are supposed to dramatize the wearer. But only outfits that set you off to the best advantage.

INVESTED CAREFULLY

LONDON, (CP)—Phoebe Dorothea Sayr lived in a small house without a servant and when she died recently it was discovered her investments of £8,000 (36,600) had become worth £20,000 ($89,000), but she left no will.

There' Spring fashion news in these long-sleeved spun challis shirts. Worn atop slim flannel slacks or the flared flannel skirt, they are casually chic.

Another Outstanding Old Dutch Silverware Offer

Once again Old Dutch has added another silverware offer to the already long list of units that have proved so popular in the past, in the form of a Hollow Handle Dessert Server.

This lovely Server is 9-5/8" long, made of the celebrated Wm. A. Ltd., and is really a most fascinat- Rogers Pure Silverplate by Oneida, ing piece of silver tableware. It's in up-to-the-minute style for the correct serving of cakes, pies, ice cream bricks, salads, etc. The rich "Croydon" pattern, handsome Hollow Handle, and sparkling Mirror Stainless Steel Blade make a most delightful combination of beauty and utility. A very welcome addition to any Old Dutch Wm. A. Rogers Silverplate Collection and most suitable as a personal gift or bridge prize.

As many Servers as desired are, as usual, obtainable in return for windmill pictures from Old Dutch labels and a small cash payment, representing a genuine money-saving investment. The offer is good only while present supply lasts.

Select Clothes to Hide Defects

Few and far between are styles that are universally becoming.

For the most part, each and every woman has to search for clothes which will dramatize her own best features and minimize less attractive ones.

The girl with a long face should by all means avoid necklaces with drooping pendants at the front. The pendants only tend to elongate the already too long line from forehead to chin. However, if she wears a pendant necklace backward, the reverse is achieved. Choker beads are better for her than chest-length ones. She should skip long, dangling earrings.

To Widen Face

She will find also that round collars and high, frilly jabots shorten her features, while long, pointed revers do just the opposite. She will be more flattered by brimmed hats or those with fullness low at sides than by halo shapes or turbans with high bows above the forehead.

The long-faced type will also avoid clusters of curls on top of the head. The top of her coiffure should be flat with fullness at sides.

Neat Effects

If she has a round, full face, low, pointed necklaces, long necklaces, clusters of curls atop the head and long earrings are her forte.

The tiny, thin face would be overwhelmed by gigantic button earrings, whereas delicate little jewelled drops might be charming.

The woman with tiny features may build her hair outward a little at the sides, but she must avoid bushy hair-dos.

Great masses of hair always make a face look smaller than it actually is.

Comfort, Conservatism and Quality in Men's Wear

Comfort, conservatism and quality may be said to be the three essentials most desired by men in their suits and topcoats this spring.

There is an upturn in the use of rough materials. Tweeds and shetlands that were seen in the country and at sports events are now coming into their own for office wear and business use.

As far as design goes, most suits will be made with single-breasted coats. They are somewhat longer than those of last year and are made with either three or four buttons. They may have patch pockets and their cut and appearance gives the wearer a feeling of comfort and leisure.

Most trousers are pleated and are cut slightly higher than those of last year. They may be somewhat narrower, but this trend is certainly not extreme.

Many Stripes and Plaids

There are the usual flannels in both solid gray and blue and gray with white pin stripes. In addition, there are lots of saxonies, shetlands and tweeds. Many of them are in striped designs which is a characteristic touch of 1940.

In addition there are lots of plaids and in some of these the horizontal lines are stressed and again give the stripe motif.

There will be some covert worn although this fabric, much touted last spring, is more popular now when used in slacks and in topcoats. Colors run to browns, blues and grays.

Men's Accessories Very Colourful

Stripes, plaids and checks are keynotes for accessories in the man's wardrobe for the spring and fall of 1940.

For the first time in a number of years, most of the designs to be seen in ties, shirts, socks and other accessories embody the ideas of this continent's designers. They have been made to suit Canadian men and the colors, patterns and fabrics should please young and old in all parts of this country.

Wool Ties For Summer

In the necktie field for 1940 there are two new notes. One is the return of the narrow crocheted or knit tie which can be purchased in either wool or wool and silk mixtures. These come in solid colors and in stripes, and promise to be a favorite everywhere.

The second new note is the increasing popularity of the wool four-in-hand. While many of these in the past have been imported from Ireland and Scotland, they are now being made in quantity by some of the largest mills in America. Their colors are soft and mellow, running to grays, blues, shades of brown and deeper shades of red.

Many of these wool ties come in plaids. Some are in soft leather mixtures and others in paisley and other small designs. They do not wrinkle in packing and the fact that they do not absorb perspiration is greatly in their favor.

TWO LEADING STYLES OF THE SEASON

Above, is a new raglan style topcoat of tweed . . . the patch pockets and leather buttons sets the outfit off to perfection.

At left, is the suit that has definitely become the favortie of men and young men . . . the three button tweed-mix! This suit is versatile in style . . . being fashion-right for any and every occasion.

Freedom Plus Style Marks New Topcoats

Topcoat sleeves are looser and shoulders are built on the raglan and bal-macan ideas to give freedom to arm movements. Most topcoats this spring combine a mixture of modified colors while gray and brown lead as usual. Many of the fabrics have interwoven stripes and plaids introducing blue, green and, in some cases, dark red.

Design in topcoats is important. Many are in herringbone, some in plaids and others in small interwoven designs that are attractive.

A group of designers who were recently questioned are in agreement that the Canadian man wants a coat that fits him. He no longer wants to be bound by convention. He is looking for comfort and style and the variety of models shown this spring proves that these designers are right.

Covert Cloth Popular

Covert cloth will again be popular in topcoats and is often combined with tweed in the reversible models which have become a standard item of apparel in many communities. These retail at a reasonable price and are generally fancied by young men.

Like most topcoats this spring, the reversible models are generally single-breasted with a four-button fly front that is enjoying a wide popularity.

What About Weight?

Men have demanded a topcoat that can do the impossible. They wanted a coat that was adaptable to the weather—warm during the cooler days of spring; light enough for the sunny days. This year men can choose woven fleece and worsted coats that really do this job surprisingly well. Of course the removable-lining coats are "tailor made" for the weather, but all new models contain just the amount of woolen or hair piling to result in a similar effect. Whether you choose a tweed, a camel's hair, a cashmere, a llama...you can be certain of the best in style and comfort.

Covert cloth, which sprang into popularity several seasons ago as an ideal material for topcoats and, in some cases, for suits as well, is now generally seen as a favorite material for slacks. It has, in many localities, even replaced gray flannel, and its lightness and closely woven texture are ideal.

Spring Gloves Will Be Short

Short and sweet are the gloves you'll wear with your new Spring suit. Crisp and ever so young, they are tremendously smart in the new lightweight suede-fabrics. New and expensive-looking style details are quickly evident in self or contrasting hand-stitching, clever button and buckle accents. Even the popular one-button shortie shows new stitching details. However, fashion goes to the other extreme when it comes to short-sleeved costumes and sponsors the new longer six or eight button fabric glove with dressmaker detail in clever back shirring. Best of all, all types of Spring gloves come in spotless white as well as the new pretty pastels.

The Masculine Note

Masculinity is the latest note in women's gloves this Spring. Smart women will be seen wearing mannish, hand-stitched, wrist-high pigskins. The gloves that will be worn with the new sportswear will be just this side of pure masculine, rescued only by a loose-fitting effect around the wrist.

BAGS FOR TOWN USE

New handbags continue to get larger. Lelong has a stunning large tailored bag of the envelope type in russet box-calf. It is fastened under a large round stitched leather frame in which is a transparent cellulose pane. This cover also serves as a pocket for a pair of grey antelope gloves. Original handbags complete many of Balenciaga's new creations. Though huge, they are excessively feminine. Other bags featured are of leather hand-embroidered in silk. Still others include a sewing-bag type of supple fried-onion-tinted box. The top edges, which are knotted like a kerchief when closed, are hand-scalloped in vivid blue. A giant pochette of snowy white seal is embroidered in a splashy all-over design of navy silk flowers. Large envelopes for Summer evening wear are made of the dress fabric and trimmed with tiny ruffles.

TO FRESHEN BLACK CLOTH

Freshen a black cloth dress by going over it thoroughly with a vacuum cleaner. Remove stains with cleaning fluid .. Sponge. it .with hot water and iron on the wrong side with a damp cloth.

House Interiors "Glamorized" Giving Personality to Homes

For the past few seasons, the style element in home furnishings has translated the words "fashion", "personality", and "glamor" into the domestic scene, giving a boost to local business in practically every community. The movies are partially responsible for this, but in the main there has been a general trend to make homes more style-conscious on the part of Mrs. Average Home-Maker.

Local merchants have seized eagerly upon this new selling slant, reflecting these ideas in their advertising and displays. New interest is afforded the consumer by means of this new, more personalized approach. Hence Spring furnishing is no longer a matter of mere house-cleaning and storing away, but of bringing a fresher, lighter touch to rooms, thus making the transition from one season to another a pleasant and enjoyable task.

Modern decoration, still popular with many Canadians, is acknowledging the growing renaissance of Victorian, Early American and French Provincial styles, as well as the acceptance of a "mixture" of periods usually termed Traditional. The important factor in the retailing of Spring, 1940, home furnishings is that every sale, regardless of the amount involved, is made with due consideration for the individual home concerned, as well as its inhabitants. Home furnishings are no longer a routine matter, but are surrounded by as much color and interest within the stores as possible, in order to inspire the consumer with an idea of the effectiveness they will have in her own home. This is where the words "glamor" and "drama" come into the picture.

Many stores supply free decorating advice, or tie in with the editorial features of widely read national magazines. Thus, the vogue in home furnishings becomes as universally interesting as does that of ready to wear fashions. "Express yourself in your home" is the theme of this new brand of retailing, and in conection with this there are home furnishings fashion shows, exhibits and forums; all stimulating community as well as individual interest.

Now, more than ever before, the home expresses the individuality of its owners, and there is a freer more facile use of furniture and accessories than ever before. Woods may be matching or contrasting... curtains may be fluffy or tailored ...rugs may be plain or figured, scattered or carpets. Many homes which might have been considered "old fashioned" a few years ago now emerge as charming and harmonious, by the simple addition of a single piece or a few fresh accessories.

Slip covers and upholstery are equally popular for year round treatments of chairs and sofas. There is a tendency to use more of the homespun types of fabrics, for both formal and informal types of rooms. Victorian and Edwardian colors are having a vogue right now for rooms of American or English periods or moods. Chintzes and blocked linens are being utilized in a variety of different ways for draperies, slipcovers, upholsteries in living rooms as well as bedrooms.

High colored suedes in tailored bags are definitely in the Easter parade. Worn with matching suede belt and gloves, they are a smart Spring fashion trio.

Knitted Classic

By ALICE ALDEN

IT'S THE longer waistline in sweaters, too. Let's skip the corset which might be essential if the talk were about this season's frocks and suit jackets, and think instead of the many uses to which such a sports item can be put. Palm Beach has taken over the coat sweater in a big way, not odd considering the weather, wearing it over both slacks and smart wool frocks similar to the heather jersey with wide green suede belt pictured. Golf, spring walks, country weekends and early morning drives all call for the casual knitted classic. Quite as popular and going as many places once more is the bright red flannel coat.

AIKEN'S W.M.S.

The March meeting of Aiken's Woman's Missionary Society was held at the home of Mrs. Fred Westover.

The ten members present answered the Roll Call with an Easter thought.

Mrs. Perry Hamilton presented the IV Chapter of the Study Book "The Ministry of Healing in India". The need for medical missionaries in India was shown in the presentation of a short play with Mrs. S. Westover taking the part of a nurse, Mrs. Wm. Bush as a woman doctor, and Mrs. S. Spafford, a native woman of India, making an appeal for them to come to her land, where there is only one doctor for every 12,000 people, and in some sections one doctor for 35,000 people.

The Scripture was read by Miss Jennie Moon and an Easter message given by Mrs. S. Westover.

Readings were given by Mrs. Allan Latta, Mrs. Wm. Wheeler and Mrs. E. Hubble and a piano solo was rendered by Mrs. Lee Grills.

Plans were made for the Easter Thank-offering service.

The meeting was closed with prayer by Mrs. Spafford. Lunch was served by the hostess.

CHATTERTON W.M.S.

The March meeting of the Chatterton W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. E. B. Finkle, Tuesday, March 5th. preceded by a dinner proceeds ($6.).

The meeting opened with Hymn 252 Doxology and prayer by Rev. Cooke. Twelve members answered Roll Call. A letter of thanks was read from Mrs. P. Demill. Mrs. Hamblin, supply secretary, read a letter asking for clothing for 12 families, five children to a family.

Worship service conducted by the President, Mrs. E. B. Finkle, two verses hymn 256. Scripture readings were given by Mrs. F. Campbell and a talk on Temperance by Mrs. F. Campbell. A prayer for peace and hymn 78 closed the Worship service.

Mrs. Bleecker, group leader, took the following program: hymn 148; playet on Christian Stewardship "Waked up" given by several members; solo, Rev. Cooke; reading, Easter story "Lilies" by Mrs. F. Campbell; instrumental number by Mrs. J. H. Frederick; reading, Mrs. Wilbur Lough; hymn 311. A prayer from Missionary Monthly repeated in unison closed the meeting.

MASSASSAGA LADIES AID

The March meeting of the Ladies Aid was held on Thursday afternoon, March 7th., at the home of Mrs. Roy Valleau with a good attendance. Twenty-one ladies were present.

Mrs. Asa Broad had charge of the program, opening the meeting with a hymn, with Mrs. Gray at the piano. Prayer was offered by Mrs. Wm. Jose. The seventy-second Psalm was then read responsively. A reading by Mrs. Hillman was enjoyed.

Business was conducted by the president. Money that was made at the pot luck dinner in February was used to buy yarn for socks for the soldiers. The yarn was distributed, also sewing given out for the Red Cross. A social evening was planned to raise money for the church. Hymn 503 was followed by prayer by Mrs. Smith which closed this part of the meeting.

A sale of aprons brought ready buyers. The best apron was adjudged after careful decision to be that of Mrs. Will Jose, who received a nice cup and saucer. Proceeds for the afternoon from aprons, collection and dues was nearly eight dollars.

A delicious lunch was served closing a profitable afternoon.

A patchwork quilt evening skirt shows graduated squares in green, yellow, red and purple. The tight bodice is purple. Pockets are used profusely.

Night Dress Artistry

By PRUNELLA WOOD

Two new gowns are presented to you today. Both are in a non-run jersey and both are cut as cleverly as your most becoming dinner dresses. The pretty pink on the left, in fact, might easily pass as a version of a Paris formal beloved for its bow and drapery. The cap sleeve nightie, right, is angel white and corded in several rows around the square neck.

Gowns such as these pack uncomplainingly. The girl who does her own sudsing will also appreciate the absence of lace and embroidery which a personal maid is paid to handle carefully. Incidentally, warm weather is ahead and nothing is cooler than slinky jersey.

NECKWEAR NEWS

Crisp, delicate neckwear will be seen everywhere this Spring. On "little girl" suits and on the perennially smart navy and black frocks, it offers versatile Spring charm and "quick-change" inexpensive magic to every woman. Exquisite eyelet batistes, embroidered organdies, delicately worked piques (the latter more feminine than ever)...are just a few of the fabrics that promise to be fashion favorites in Spring neckwear. Look for them in crisp frou-frou jabots, dainty bibs, "little girl" collars and cuffs, lovely bow-tied collars. They'll refresh and dress up practically every Spring costume.

LOFTY AMBITIONS OF N. Y. RANGERS HANG IN BALANCE

Must Win Tonight Over Boston but Bruins Can Head League by Defeating Canadiens

FAILED IN TEST

Bruins Had Too Much Power in Game Played on Tuesday Night

(By The Canadian Press)

New York Rangers' lofty ambitions for the National Hockey League championship, which loomed so large in the middle of the campaign, will be in the balance tonight when they play their last game of the schedule.

The championship sands seem to be running out for the Rangers as they prepare to take on the first-place Boston Bruins at New York. The Blueshirts can step into first place by winning, but Boston can go right back into the lead and capture the league championship with a victory over Montreal Canadiens at home Sunday.

Two nights ago in Boston the Bruins stepped over the Rangers 2-1 when Eddie Wiseman scored in the last two minutes of play. That was the acid test and the Rangers just didn't have the punches that had stood them in such good stead during their amazing mid-season winning streak.

Rangers still have the Mr. Icicle among the goaltenders, Dave Kerr, and a contingent of great rushing defencemen, in Art Coulter, Ott Heller, Babe Pratt and Muzz Patrick. They have the most prolific goal-getter of the year in Bryan Hextall and 10 other forwards close to his stature.

Against that combination, however, Cooney Weiland pits a Boston team of brilliant individual performers, like Frank Brimsek in goal, Dit Clapper on the defence and the sauerkraut line of Milt Schmidt, Bobby Bauer and Woody Dumart. In the long run it has been this tendency to individual excellence that has told.

In tonight's other game Toronto Maple Leafs will seek to put their hold on third place beyond all mathematical doubt when they oppose the Canadiens at Montreal. The Leafs will leave defencemen Jack Church and Wally Stanowski at home, replacing them with Reg Hamilton and Bucko McDonald.

Providence Jinx Over New Haven Has Been Exploded

By the Canadian Press

New Haven Eagles finally have exploded the "Providence jinx" that hung over them all season.

Unsuccessful in seven previous attempts to gain a victory over the leaders of the eastern division of the International-American Hockey League, the Eagles went out last night at home and trounced Providence 8-2.

The victory lifted the Eagles back into second position in the Int-Am. eastern section which they had lost Tuesday to Springfield Indians.

Two other games last night brought a shuffle in the standing in the western section. Cleveland Barons at Pittsburgh beat the Hornets 13-1 and climbed over them into second place. At Philadelphia, Hershey Bears defeated Ramblers, last-place eastern division team, 3-1, to move into a tie with the Hornets for the third spot in the western section.

New Haven wasn't fooling in its game with Providence, scoring five goals before the Reds counted their first shortly after the half-way mark in the second period. Then, the Eagles added two more.

Gus Mancuso, Earl Robinson and Tony Hemmerling scored two goals apiece. Art Giroux and Norm Mann were the Reds' scorers.

HANK GREENBERG LIKES NEW JOB AS OUTFIELDER

Detroit Tigers Look Like a Better Ball Club With York at First

PLAYS FIELD WELL

Manager Del Baker States Greenberg Showing Real Class in Garden

Lakeland, Fla., March 14—(AP)—Though the complete returns will not be available until about July 4, it may be said that Hank Greenberg looks surprisingly good in left field for the Detroit Tigers and that he likes his new job better every day he plays it.

Also, it can be reported that the Tigers look like a better ball club now that the big guy is roaming the outfield and Rudy York at last is in possession of first base, the one and only spot he can play really well. Manager Del Baker appears to have solved one of the most vexing problems that ever confronted a big league pilot.

"Honest, I like playing outfield more than I had any idea I would" said Greenberg as he trotted to the bench. "I'm not missing the first base at all, and I think maybe I'll do all right out there.

"One thing that's helping me a lot is that I can handle ground balls better than a lot of outfielders. I've been stopping grounders all my life, so I'm not afraid to come in and try to trap a lot of balls that the other fellows stay back and take on the bound. If I don't quite reach it on the fly I know it won't get through me."

So, with Greenberg and York in there swinging, one-two every day the Tigers feel they can't help being a little tougher than they were last year. Dick Bartell, obtained from the Cubs during the winter, is playing a scrappy game at shortstop. Frank Croucher, shifted over to second, completes a fair-looking keystone combination. Pinkie Higgins remains at third.

New York, March 14—(AP)—Those stories that Vanderbilt may be the next big United States college to give up football are not just fairy tales . . . There is a strong faculty bloc at work . . . Also, there is a slight matter of a 150 G deficit.

Tony Galento cut short his refereeing tour to rush back and straighten out his income tax . . . Los Angeles, March 14 (AP)—The no-longer Deanless Cubs and the rookie studded White Sox launch Chicago's 1940 city rivalry today with the first exhibition game for each. Dizzy agreed to terms yesterday and is expected to be present Sunday when his mates meet Philadelphia Athletics.

Lakeland, Fla.: Shagging flies and chasing hits in the outfield are putting a lot of strain on Hank Greenberg's legs these days and the veteran star of Detroit Tigers admits his muscles are sore. But Hank has set his heart on making the switch from first base successful and in the face of considerable embarrassment keeps trying. Observers are labelling him a "game guy."

West Palm Beach, Fla: The Phillies' batting department doesn't look any more robust than last year, but they managed to capture their first exhibition of the Spring yesterday, 5-3, at the expense of Syracuse of the International League. The Phils got only four hits, but benefited from five Syracuse errors.

Bradenton, Fla., St. Louis Cardinals and Boston Bees will be short some of their stars today as they square off for an exhibition tussle. For the Cards Johnny Mize and Buster Adams were on the sick list with colds. Max West bounced a foul off his own foot in a painful mishap that'll probably keep him on the sidelines along with Eddie Miller.

Lakeland, Fla.: Brooklyn Dodgers, who have had some luck with cast-offs, are enthusiastic over Tex Carleton, the veteran pitcher whom they reclaimed from the minors. He held the Yanks to one scratch hit yesterday and fanned six in three innings.

WHO INVENTED THE MOUSETRAP?

You've often heard the old adage: "Let a man make a better mousetrap, and the world will make a beaten path to his door."

But have you ever happened upon that path, or even looked for it?

Why SHOULD you, when the people who today have things to sell beat a path to YOUR door to tell you about them?

Every newspaper that comes into your home brings you a new list of WHAT you can get, and WHERE. You can do your shopping in the advertising pages — instead of beating a path from store to store to find what you want.

Make it a habit to look over the advertisements, and you'll find many fine values you might have missed . . . many exciting and useful things you otherwise might never have known about!

CEMENT-MAKERS LEAD INDUSTRIAL HOCKEY LEAGUE

Josh Maracle's Squad Defeats Alemite 8-4 With Bundy Scoring Three of the Losers' Goals

CORBINS TIE

Belleville Sargents Come From Behind in Last Frame to Knot Count at 4-4

Josh Maracle's Point Anne "Cement-makers" assumed the leading role in the Belleville Industrial Hockey League by virtue of an 8 to 4 victory over Ken Watt's Alemites as the two local hardware manufacturing company squads split points in the second game of the opening games of the local Industrial puck loop at the Hume Arena last night. The "Cement-makers" came from behind to beat the Alemite handily at 8 to 4, while the Belleville Sargent rallied in the last period of the second game to tie the Corbin Lock at 4 to 4.

Jack Bundy, of the Belleville juniors, figured in on all goals scored by the Alemite in the initial game of the night, as Luffman, Genereaux, Hull and Green carried the mail for the victorious Canada Cement sextette. The Alemite led two to one at the end of the initial period, but the "Cement-makers" tallied four in the middle session to cinch the night's honors.

In the second game Corbin took an early lead leading 1-0 and 3-1 before the last stanza opened. The westside "hardware-makers" ran the score to 4-2 before Coach Barnett's squad staged a belated rally and scored two last goals to knot the count.

As the result of the initial games played in the City Industrial League the Canada Cement are leaders with two points for a victory, while Belleville-Sargent and Corbins are tied for second place as the result of their tie game and the Stewart-Warner Alemite rest in the cellar. Ken J. Colling

Following our comments on the Renfrew "Millionaires" last week, a couple of local puck fans asked us if we could find out just who the men behind the Renfrew puck interests were just after the turn of the century. According to Harry J. Walker, writing in the Ottawa Journal, several men from the "creamery town" were financially interested in backing the "Millionaires." There was the Hon. M. J. O'Brien, Hon. T. A. Low, "Jim" Barnet, Bill Jamieson, George Barnet, J. A. O'Brien, George Martel and James Jacques, all of whom are given much credit towards the success of Renfrew's hockey prowess before the last war.

According to Mr. Walker it was in 1907 that Pembroke went the limit importing players to beat Renfrew. Such names as "Baldy" Spittal, Hamby Shore, Skeene Ronan, Lehman, Frood and McVean appeared on Pembroke roster, when they not only beat Renfrew but continued their triumphant march to win over the famous Ottawa "Silver Seven" by a 9-5 score. However, this was an exhibition game and no mention of the Stanley Cup was made. In those days the Stanley Cup was a challenge trophy and the challengers might demand a game as early as December or January. There were no eliminations, such as is the case with the Allan and Stanley Cup series today. For instance the Ottawa Victorias and the Renfrew "Millionaires" played two Stanley Cup games on December 27th and 30th of 1907. The Victorias won which subsequently led the "Creamery Town" moguls to the building of their great Renfrew "Millionaires" of 1910 to '12. Those were the days when the two Patricks and "Cyclone" Taylor were the highest paid hockey players in the business. (To be continued.)

Do you remember when defending the world light heavyweight boxing title he had won from Bob Olin at St. Louis the year before, John Henry Lewis outpointed Jack McAroy, British challenger, in 15 rounds at New York four years ago today? McAroy, rated Britain's greatest pugilistic product since the First Great War, was outclassed throughout the fight, and won only three rounds.

After an absence of a year from Allan Cup competition, the Trail "Smoke-eaters" are once again back in the hunt for the world's amateur puck title. Incidentally the "Smokies" haven't lost a single game this season and are looming to be the treat they were in 1938, when they won the Allan Cup. More recently the Port Arthur "Bearcats," Allan Cup winners last year eliminated the Geraldton "Mi-be contended with also. Then there are the Montreal Royals and the Toronto "Goodyears" boasting of strong teams as well as the Sydney, N.S. "Millionaires" also in the ring.

Ralph McDonald, secretary of the Prince Edward County Hockey League, is anxious to pit his league champions against the winner of the rural hockey tournament, that brings together Glen Miller and Wallbridge tonight at the Hume Arena. Incidentally local puck fans who took in the first Glen Miller-Wallbridge saw-off were highly impressed with the calibre of hockey dished up by these rural teams. There are several Trenton players with the 'Paper-makers and some Belleville pucksters with the "Townhallers." For instance Ken Davis' younger brother plays centre for Glen Miller, while Norm Johnson's kid brother flanks him on the wing and coupled with Anderson make a scrappy trio. If "Bart" Hinchcliffe's Wallbridge sextette wins tonight they'll be presented with the Dr. J. J. Robertson trophy, emblematic to the rural hockey title of the district. However, the Glen Miller team ran into the worst case of tough breaks we ever saw befall a puck team in Tuesday night's game and so are out to knot the series tonight.

Incidentally the fans really go for their hockey over around Wellington-on-the-Lake, where a gate of $116.00 was taken in Tuesday night with prices of ten and fifteen cents being charged.

It was really like old times to see the McGuire brothers (all three of 'em), Barney Smith, Bob Hull, Murney Green and Johnnie Kerr out playing hockey in the City Industrial loop last night. Maybe the class of hockey wasn't quite equivalent to that of the N.H.L. but the boys were battling all along the line, which was proven in the second game when the Belleville-Sargent rallied to tie Corbins at 4-4. However, it was different in the first game as Josh Maracle's "Cement-makers" showed little respect for the Belleville juniors from the Alemite and won to lead the loop.

MASONIC ORCHESTRA OBSERVES TWENTY-FIRST BIRTHDAY

Members of Eureka Lodge A.F. & A.M. No. 283 paid tribute to its orchestra last night in Masonic Hall when that organization observed the twenty-first anniversary of its birth.

Appropriately enough, entertainment at the fourth degree was provided by the musical guests of honor augmented by vocal solos by Harold Howard. The new Hinchey-Carver song "Hail to Canada," received its Masonic debut at the function while the second number composed by the same two men "We'll Put the Blitz," was used for the first time as a community song. Mr. Howard was also heard in the "Trumpeter."

The time-honored ceremony of cutting the birthday cake was conducted by Mr. Reg. Hinchey. The toast to the orchestra was proposed by Wor. Bro. R. D. Adams and responded to by Mr. Leo Riggs.

Incidentally the orchestra was originated by the late W.B. Riggs, father of Mr. Riggs, twenty-one years ago. The late Mr. W. B. Riggs was one of Belleville's famous musicians. He conducted a band here for a number of years.

ONLY THREE MARRIAGE LICENCES ISSUED HERE IN FEBRUARY

Young Dan Cupid failed to show any definite results with his bow and arrow during the month of February, despite the fact that the male of the species has the moral hazard of Leap Year against him.

Only three couples marched to the altar here during the Leap Year month, according to vital statistics released today by City Hall officials. Old Man Stork fared better, forty-three births being registered. Deaths were noted at 24.

SNEAK THIEVES ENTER DRESSING ROOM

During the progress of a friendly hockey game between the members of the R.C.A.F. and the Midland Regiment at the Hume Arena last evening, sneak thieves entered the dressing room of the Midland Regiment soldier team and rifled the clothing of the players. Sergeant Chas. Puffer reported the loss of a wrist watch, while Pte. Raper's wallet was taken and Pte. Gilbert reported the loss of 50c. City police were notified of the break-in. Incidentally the R.C.A.F. Aircraftsmen won the game by a 3-2 score.

ONLY TRAFFIC CASES HEARD IN COURT

Traffic cases only were heard in today's session of County Police Court held at the Court House before His Worship Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C. Pleas of guilty in writing were accepted in all cases except one, which was enlarged for one week. The only persons in the court were His Worship, Acting Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson, who presented the cases, Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine and two reporters to constitute the smallest court to be held locally in many months.

MINOR ACCIDENTS REPORTED IN CITY

A slippery coating of ice combined with a heavy fall of soft snow late this morning, made driving conditions precarious throughout the city at the noon hour today with many minor accidents occurring as motors slid into one another at street intersections. Two motorists were observed discussing the damage of dented fenders at the corner of North Front and Moira Streets where their motors "bumped" as brakes proved useless, while just a moment later, at the same intersection, Harold Huffman of 16 North Front, had the rear wheel of his bicycle badly damaged, when he cut across in front of a motor driven by Mr. Kenneth Bird of Trent Road, owing to the slippery pavement. Mr. Bird had no chance whatever to avoid the young lad and Harold is faced with the proposition of repairing his bicycle.

FAINTS IN COURT, SUIT DROPPED

Chicago, March 14.—(AP)—Dr. Max Thorek sued Francis Kuehles for $250 for an emergency appendectomy and named as co-defendants Kuehles' wife, and brother, Vincent. While on the stand, Vincent, who was gassed during the first Great War, collapsed from a heart attack. Dr. Thorek hurriedly administered stimulants and at his request, the suit was dropped.

243 L.C. ACCIDENTS

Ottawa, March 14.—(CP)—There were 243 level crossing accidents in Canada during 1939, in which 102 persons were killed and 348 injured, the Board of Transport Commissioners said in its annual report released today. Of these, 149 occurred during the daytime and in 52 instances crossings were protected by watchmen, gates, bells and wig-wag signals.

MARMORA BOY FRACTURES ARM

Ten-year-old Donald McNutt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac McNutt of Marmora, sustained a fractured arm while at play yesterday. The lad was brought to Belleville, where the fracture was reduced at the local hospital.

BOY CUT IN EYE BY HOCKEY SKATE

While engaged at hockey, 19-year-old Ross Parks of Bloomfield, sustained eye and facial injuries when struck by a skate worn by another player on Tuesday. Young Parks was brought to Belleville where Dr. James Forrester attended the wounds. Although the face and eye were cut it is not believed the sight of the eye will be affected.

FLAG AT HALF-STAFF FOR FORMER ALDERMAN

The flag on top of the City Hall was flying at half-staff yesterday in respect of the late Charles Whalen, who was an alderman in this city some years ago.

NO DAMAGE FROM CHIMNEY FIRE

Overheated stove pipes, causing a chimney blaze at 290 Albert Street occasioned the fire department a short run yesterday but with the use of chemicals the trouble was soon remedied, reported fire officials this morning, who stated that no damage resulted.

TRANSPORT SCHEDULES SERIOUSLY DISRUPTED

Motor transport drivers were experiencing untold difficulties in maintaining their schedules this morning as highways throughout the district were in an extremely icy condition as the result of last night's sleet and rain storm which froze to the pavement as it fell. Transports due in the city at four o'clock this morning had not yet arrived at eight while heavy trucks travelling from Toronto were also hours behind schedule.

Conditions in the city, however, were made easier through the liberal use of sand on the hills and intersections, as the Department of Public Works had their employees out early with the city sander. Sidewalks also were in a treacherous condition with pedestrians having to exercise extreme caution in negotiating the streets.

Flu Epidemic Among Troops Practically Gone

With the British Forces in France, Mar. 14 (CP-Reuters)—The 'flu epidemic which swept over the British Expeditionary Forces in the early part of this year has now practically gone. It was mild and brief in form but the suddenness of its onslaught earned it the name of "Blitzflu".

The epidemic provided experience for the Royal Army Medical Corps under active service conditions. As there is no proper accommodation for an influenza case, Private Thomas Atkins must be evacuated.

At the height of the influenza epidemic, ambulance trains were leaving the casualty clearing stations for base hospitals every other day. Now there is not more than a train every four days.

A high officer of the R.A.M.C. said that the health of the B.E.F. on the whole has been extraordinarily good. Only about two per cent of the present force has been evacuated to the United Kingdom because of illness since the war began.

With the continuous growth of the B.E.F., the R.A.M.C. has been steadily increasing in size and seven new hospitals have been completed at bases.

Walking Hazardous On Slippery Streets

In another of his fickle moods, Old Man Winter sent Belleville slipping and sliding to its many occupations on its figurative haunches this morning.

Overnight quirks in the atmospheric situation saw a treacherous film of ice covering sidewalk, street and pavement today that brought out all the balancing ability of pedestrians and automobiles.

Two streamlined stenographers squealed in dismay and partial fright when daintily-shod feet suddenly disappeared from beneath them in the general direction of the sky, while descending Bridge Street Hill early this morning. No damage was done except a run in a silk pair of hose and a few ruffles in feminine dignity.

On the east hill, a good-natured gentleman, noted for his rotundity, suddenly catapulted out into the street from the icy stretches of the sidewalk. He bounced once, twice, then came to an upright position. No damage was done here, but an accident might have easily occurred had an automobile been passing at the time.

Horses on delivery wagons found the going tough, but faithful Dobbin managed to keep his collective feet until later in the morning when heavy coats of sand and cinders alleviated the treacherous conditions.

Highways and other travel arteries were said to be in a dangerous condition throughout the night. Roads in the back areas were reported to be dangerous and careful driving is advocated.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Finland's submission to the Russian peace seems to spell an anxious time ahead for other Scandinavian states. There is no assurance that Russia may not advance the same pretexts used in the case of Finland for demanding territorial and other concessions from Norway and Sweden.

Perhaps the greatest hope of the Norwegians and Swedes lies in the fact that Russia may have learned a lesson from the war with Finland. It was a costly affair for Russia in men, materials and prestige. While the results achieved may be considered substantial they fall short of compensating for the cost.

The Finnish achievement of holding off the Red army for 3½ months and inflicting serious reverses on several occasions shows earlier estimates of Russian military power were exaggerated. Small nations still tremble before Russia's might but states such as Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy no longer fear it.

One Italian interpretation of the peace pact is interesting because until recently Russia refused to deal with the Finnish Government, announcing peace would be made only with the Soviet constituted Communist Government of Finland. The Italian commentation describes the peace as a compromise, due to the fact the Soviet system was in danger of breaking up should the war go on.

'Moral Embargoes' Against Russia Maintained by U.S. Despite Peace

Washington, March 14—(AP)—With President Roosevelt indicating uneasiness over Finland's future, the United States will continue to regard Russia warily for some time.

This became apparent today when it was learned from a reliable source that the "moral embargoes" against Russia, imposed by Mr. Roosevelt and the state department after the Soviet invasion of Finland, would be maintained indefinitely regardless of the Baltic peace.

The president laid down the "moral embargo" on the shipment of airplanes and parts to Russia early in December. This was later amplified by the state department to include materials going into the manufacture of airplanes, such as molybdenum and aluminum and also plants and plans for the manufacture of aviation gasoline.

No move to lift any of these embargoes will be made for some time, it was learned, because:

1. Officials are not sure that Russia will not again move against a Finland weakened by the Peace Treaty, as Germany did against Czecho-Slovakia weakened by the detachment of the Sudetenland.

2. Nor are they sure that Russia now that her hands are freed by the Peace Treaty with Finland, will not move against other nations, perhaps in the Balkans or the near east.

3. Nor are they sure that materials sent to Russia are not going through to Germany.

President Roosevelt's concern over the Finnish situation was expressed in a statement issued by the White House. He said: "The ending of this war does not yet clarify the inherent right of small nations to the maintenance of their integrity against attack by superior force.

"The people of Finland, by their unexcelled valor and strong resistance in the face of overwhelming armed forces, have won the moral right to live in everlasting peace and independence in the land they have so bravely defended."

The Finnish people and government, Mr. Roosevelt continued, again have increased "the respect and warm regard in which they are held by the people and government of the United States, even though it is clear that by virtue of an attack by a neighbor many times stronger, they have been compelled to yield territory, and to accept a material weakening of their own future defence of their independence."

Fined 20 Dollars On Common Assault

London Man Denies Assaulting Girl When She Applied at His Office

London, Ont., March 14—(CP)—Dr. Lloyd Alfred Moffatt, 52-year-old London dentist, was found guilty by City Magistrate D. B. Menzies today of common assault on Madeline Miller, 19-year-old Leamington, Ont., girl and was fined $20 or 30 days in jail.

The hearing was held a week ago, with decision reserved. Explaining he had given a written judgment, Magistrate Menzies made no comment on the case.

Complainant was publicized in news photos recently as the "snow Queen of Essex County." Dr. Moffatt offered her a position as "dental assistant and private secretary."

Miss Miller charged that when she applied at Dr. Moffatt's office on Feb. 13 the dentist manhandled her.

In his defence, Dr. Moffatt denied any assault.

Letters which Dr. Moffatt wrote to Miss Miller were the highlight of the trial. In his first letter Dr. Moffatt said he wanted a secretary "experience unnecesary but made of real stuff."

In one of the other two letters the dentist told the Leamington snow queen he needed a dental assistant "like you, vibrating with energy like myself, too, mentally alert."

2 NEW CENTRES FOUND IN BRAIN SCIENTISTS TOLD

Doctors Also Discover That Red Blood Cells of Body Continue Alive as Long as Three Weeks Outside Body

(By Stephen J. McDonough Associated Press Science Writer)

New Orleans, March 14 (AP)—Discovery of two new brain centres and that human blood cells cling to life for as long as three weeks outside the body were reported here today.

At an opening session of the federated biological societies annual meeting a group of scientists from Yale University announced they had found in champanzees the areas of the brain which control touch and the regions which "fire" or stimulate reactions of the body.

Both discoveries are highly important in the diagnosis of brain tumors and mental disorders because they enable a physician to localize a disturbance.

Red Blood Cells Maintain Grip

In another report, Dr. R. C. Ingraham and Dr. A. L. Cohn of the University of Illinois Medical School, Chicago, Ill., declared that the red blood cells of the body continue to breathe and keep a tenacious grip on their ability to reproduce for three weeks or more.

Samples of blood from Cook County Hospital "blood bank" still showed vigorous activity even though they had been chilled during the entire period thus showing for the first time why preserved blood is successful in transfusions and why the new method of "cold hibernation" of people is successful in disease treatment.

Finding New Brain Centres

One of the new brain centres was found by teaching chimpanzees, man's nearest animal relative, to differentiate the weight and smoothness of objects. Then operations were performed on the animals' brains and the areas which control these functions were found to be about midway in the brain near the top of the skull.

The other centre was discovered by injecting small amounts of strychnine in various parts of the brain and measuring the electrical signals sent out by the cortex, or brain covering.

INVITED TO HEAR SECRET OF TYPE OF 'AIR' BOMB

Similar Device Said to Have Been Used in Destroying Buildings and Hundreds of People Without Even Striking Them

Washington, March 14—(AP)—Military and Naval Committees of Congress were invited today to a joint session Monday to hear the secret of a type of "air" bomb reputed to have destroyed whole buildings and hundreds of people in Barcelona without ever striking them.

While United States military experts frequently have expressed doubt that the bomb was practicable, one of its inventors, Lester P. Barlow, of Baltimore, claimed to have eliminated its questionable features.

Stenographic notes of his description of the new liquid oxygen and carbon explosive, which Barlow believes to be Hitler's "secret weapon," were burned dramatically by the Senate Military Affairs Committee so details would not be divulged.

The committee directed chairman Morris Sheppard to invite the Senate Naval Affairs and House of Representatives Naval and Military Affairs Committee to the session Monday to hear Barlow, along with the secretaries of war and navy.

Sheppard said the meeting probably would discuss co-operative measures to give Barlow's bomb a thorough test.

Barlow said that liquir oxygen-carbon bombs were dropped by German aviators over Barcelona in a test one day in 1938. The mere power of their explosion in the air was able to kill and wreck he declared.

Dressmaker Suits Lead Easter Fashion Parade

Coat and Suit Photos courtesy CBS

Two Spring Fashion leaders! Little dressmaker suit in Crown Tested spun rayon and wool twill. Princess reefer ensemble in flannel-like Crown Tested spun rayon and wool fabric. Worn by Columbia Broadcasting Stars.

Mat courtesy G. Howard Hodge

This is one Spring when every woman, no matter what her figure, can walk down the avenue in a suit. For jackets vary from the new, semi-fitted bolero ones for the very small to thigh length tunic jackets which are intended for the very tall. And there is such variety of fitted jackets in between these extremes that figures of varying widths as well as heights can be appropriately tailored.

There is a trim but very feminine look to most of the suits with just an occasional military type to lend interest. The revival of twill, often satin bound in little fitted jackets or longer, 1910 single-link styles for mature women, cries for frilly lingerie blouses. And since the recent Paris openings emphasized this feminine appeal, in a restrained well-bred way, you'll be sure to make no mistake if you choose satin- bound twill and frills. This is most effective in black and is even more exciting with a red carnation or a red touch to a black hat.

After navy and black, you will find more grey than any other color. This looks extremely new, especially with white as an accent. Often the jackets of such suits are grey and white stripes, while the skirts are solid grey, and with a white pique blouse, white gloves and a white pique band on a grey felt hat, you will present a very crisp appearance. These greys occur in flannel frequently, but tweed and soft dressmaker woollens are seen too.

One of the Fifth avenue shops, which is promoting a new color, "burnished brown", has suits in this color too which seem a little out of the ordinary in the Spring and are an answer to the women who would rather wear brown than any color, no matter what's in fashion.

There is no dearth of pockets on the new suits. Often they are patched affairs, calling attention to themselves by the addition of metal buttons. Sometimes they appear on the skirts only, which hang beneath brief jackets. Other times they are embroidered on the jacket in a rather peasant fashion, as in the case of a grey flannel with plaid hat and bag.

Skirts are slim or slightly flared, seldom so full, however, as those of last year.

Stripes run diagonally and vertically, which is good news to those with figure problems, and you will find occasional checks, especially in black and white, but much bigger than the shepherd size.

If you choose a grey suit, you'll find that felt and fabric hats look best, but with blue or navy twills and woollens, straw or kidskin sailors or bretons seem ideal.

Taking the Air For Beauty

By HELEN FOLLETT

GIVE yourself the air, lady, give yourself the air! We desire the attention of those girls whose chests are not full and whose shoulders are narrow. If they're going to wear the newest duds which show fitted blouses, they just mustn't look "like that".

Breathing exercises, taken twice daily before an open window, will increase the flexibility of the ribs, expand the lung box, help the breasts to a state of normal development. Nearly all flat-chested girls are flat-busted. What deep breathing does to put the carnation bloom in the cheeks no girl need be told.

With fresh air drawn into the lungs to the lowest cells, the oxygen inhaled disinfects the stale air. It rushes through the lobes as a north wind tears through a house with the windows open. Forced exhalations remove stagnant residual deposits, it isn't enough to inhale deeply, one must exhale vigorously.

Stand tall, tummy held in, hands on the hips. When taking a breath, lift the chest and pull in the abdominal muscles' Have your lung-washing session in the morning before getting under the shower, again at night before you hop into bed. Don't fancy this is an old fogy suggestion. Many women realize that their lovely complexions are due to air-washed lungs. Shallow breathers are always pale that oily cosmetics promote a

One beauty superstition has it growth of superfluous hair. Nothing to it. Fuzzers on the feminine face are due to some slight glandular disturbance, it is believed.

Surveys made by electrolysis operators show that the worst cases are women who have never used cosmetics at all. It is a dreadful affliction; no one should bear with it because the electric needle kills the papilla from which the new shaft protrudes.

BRITAIN COMBATS THREAT OF ECONOMIC BLOC

Attempt to Drive German Securities From British Marts

Britain Will Attempt to Increase Reserves of Foreign Exchange for Purchases of War Supplies and Mobilizing Resources of British and French Colonial Empires

ITALY'S ATTITUDE

Times Suggests Diverting From Civilian Consumption One-Half of Current Production in Order to Devote it to Winning the War

London, March 15—(CP)—Great Britain brought three new weapons into her economic front line today to meet the threat of a German-Russian-Italian bloc aimed at capturing her trade.

Her effort is intended to fortify the British position in the economic struggle by increasing her reserves of foreign exchange for purchases of war supplies, mobilizing the resources of the British and French colonial empires and driving German securities from British money markets.

These measures coincided with reports in Belgrade that Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop of Germany had suggested to Italy formation of a German-Italian-Russian economic bloc with "all small states between these powers."

Migrating birds and spring weather! No season ever seems so welcome as spring, not even the cooling autumn after a hot summer. This is partly because of our great interest in the spring activities of nature. The arrival of migrating birds is one spring feature everyone notices. First to come are the redwinged blackbird, bluebird and woodpeckers. Birds seem to come in waves. In a thirty-day period, half of the arrivals came in two days. These waves of bird immigration appear to have considerably to do with the weather, as many came with a coming low barometric condition which was accompanied by higher temperatures and southerly winds.

Occupation of Poland Most 'Barbarous,' Says Cardinal

Special Day of Prayer for Deliverance of Poland Will be Held in Quebec

Quebec, March 15—(CP)—The German and Russian occupation of Poland was "one of the most barbarous crimes the ages have ever known," Rodrigue Cardinal Villeneuve said at a meeting here last night. The meeting was held under the auspices of Quebec City and Laval University to express public sympathy for Poland.

Humanity as a whole should work as it can to remove from the world "such unrighteous situations and such tragic victories of brutal force," said the Cardinal. He announced that a special day of prayer for the deliverance of Poland will be held here shortly.

The dead — Mrs. Hazelle E. Martin, Miss Robena Dickinson, Mrs. H. R. Eley, Miss Lucy Walton, Tommy Charity, the small son of Mrs. Winifred Charity and Edward Martin, 21.

Counties Plan An Appeal to Supreme Court

Cobourg, Ont., March 15—(CP)—Court costs have already exceeded the $1,176 in dispute between the Wooler School Board and the Counties of Northumberland and Durham, it was said today.

The School Board claims from the counties the cost of transporting pupils to the Wooler school. The counties claim that the Wooler School is a public school and has no statutory rights to transport continuation school pupils at the expense of the counties.

Action for the $1,176 was begun in 1937. The Supreme Court of Ontario upheld the counties. The Appeal Court reversed this finding. Now the counties plan an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada.

With the government swinging into renewed attacks on Conservative Leader Manion's National Government plan, the Dominion election campaign gained spirited momentum today.

Lacking Federal sensations, the campaign has been fought chiefly on issues enunciated when it started and once again National Government is receiving particular attention.

The Liberals held a large rally in Toronto last night and Prime Minister Mackenzie King took the occasion to oppose National Government. He said a combination of all parties to form such a government would mean abandonment of opposition and "we would find ourselves with a class war as well as national war."

CAPTAIN GIVES CREDIT TO SON

Crew of British Trawler Destroys German Sub After 17-Hour Running Fight

London, March 15.—(CP)—The captain of a British trawler that destroyed a German submarine in a 17-hour running fight on the ocean surface gave the credit today to his son, the trawler's chief engineer.

Harry Westerden, the captain, said the submarine was detected recently off the Scottish coast. Depth charges brought it to the surface, where it attempted to escape while firing deck guns at the trawler.

The trawler was hit and the engine room flooded. In knee-deep water Chief Engineer George Leonard Westerden, 31, forced the speed up to 18 1-2 knots, although the top speed rating was 15.

"The vibration was terrific and you could see the engine foundations shifting", said Captain Westerden. "Throughout the chase the vessels pounded each other with shells. We got within fully effective distance and sent the submarine to the bottom with gunfire. There were no survivors from her."

In a sinking condition, the trawler managed to reach port, where it was found the engines had shifted five inches off their supports.

Engineer Westerden was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal "for gallantry and devotion to duty".

Heavy Allied Orders for Explosives Expected to Expand U. S. Industry

Washington, March 15—(AP)—Heavy Allied orders for explosives appeared likely today to produce an expansion of United States powder manufacturing facilities comparable to that now taking place in the aircraft industry.

Great Britain and France, already contemplating purchases in excess of $100,000,000, were represented by munitions authorities as ready to finance new factories as they did in 1914-17, before the United States entered the First Great War.

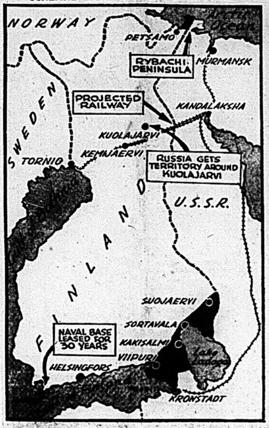
The first evidence of this was the disclosure yesterday of a $1,427,000 Franco-British advance to the Atlas Powder Company of Wilmington, Del., to increase facilities for manufacture of TNT, the explosive used in artillery shells.

The concern was said to have contracted already for doubling the capacity of its plants in Missouri.

Negotiations have been in progress for months with another firm for a $25,000,000 powder plant financed by France. Other negotiations have hung fire for weeks.

Manufacture of powder on this side of the Atlantic offers an advantage in that its weight for shipment is only about a twelfth of its component raw materials. There is somewhat similar advantages in transporting completed shells or high explosives such as TNT, ammonium nitrate and picric,

FINLAND SIGNS BITTER PEACE PACT



After three and a half months of a defence that will go down in history, Finland has signed a peace pact with Soviet Russia, the terms of which are so harsh that Britain refused to transmit them to Finland when requested to do so several weeks ago. In her stead, Sweden, Finland's neighbor, acted as "postman" for the stiff Russian demands. By the peace pact, Finland lost the whole of the Karelian Isthmus, which includes the Mannerheim Line. She also lost Lake Ladoga and Hanko peninsula which will in the future be a Russian naval base. In the north, Russia also gained wide concessions. Russian troops will withdraw from Petsamo, but Russian goods must be allowed duty free entry across Finland to and from Norway. A Soviet railway is also to be built across Finland linking the White Sea to the Gulf of Bothnia. In addition strategic islands in the Gulf of Finland have now become Russian property.

'50,000 or More Finns Died or Were Wounded Not for Finland Alone'

—Vaino Tanner

Helsinki, March 15 (AP via Radio)—Vaino Tanner, Finnish Foreign Minister, declared today that the more than 50,000 Finns who fell in the war with Russia died or were wounded "in the defence of Western civilization".

"Their sacrifice was not for Finland alone," he declared.

Tanner, in a broadcast to the Western Hemisphere, said "the war has destroyed property worth hundreds of millions of dollars, and although we lose much by the peace terms we lose more in human values".

"Neither the material help we received nor sympathy was sufficient to save us from superior power", he said.

"Only a few thousand brave men had time to join our ranks and although others were ready to come to our aid we could not wait for them but were compelled to come to terms".

He described the destruction caused by air raids, the difficulties of caring for the homeless and the wounded.

"For them we must find a livelihood and a place of shelter. You know how hard it is to leave a place you love. . . . The only consolation they feel is that they still belong to the race for which they fought."

Still, he continued, Finland will continue to fight to build up a nation.

DEATH IN PLANE CALLED SUICIDE

Pilot Joseph Rosemarin in Hospital After Engaging in Fight With Passenger

Jersey City, N. J., March 15—(AP)—The death of a man tentatively identified as Emanuel Eisenberg, 35, of New York, who was killed yesterday when a small training plane fell into New York Bay following a struggle between passenger and pilot, was recorded by police today as "simply a case of suicide."

Police placed a guard around the hospital room of pilot Joseph Rosemarin, 38, where he was under treatment for shock and submersion, after a fugitive from justice warrant was lodged against him by New York authorities.

Police Inspector Henry Gautier said the warrant contained a charge of felonious assault, accusing the aviator of hitting the passenger with a pair of pliers during the wild flight. Jersey City police said they believed the charge was "purely a technical one" which is usually filed against operators of vehicles in cases of accidental deaths

MONTREAL VISITED BY HEAVY STORM

Communication Facilities Hampered and Damage Quite Heavy

Montreal, March 15.—(CP)—The worst snowstorm of the season and one of the most severe in years played havoc today with transportation and communication facilities in Quebec province. There was no immediate estimate of the damage but it was expected to be heavy. An improvement in conditions was anticipated during the day.

The telegraph and telephone companies appeared to be the most severely hit as the storm laid a blanket of more than nine inches of snow over a wide area of the province, crippled traffic in Montreal and delayed plane, train and bus schedules. There was no telephone communication between Montreal and Quebec the Laurentian area north of Montreal was "lost" completely.

C. P. PASSENGER TRAIN CRASHES INTO ENGINE

Eleven Persons Injured, Four of Them Seriously, Near Medicine Hat, Alta.

3 COACHES DERAILED

Several Hundred Feet of Track Torn Up and Roadbed Turned Into Ploughed Field

Medicine Hat, Alta., March 15—(CP)—Eleven persons were injured. Four of them seriously, when No. 4 Canadian Pacific Railway passenger train from Calgary crashed head-on into a shunting engine early today. The engine tender, mail, baggage and express cars of the passenger train were derailed.

Several hundred feet of track were torn up and the roadbed turned into a semblance of a freshly ploughed field. The mail car and all its contents were burned. The accident occurred at Dennis Siding, 20 miles west of Medicine Hat, South-Eastern Alberta.

Engineer of shunting engine A. Foulston, Medicine Hat, fractured right elbow and leg, severe shock.

Fireman of passenger engine W. Newell, Calgary, possible broken leg, possible fractured skull, and lacerated scalp, left ear and jaw, severe shock.

Engineer of passenger engine, O. Sinclair, Calgary, fracture of right kneecap, lacerations of scalp, bruised chest, severe shock.

F. Hokey, Calgary, mail car, lacerations of left hand and scalp.

Porter, name unknown, severe lacerations to head.

Among the passengers injured was W. T. McGrew, Toronto, strained neck muscles.

The pusher engine operated by engineer A. Foulston and fireman S. E. Slansky left Medicine Hat for Dennis Siding where it was to remain until the passanger train passed. In some manner the pusher engine was delayed.

Engine Crew Jumps

When engineer Foulston saw the headlight of the passenger engine approaching at a speed estimated at nearly 70 miles an hour, he shouted to the fireman to jump. Both leaped clear. The fireman received only minor bruises.

Engineer Sinclair saw the headlight of the oncoming engine and grabbed the emergency brakes but they failed to take hold before the collision occurred.

The force of the impact was terrific. The pusher engine was literally telescoped to half its size. It was thrown back more than 200 yards but remained upright on the roadbed.

The passenger engine, after tearing up several hundred feet of track, rolled over on its side in the ditch. The tender was torn loose and stood at right angles to the track.

Mail Car Catches Fire

The mail car which caught fire immediately was propelled front first into the ditch and was followed by the express and baggage cars.

The rest of the train which included all the passenger cars remained upright on the tracks. The front wheels of the first passenger coach rested only a few feet from

Guests Leap From Upper Windows, Many Injured

Firemen Search Within Avonmore Hotel for Further Possible Victims

LADDERS IN RESCUE

Many Guests were 'Crazy' With Fear, Says Airman, Who, With His Companion, Aided in Rescues—Smoke Very Dense

Toronto, Mar. 15 (CP).—Firemen at noon today were searching the ruins of the Avonmore Hotel, Jarvis street, for further victims of a fire that is known to have taken three lives and to have injured a score of persons. Property damage was estimated at $40,000.

The dead are: Mrs. Nellie Gibson, Toronto, James Hart, Toronto, and a man tentatively identified as R. Chester, 50, of Aurora, Ont. He had been previously identified as Donald Chester, Richmond Hill, Ont.

William Gifford, another guest at the 90-year-old hotel, is in hospital in a serious condition. A dozen others are suffering from serious burns or injuries received when they jumped from second or third storey windows.

Arthur Oswald, night clerk, noticed flames in the dining room shortly after midnight. He dashed upstairs to ring an alarm and then went from room to room to warn guests, at the same time shouting "fire" loudly enough to warn those on the third floor.

Holes Chopped Through Roof.

Firemen from seven stations chopped holes in the ice-covered roof to make way for their hose. When the firemen arrived, guests were already leaping from the windows.

Oswald twice ran back into the burning building to give warning to any guests who may not have heard his first shouts. Firemen said Oswald's clothes were on fire when he made his final exit.

"It was just like a puff of smoke at first," he said from the hospital bed where he is being treated for burns. "Then the flames licked like mad along the halls. I could hardly keep ahead of them."

The hotel today was little more than a mass of tangled, ice-coated ruins. Some guests saved nothing but the clothes they wore. Some fled to the street in barefoot and in night clothes.

Guests Leap Into Nets.

Firemen saved some guests with ladders. Others leaped into nets.

Gifford is said to have been burned when he sought to give warning to other guests. He had ample time to run to safety himself but chose to rescue others first.

As firemen sought to bring the blaze under control, most ceilings in the hotel collapsed, their supports burned away. Yet when the fire was over there were still several guest rooms with their curtains intact.

Airmen Fred Hichon and George Vallance were cruising near the hotel on military police duty when the firemen passed them.

They followed and took a leading part in the rescues of three fear-paralyzed women from the top floor of the hotel. The third woman they rescued was hanging from the corner of the building.

FINNISH ARMY BEGINS TO LEAVE BATTLE FRONTS

Daily Marches Scheduled Until New Frontiers Are Reached

Helsinki, Mar. 15 (AP).—The Finnish army slogged through the snows today in funeral retreat, beginning its withdrawal from the fronts it so stubbornly defended in 3½ months of war but which now are ceded to Soviet Russia.

Ahead of the soldiers there hurried 100,000 dispossessed civilians. They travelled by automobile, wagon and train or on foot, herding their livestock before them and carrying bundles that were the salvage of personal property.

These 100,000 bring to 460,000 the number who must find new homes. Half a million already are refugees, but 140,000 of them are from battered territories which Finland retains and to which they will be able to return.

While the Red army held its positions, marking time until Finnish troops have fallen back the required seven kilometres (about 4½ miles) in one day, the Finnish withdrawal started at 10 a.m. along a zigzag 226-mile front in the southeast, extending from the Virolahti Archipelago on the Fulf of Finland to the Russian frontier northeast of Lake Ladoga.

These daily marches, on a schedule provided in connection with Tuesday's peace treaty, will continue until the newly-narrowed Finnish frontiers are crossed. The entire Karelian Isthmus and the area northeast of Lake Ladoga must be cleared by March 26. Withdrawal from other ceded areas north of Lieksa and in eastern Finland will begin at 10 a.m. tomorrow.

The garrison from Taipale, eastern end of the Mannerheim Line, will have the longest march—about 100 milometres (62 miles).

The hollow shell of Viipuri, once the metropolis of the Karelian Isthmus, will be one of the first places to be occupied by the Russians, for they already are in its outskirts and may move up tonight as soon as the Finns have put seven kilometres between them. (The Russian Command had claimed Viipuri was occupied five hours before hostilities ended at 11 a.m., March 13.)

Juho Koivisto, assistant Minister of Agriculture in charge of moving the homeless civilians, said they were not required to leave the ceded territories, but that practically all of them were leaving. About 2,000 persons are remaining, however, at Hanko, leased to Russia for a naval base.

Hip-Pocket Oxygen Flask Designed To Save Lives of Military Fliers

New Orleans, La., March 15—(AP)—A new hip-pocket oxygen flask and a new face mask designed to save the lives of military fliers were exhibited today before the meeting of the Federated Biological Societies.

Dr. Walter Boothby of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., who developed the new devices in cooperation with Captain Harry Armstrong of the United States Army Air Corps' Material Division, declared the new equipment is designed to prevent a pilot inadvertently "committing suicide" if he accidentally opens his mouth at high altitudes.

If a pilot flying an airplane at the present "ceilings" of around 35-000 feet does not have oxygen he will die a quick violent death. This is prevented in the newer types of fighting ships by either sealed pressure cabins or oxygen masks. With the old type of mask a member of the ship's crew could breathe through his mouth and one gasp would be his last.

The new type mask, which resembles a hog's snout equipped with a sponge rubber valve, keeps both the nose and mouth covered, with oxygen fed from a pressure tank.

The hip-pocket bottle of oxygen was developed to ensure the necessary supply if pilots are forced to bail out from high altitudes. It fits into the pocket, is connected by a rubber tube to the mask, and provides enough oxygen to drift by parachute from a height of five or more miles down to a safe altitude for normal breathing.

Several friendly foreign governments have already expressed interest in the new equipment.

ITALY'S ATTITUDE

Times Suggests Diverting From Civilian Consumption One-Half of Current Production in Order to Devote it to Winning the War

London, March 15—(CP)—Great Britain brought three new weapons into her economic front line today to meet the threat of a German-Russian-Italian bloc aimed at capturing her trade.

Her effort is intended to fortify the British position in the economic struggle by increasing her reserves of foreign exchange for purchases of war supplies, mobilizing the resources of the British and French colonial empires and driving German securities from British money markets.

These measures coincided with reports in Belgrade that Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop of Germany had suggested to Italy formation of a German-Italian-Russian economic bloc with "all small states between these powers."

Jersey City police said they believed the charge was "purely a technical one" which is usually filed against operators of vehicler in cases of accidental deaths.

MONTREAL VISITED BY HEAVY STORM

Communication Facilities Hampered and Damage Quite Heavy

Montreal, March 15.— (CP)—The worst snowstorm of the season and one of the most severe in years played havoc today with transportation and communication facilities in Quebec province. There was no immediate estimate of the damage but it was expected to be heavy. An improvement in conditions was anticipated during the day.

The telegraph and telephone companies appeared to be the most severely hit as the storm laid a blanket of more than nine inches of snow over a wide area of the province, crippled traffic in Montreal and delayed plane, train and bus schedules. There was no telephone communication between Montreal and Quebec the Laurentian area north of Montreal was "lost" completely.

C. P. PASSENGER TRAIN CRASHES INTO ENGINE

Eleven Persons Injured, Four of Them Seriously, Near Medicine Hat, Alta.

3 COACHES DERAILED

Several Hundred Feet of Track Torn Up and Roadbed Turned Into Ploughed Field

Medicine Hat, Alta., March 15 — (CP)—Eleven persons were injured. Four of them seriously, when No. 4 Canadian Pacific Railway passenger train from Calgary crashed head-on into a shunting engine early today. The engine tender, mail, baggage and express cars of the passenger train were derailed.

Several hundred feet of track were torn up and the roadbed turned into a semblance of a freshly ploughed field. The mail car and all its contents were burned. The accident occurred at Dennis Siding, 20 miles west of Medicine Hat, South-Eastern Alberta.

Engineer of shunting engine A. Foulston, Medicine Hat, fractured right elbow and leg, severe shock.

Fireman of passenger engine W. Newell, Calgary, possible broken leg, possible fractured skull, and lacerated scalp, left ear and jaw, severe shock.

Engineer of passenger engine, C. Sinclair, Calgary, fracture of right kneecap, lacerations of scalp, bruised chest, severe shock.

F. Hokey, Calgary, mail car, lacerations of left hand and scalp.

Porter, name unknown, severe lacerations to head.

Among the passengers injured was W. T. McGrew, Toronto, strained neck muscles.

The pusher engine operated by engineer A. Foulston and fireman S. E. Slansky left Medicine Hat for Dennis Siding where it was to remain until the passanger train passed. In some manner the pusher engine was delayed.

Engine Crew Jumps

When engineer Foulston saw the headlight of the passenger engine approaching at a speed estimated at nearly 70 miles an hour, he shouted to the fireman to jump. Both leaped clear. The fireman received only minor bruises.

Engineer Sinclair saw the headlight of the oncoming engine and grabbed the emergency brakes but they failed to take hold before the collision occurred.

The force of the impact was terrific. The pusher engine was literally telescoped to half its size. It was thrown back more than 200 yards but remained upright on the roadbed.

The passenger engine, after tearing up several hundred feet of track, rolled over on its side in the ditch. The tender was torn loose and stood at right angles to the track.

Mail Car Catches Fire

The mail car which caught fire immediately was propelled front first into the ditch and was followed by the express and baggage cars.

The rest of the train which included all the passenger cars remained upright on the tracks. The front wheels of the first passenger coach rested only a few feet from

Guests Leap From Upper Windows, Many Injured

Firemen Search Within Avonmore Hotel for Further Possible Victims

LADDERS IN RESCUE

Many Guests were 'Crazy' With Fear, Says Airman, Who, With His Companion, Aided in Rescues—Smoke Very Dense

Toronto, Mar. 15 (CP).—Firemen at noon today were searching the ruins of the Avonmore Hotel, Jarvis street, for further victims of a fire that is known to have taken three lives and to have injured a score of persons. Property damage was estimated at $40,000.

The dead are: Mrs. Nellie Gibson, Toronto, James Hart, Toronto, and a man tentatively identified as R. Chester, 50, of Aurora, Ont. He had been previously identified as Donald Chester, Richmond Hill, Ont.

William Gifford, another guest at the 90-year-old hotel, is in hospital in a serious condition. A dozen others are suffering from serious burns or injuries received when they jumped from second or third storey windows.

Arthur Oswald, night clerk, noticed flames in the dining room shortly after midnight. He dashed upstairs to ring an alarm and then went from room to room to warn guests, at the same time shouting "fire" loudly enough to warn those on the third floor.

Holes Chopped Through Roof.

Firemen from seven stations chopped holes in the ice-covered roof to make way for their hose. When the firemen arrived, guests were already leaping from the windows.

Oswald twice ran back into the burning building to give warning to any guests who may not have heard his first shouts. Firemen said Oswald's clothes were on fire when he made his final exit.

"It was just like a puff of smoke at first," he said from the hospital bed where he is being treated for burns. "Then the flames licked like mad along the halls. I could hardly keep ahead of them."

The hotel today was little more than a mass of tangled, ice-coated ruins. Some guests saved nothing but the clothes they wore. Some fled to the street in barefoot and in night clothes.

Guests Leap Into Nets.

Firemen saved some guests with ladders. Others leaped into nets.

Gifford is said to have been burned when he sought to give warning to other guests. He had ample time to run to safety himself but chose to rescue others first.

As firemen sought to bring the blaze under control, most ceilings in the hotel collapsed, their supports burned away. Yet when the fire was over there were still several guest rooms with their curtains intact.

Airmen Fred Hichon and George Vallance were cruising near the hotel on military police duty when the firemen passed them.

They followed and took a leading part in the rescues of three fear-paralyzed women from the top floor of the hotel. The third woman they rescued was hanging from the corner of the building.

FINNISH ARMY BEGINS TO LEAVE BATTLE FRONTS

Daily Marches Scheduled Until New Frontiers Are Reached

Helsinki, Mar. 15 (AP).—The Finnish army slogged through the snows today in funeral retreat, beginning its withdrawal from the fronts it so stubbornly defended in 3½ months of war but which now are ceded to Soviet Russia.

Ahead of the soldiers there hurried 100,000 dispossessed civilians. They travelled by automobile, wagon and train or on foot, herding their livestock before them and carrying bundles that were the salvage of personal property.

These 100,000 bring to 460,000 the number who must find new homes. Half a million already are refugees, but 140,000 of them are from battered territories which Finland retains and to which they will be able to return.

While the Red army held its positions, marking time until Finnish troops have fallen back the required seven kilometres (about 4½ miles) in one day, the Finnish withdrawal started at 10 a.m. along a zigzag 226-mile front in the southeast, extending from the Virolahti Archipelago on the Gulf of Finland to the Russian frontier northeast of Lake Ladoga.

These daily marches, on a schedule provided in connection with Tuesday's peace treaty, will continue until the newly-narrowed Finnish frontiers are crossed. The entire Karelian Isthmus and the area northeast of Lake Ladoga must be cleared by March 26. Withdrawal from other ceded areas north of Lieksa and in eastern Finland will begin at 10 a.m. tomorrow.

The garrison from Taipale, eastern end of the Mannerheim Line, will have the longest march—about 100 milometres (62 miles).

The hollow shell of Viipuri, once the metropolis of the Karelian Isthmus, will be one of the first places to be occupied by the Russians, for they already are in its outskirts and may move up tonight as soon as the Finns have put seven kilometres between them. (The Russian Command had claimed Viipuri was occupied five hours before hostilities ended at 11 a.m., March 13.)

Juho Koivisto, assistant Minister of Agriculture in charge of moving the homeless civilians, said they were not required to leave the ceded territories, but that practically all of them were leaving. About 2,000 persons are remaining, however, at Hanko, leased to Russia for a naval base.

Hip-Pocket Oxygen Flask Designed To Save Lives of Military Fliers

New Orleans, La., March 15—(AP)—A new hip-pocket oxygen flask and a new face mask designed to save the lives of military fliers were exhibited today before the meeting of the Federated Biological Societies.

Dr. Walter Boothby of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., who developed the new devices in cooperation with Captain Harry Armstrong of the United States Army Air Corps' Material Division, declared the new equipment is designed to prevent a pilot inadvertently "committing suicide" if he accidentally opens his mouth at high altitudes.

If a pilot flying an airplane at the present "ceilings" of around 35,000 feet does not have oxygen he will die a quick violent death. This is prevented in the newer types of fighting ships by either sealed pressure cabins or oxygen masks. With the old type of mask a member of the ship's crew could breathe through his mouth and one gasp would be his last.

The new type mask, which resembles a hog's snout equipped with a sponge rubber valve, keeps both the nose and mouth covered, with oxygen fed from a pressure tank.

The hip-pocket bottle of oxygen was developed to ensure the necessary supply if pilots are forced to bail out from high altitudes. It fits into the pocket, is connected by a rubber tube to the mask, and provides enough oxygen to drift by parachute from a height of five or more miles down to a safe altitude for normal breathing.

Several friendly foreign governments have already expressed interest in the new equipment.

Holly Acres Speaks at Milford, Cherry Valley

Holly Acres, M.L.A. for Carleton County, J. M. Simpson, K.C. of Napanee, National Cons. candidate Geo. Tustin, Jas. deC. Hepburn, M.L.A., H. S. Colliver, ex-M.L.A., and C. D. Sills of Napanee, addressed gatherings at Milford and Cherry Valley halls Wednesday night. About 175 were at each meeting, considered good attendances with regard to the condition of the roads.

The speaker of the evening was introduced by H. S. Colliver who said Mr. Acres was a good farmer and a successful farmer who knew farmers' problems intimately.

Quebec and West Favored.

Holly Acres took part of his thirty minutes for an explanation of the stand in this election of Premier M. F. Hepburn. No wonder "Mitch" fights Prime Minister King, said the speaker, for the Ottawa government has handed out large favors to the Western Provinces and to Quebec, while Ontario's claims and those of the Maritimes have gone unheeded. The speaker cited figures to show that Ontario, which pays half the Federal tax bills, has received very little from Ottawa in comparison to large benefits extended to more favored provinces.

Mr. Acres referred to the "cold shoulder" turned to Ontario, also by Premier King when Premier Hepburn, Col. Drew and Ontaro's Lt.-Governor, as members from Ontario of the Organization of Resources Committee, had proffered Ontario's whole-hearted co-operation to Ottawa, following the outbreak of the war. This cold shouldering had been scurvy treatment by Ottawa of Ontario's generous spirit, and it had capped the climax as far as further co-operation with Ottawa by Premier Hepburn was concerned, stated the speaker.

Conservatives Ready To Co-operate.

Mr. Acres expressed his regret to be on an electon campaign platform at the present time. He was sorry to see an election now. When the House met in January for its one-day "Mock Parliament", suddenly dissolved by Premier King, Hon. Dr. Manion had a motion on the order paper, proposing that parliament extend its term, year by term, as long as the war lasts, provided the opposition be taken into the confidence of the government in matters involving desirable co-operation, and Premier King's action in going to the country on the suggested pretexts reminds us of a dictatorship, charged Mr. Acres.

Manion Well Qualified

Mr. Acres referred to Hon. Dr. Manion's qualifications as leader. A distinguished physician and a distinguished soldier in the last war, he had added a creditable record in Parliament, being Minister of Railways from 1930 to 1936. In the face of lack of information, and alleged misrepresentation, which had placed him at some handicap in this election, now Dr. Manion proposes that radio license fees be abolished, so that, as far as the radio was concerned, at any rate, the people henceforth will feel that information is free. The state owes the people accurate information on public affairs is one of Dr. Manion's beliefs. I know, said Mr. Acres. He referred also to Dr. Manion's suggestion that there be a Minister of Youth Welfare in the next Federal Cabinet.

Elected by Minority

Premier King's government, formed as a result of the voting in 1935, obtained 42 per cent of the votes cast in that election, while candidates for the other parties received 58 per cent. of the votes. Just why, in war-time, we should be asked to carry on that kind of a system, when sacrifices are asked from all of us, irrespective of party, cannot be understood, said Mr, Acres, particularly when we may form, under Dr. Manion's leadership a National Government, and so follow the experience of other countries, when in a time of stress like the present.

George Tustin

George Tustin, the candidate said it had cost Canadian people thousands of dollars in calling the "Mock Parliament" of 1940.

He said that the impression received by the people of Canada was that Premier King had dissolved the House to escape criticism regarding Canada's unpreparedness for the present conflict and also to escape criticism regarding war contracts placed on a basis of party patronage.

It is well-known, stated the speaker, that many of Canada's enlisted men last autumn had to get along for some time without army issues of shoes, socks or other articles of clothing and that rifles issued were those of the last war. If it hadn't been for the good women of Canada knitting socks, many of the boys would have fared badly, Mr. Tustin said.

The speaker also charged great delays in receipt of assigned pay and separation allowances for dependents of enlisted men. He wished to make every allowance possible for the authorities, but he had been asked by many wives and mothers to endeavor to get cheques coming through to them, for assigned pay or separation allowances, much delayed in arriving, and it did seem very inefficient that it took a month and eight days for an acknowledgment of his letters to reach him, and much stranger still that wives and mothers still waited to receive assigned pay or separation allowances, in some cases, several months after the bread-winner had enlisted.

Mr. Tustin referred to Hon. Ian Mackenzie, once Minister of National Defence, "demoted" to be Minister of Pensions following the Bren Gun inquiry. If he was not capable in the one cabinet post, surely he was not capable in the other, Mr. Tustin urged.

The speaker urged that political favoritism should not exist in time of stress like the present. He stressed the high cost of expensive commissions appointed by the King Government.

With regard to the fighting forces, he referred to officers from the home town of the present Minister of National Defence having received appointments with military units overseas, particularly with units enlisted from rural areas.

In the leader of the National Conservative party, Hon. Dr. Manion, you have as great a leader as this country has seen for many years, now proposing to form a National Government so that Canada may feel united in this time of stress. Dr. Manion is an able man, a soldier in the last war, and a man of action. In closing, the speaker asked for the support of the audience for National Government policies. As far as I am concerned, I have given all of my time to your interests for the past several years and pledge all of my time and abilities in the same way in the forthcoming government.

W. M. Society Concluded Two-Day Session at Holloway St. Church

The topic of the Worship Service on Thursday morning was "Organized Loyalty to Christ." The service was opened with quiet music and a call to worship read by Mrs. H. B. Herrington.

Mrs. H. L. Morrison, Tweed, gave an address on "Builders of the Kingdom." She said a good builder required five characteristics.

(1) A plan or guide.

(2) Fellow workmen whose efforts he appreciates.

(3) To know his task and delight to do it well.

(4) To be an honor to his calling.

(5) To be so loyal to the work of His Kingdom that he can be fully trusted.

This inspiring task was followed by a vocal duet, "We Would be Building."

Following the worship period Miss Thomas and Mrs. Foster graced the platform and Mrs. Erle Denyes gave a resume of the executive meetings held during the year.

Mrs. Albert Lewis secretary of Associate Helpers spoke of the importance of her department with one hundred and seventy-four members and asked that greater care be used in sending in reports.

Mrs. Frank Herrington has remitted $12,675 to Branch Treasurer and she explained very carefully the expenditures of the year.

Mrs. A. H. McGuire, Community Friendship Secretary reported over 3000 people visited in homes and over 2000 in hospitals and regretted the falling down of removal slips.

Mrs. Manley Fox reported for Temperance and Christian Citizenship and urged that scrap books of clippings be made. Replies from members of parliament re temperance and social reform were read.

Mrs. Will Sills, Plainfield, sang "Beyond the Blue" with Mrs. Hubbs as accompanist.

Greetings from Mrs. Finley and Mrs. Dafoe who are holidaying in St. Petersburgh, Florida, were read.

Mrs. Albert Empey secretary of the two magazines "The Missionary Monthly" and "World Friends" reported 1198 subscriptions to M.M. and 561 for W.F. and hoped plenty more orders would come in. Splendid posters along these lines were on display.

1337 News Items Published

Mrs. E. K. Hubble, press Secretary said 1337 items of missionary news had been published in the local papers throughout the presbyterial. She spoke of scrap books and urged that several from this presbyterial be displayed in 1941 at Brockville. Remember that, beyond the pulpit and the platform, the printed word will reach thousands.

Mrs. O. S. Reddick told of the large supply of lovely clothing, knitted articles, quilts and gifts which she had the pleasure of receiving and distributing and she read several grateful letters of thanks.

Miss Thomas conducted the problem hour while the younger groups met for group conferences.

The final session was opened with a Worship Service conducted by Mrs. Fisher of Enterprise, who gave an inspiring and impressive talk on the topic "World-wide Loyalty to Christ." She said advances were being made by (1) the United Church (2) the British and Foreign Bible Society (3) world conferences such as that held at Madras (4) the World's Day of Prayer (5) Youth Conferences such as that held at Amsterdam (6) the League of Nations (7) the Christian Stature of our leading statesmen.

The service was closed by prayer and the hymn "Christ for the World," was sung.

Memorials and Resolutions

Mrs. W. S. Gordon presented the Memorials and Resolutions. It was decided that after the election a letter re the reduction of liquor consumption to aid in the successful prosecution of the war be forwarded to the Prime Minister of Canada.

A second resolution that "we, the delegates of this convention convey to our home auxiliaries, that we need every member thinking along lines of world peace, studying helps that are available in church papers and that we awaken interest in our family circle of personal responsibility and that we endeavor to increase Christian friendship in our community."

Five-Year Plan Introduced

Miss Thomas introduced the five-year organization plan giving definite ideas for getting more missionary workers, in order that more women should have their spiritual lives deepened and she gave a practical solution to this problem.

A survey of the presbyterial was given by Mrs. Spafford of Belleville, Mrs. Gordon of Madoc, Mrs. Hooper of Napanee North, Mrs. Jenkins of Napanee South, Mrs. Foster of Prince Edward.

The offering was received and dedicated by Mrs. J. L. Ross.

Mrs. Milton Robson presented the work of the Baby Bands and there are 31 Baby Bands in the presbyterial and she hoped to increase that number this year. They have 414 members and contributed over forty-eight dollars.

Mrs. Clarence Holmes presented the C.G.I.T. work in a novel way, with 21 groups and twenty six dollars raised. 1940 will be the special silver anniversary of C.G.I.T. and rallies will be held.

Clever posters were used by the Baby Band secretary, the Missionary Monthly secretary and special mention is made of the Mission Band display by the secretary, Mrs. A. McCreary, the handiwork of Band members. Scrap books were on display from the auxiliary press secretaries and the literature table was well laden with available literature.

Mrs. Semple stressed that all mail should be properly addressed.

Mission Circle

Mrs. George McKenzie presented the work of the Mission Circle Dept. and there are 13 circles in the presbyterial and she hopes to organize others. There are 203 circle girls and one of the strongest circles in the Presbyterial plans to go into a W.M.S. this year.

Mrs. A. McCreary hoped to have a mission band in every auxiliary.

Miss Thomas presided over the election and installation of officers.

The report of the Courtesy Committee was presented by Mrs. H. L. Morrison.

An invitation to hold the 1941 meeting at Trenton was accepted and the service closed with the National Anthem and the thought "The Kingdom of God is Within Us" and Rev. Newman dismissed the gathering.

Rawdon, March 15 (Special) — James Williams passed away at his late residence in Rawdon Township on Thursday, March 14th., after an illness of a few weeks' duration.

Work of the United Church Among All Nationalities Described at W. M. S. Meetings

Miss Thomas, speaking on the subject "Adventuring in Community Friendship", used lantern slides to illustrate the work of the United Church in Canada among the 70 nationalities which make up the Canadian population. Miss Thomas said "whether for good or ill, the world has come to Canada; the only native Canadians, being the 123,000 Indian population".

The question of friendship with our non-Anglo Saxon neighbours becomes more acute with European Refugees of today at our doors. The first step is to know those in your own community: are you familiar with and friendly to those of other races in your own neighborhood?

The task of the United Church in Canada is to make Canada Christian. Home Missions are an adventure in community friendship. But more than the service which we render these strangers in Canada is the opportunity we give them to worship in their own language and their own way until there comes a time when the various groups can worship together, often singing the same hymn in several different languages. Later still the children of these new Canadians unable to speak the language of their parents meet for an all Canadian service.

Still another opportunity which we make possible is that of developing into leaders. There are in the United Church 70 non-Anglo Saxon missionaries, 45 of whom are Europeans and 21 Orientals. They are no longer strangers but fellow church members and workers.

We are weaving a new web in Canada; will it be strong and beautiful, made after God's pattern?

But Home Missions are not enough. We are all called to adventure in Community Friendship. Are we showing friendship in our personal contacts. One woman said "You know, I give to Home Missions but I can't seem to learn to like the foreigners". If that is our attitude we need to be reminded of Paul's words "Though I give all my goods—and have not love it profiteth me nothing".

There are big problems making difficult our understanding of these new neighbours but the little ends of these problems are in our hearts. One has written "When her hand clasps mine race dies and friendship reigns".

Retail Merchants Are Urged To Take Lively Interest in All Affairs of Their Community

Russel T. Kelley Tells Merchants They Should Enlarge Their Trading Area in This Community

CHAMBER URGED

Best Unity Will Result From Spending a Little More Money, One With Another, Says Speaker

"A prosperous farming community means a prosperous Canada," Russell T. Kelley, President of the Russell T. Kelley Advertising Agency, Limited, of Hamilton, told a large dinner gathering of the business men of Belleville at the Queens Hotel last evening. The meeting was sponsored by the Retail Merchants' Association, (Belleville Branch), with the President, J. E. McVeigh, presiding.

Mr. Kelley enunciated means by which urban centres such as Belleville could aid in bringing a measure of prosperity to the farmers. He suggested that the Retail Merchants' Association sponsor a "farmers' meeting" at which mutual problems could be discussed—an idea which was readily accepted and placed on the agenda for development in the near future.

The speaker quoted the words of Winston Churchill who said recently: "This is not a time for ease and comfort, but a time to dare and to endure."

Take Stand for Own Country

"It is time," said Mr. Kelley, "that we all take a stand for our own country." By means of charts he revealed the attitude of a large section of the United States, including one from "Printer's Ink" which declared: "If the United States minds its own business in 1940 it will be prosperous regardless of Europe."

Yet, the speaker pointed out, as a result of the trade agreement signed with the United States last year Canada had increased her exports to that country by 32 per cent in one year, while increasing her imports from the United States by 47 per cent.

He urged that all Canadians should, as far as possible, buy goods made in Canada and should buy such goods in their own communities. He instanced the situation arising when our export of apples was cut off, the government having to purchase the surplus crop, and was trying to induce the people of Canada to increase their consumption. Women's organizations had been pledged that their members use apples in some form every day in preparing meals.

"Our best unity," asserted Mr. Kelley, "is spending a little money, one with the other. What we must get into our hearts is something of the spirit of the soldier."

The best way to win customers, the speaker told the merchants, is to be friendly and take a live interest in the affairs of the community. On the other hand, he reminded customers, that the merchants were the main source of revenue to support community campaigns for civic betterment, charity, sports, etc., and that the best way of showing appreciation is by concentrating their purchases in their home community.

Enlarge Trading Area

For a city such as Belleville Mr. Kelley suggested that the merchants' organization should strive to enlarge their trading area by ensuring good roads and bus services, with schedules that would permit people to come to town after lunch and do their shopping between noon and milking time.

"The surest way to bring people into Belleville is to invite them through the columns of your local daily, The Ontario Intelligencer,' he declared.

The speaker pointed to the strong competition in the advertising of large city stores through the distribution of the large daily papers in Belleville and also the wide distribution of mail order catalogues including those of motor accessories in this district.

Another means of bringing rural and urban folks into closer understanding would be the establishment of a County Chamber of Commerce for Hastings.

"You have 4,840 farms in this county whose proprietors should be keenly interested in such a project," Mr. Kelley asserted.

He told of the tremendous needs of the farmers for new equipment and pointed to the 250,000 idle young men and empty factories, suggesting that the young men be put to work in the empty factories making the things that agriculture needed.

Small Towns a Necessity

As a final note Mr. Kelley suggested that in the efforts to advance the business and community interests care should be taken not to put the smaller towns out of business.

"The small places are an integral part of our national economy," he declared. He suggested as a slogan which would observe this essential: "When you think of city trading come to Belleville."

The speaker was introduced by Clarke Lapp and, at the conclusion of the address, Chas. Dolan conveyed the thanks of the meeting to Mr. Kelley.

M. Wyman, reporting on behalf of the Transportation Committee, said that assurance had been received that a better bus service would be given very soon between the airport and the city. There were certain difficulties in the way of starting a bus service from Frankford to Belleville, but further action was being taken to achieve this end.

J. McIntosh gave a progress report on the effort to secure better lighting for Front Street, stating that the council was faced with unusual obligations on account of the gas plant, but that another plan was being prepared to secure immediate action.

E. Shapiro made a strong appeal for every merchant to support the Retail Merchants' Association by taking out membership for 1940.

The Secretary-Treasurer of the Association, Wm. Doyle, gave a comprehensive report of financial affairs for the past year.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Last Express"

Topping its four predecessors in Universal's Crime Club series in eerie suspense, wise-cracking comedy and romantic delineation, "The Last Express" chilled audiences at the Capitol theatre where it is now showing.

Based on Baynard Kendrick's best-selling Crime Club novel, the film is colorfully enacted by a cast that includes Kent Taylor, Dorothea Kent, Don Brodie, Greta Granstedt, Paul Hurst, J. Farrell MacDonald and Shaw and Lee.

Two baffling murder mysteries, in which a dozen suspects are implicated, are presented for solution by Duncan MacLain, a new and romantic detective character brought to the screen by Taylor.

Kendrick's ingenious mystery story teams Taylor and Brodie as a pair of sleuths who are first pressed into service by a menacing gangster chief from whom stolen evidence has been hijacked. When a murder takes place, the two detectives are assigned to the case by the District Attorney and from then on until the amazing solution they are hampered on both sides of the law.

The Added Feature "Roll Wagon Roll"

Containing all the sure-fire entertainment ingredients for a western picture, Monogram's "Roll Wagons Roll" the first film Tex Ritter has made since his extensive personal appearance tour opened to an enthusiatic audience.

A musical epic of the pioneer trek to Oregon, "Roll Wagons Roll" is the story of the efforts of the fur traders to keep the settlers out of the northwest, and tells how Tex is commissioned by the army to protect the wagon trains on their hazardous journey across the plains in the face of Indian attacks encouraged by the traders.

Tex Ritter has never appeared to better advantage than in this thrilling action drama of the great outdoors. He sings several new songs in the film, including the stirring "Roll Wagon Wheels."

The 8th chapter of the thrilling detective serial "Red Barry" and "Bala Mala Land" a cartoon completes the bill.

WAR EFFORTS OF KING REGIME ARE CRITICIZED

Conservative Candidate George H. Stokes, Dr. J. Howard and Others Speak at Rally Held at Cannifton

Cannifton, March 15 (Staff) — Charging that the Mackenzie King Government had "abused" its own war effort to make party capital in the election campaign and that it was "out-of-pocket" gentry who had urged Mr. King to "get busy" and re-organize the militia during the year of 1936, Dr. J. Howard of Belleville claimed misrepresentation by the Liberal party in discussing the equipment of the Canadian Militia as he spoke in the interest of Mr. George Stokes, National Government candidate, to the Thurlow Young Canada Club at Cannifton on Thursday evening.

Dealing almost entirely with the war effort of the King Government, Dr. Howard said that all Canadians were proud of the militia but that they did not understand the actual facts representing the true situation. "When the government began re-organizing the militia in 1936 they cut the number of units, transferred others and ended with dividing the militia into a number of divisions, all of which were almost entirely without equipment. Today we have tanks corps, one of which is stationed in the city of Belleville, but with "no tanks."

"As things stand at present, there's no escaping war," continued Dr. Howard, "but until the affair at Munich in 1938, there was no way of telling that soon we were to be plunged into war. Mackenzie King said that he knew, but in spite of the fact that the Liberal candidate, Mr. Haig, is quoted as saying that "the King Government had been quietly preparing for war for over two years," when the war did actually break, it found Canada still in the same unprepared position."

Dr. Howard continued by saying that although the officers and N.C.O.'s of the Canadian militia were recognized as the best in the world, approximately two-thirds of them are still waiting for a commission.

"Hon. Ian Mackenzie stated at the outset of the war that Canada's defences were first class," said Dr. Howard, who claimed that certain equipment was not modern.

In closing Dr. Howard compared the war effort of Canada with that of New Zealand and Australia, stating that the sister dominions far outclassed Canada in this respect.

In a brief address, Mr. George H. Stokes, National Government candidate, stressed the importance of the Department of Youth which will be set up by the National Government upon their election. "Dr. Manion has promised," said Mr. Stokes, "that, if elected, he would immediately appoint a Minister of Youth, to head a department, the energies of which would be devoted exclusively to the solution of the problems of Canadian youth. As leader of the National Government, Dr. Manion is continuing to emphasize the vital importance of the Department of Youth to be included in his cabinet, if elected on March 26th, which will give youth of Canada their first representation in parliament."

Turning to the war situation, Mr. Stokes said that the condition "is serious." "To win the war is the great question confronting the Canadian population today, and the issue of this election is not one of petty politics, nor is it one of religious import, because if we don't win the war, our status as a democracy will be destroyed, and we will have no church to go to. "Mackenzie King is somewhat of a dictator," said Mr. Stokes in closing. "Hitler burned the parliament buildings in Berlin, while Mackenzie King put out the lights in Ottawa."

Other speakers of the evening included Dr. J. W. Kinnear, Dr. W. C. Morgan and Mr. George Reid. All were introduced by Mr. James Ketcheson of Foxboro, who acted as chairman. Musical numbers by Misses Clara and Betty Lloyd, a solo by Mrs. W. Insley and a comedy skit by Mrs. F. Sedore and Mr. Percy Akey were much appreciated by the audience. The meeting closed with the National Anthem, after which the ladies served a delightful lunch.

TWO FIRE ALARMS FOR CHIMNEY FIRES

Two fire alarms, both for chimney fires, were answered by the Belleville Fire Department since yesterday afternoon, with no damage resulting in either case, according to fire officials this morning. Yesterday afternoon the reels had a run to 216 Coleman Street where a chimney was reported to be burning but upon the arrival of the firemen the fire had apparently burned itself out. Early this morning a call was received from 54 Dundas Street East for another chimney fire but the flames were quickly subdued without any damage being done.

King Charges Defence Forces Neglected by Last Conservative Gov't In Liberal Rally Held at Toronto

(By Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, March 15 (CP)—Canada's defence forces were neglected by the last Conservative government and when the present administration tried to build them up it got no support from the opposition led by Conservative Leader Manion, Prime Minister Mackenzie King declared before a Liberal rally here last night.

Mr. King told of the increased defence estimates put through parliament in the years immediately preceding the war, when a number of his own supporters from Quebec voted against them.

"What help did we get from Dr. Manion?" Mr. King asked. "He is telling us today we knew war was coming. If he knew there was going to be a war why didn't he or some of his men get up in the House and help us get those increased estimates."

The Prime Minister, making his last scheduled election speech outside of Ottawa, spoke before about 3,000 persons who filled Massey Hall, and an estimated 2,000 gathered in a nearby theatre heard him over loud speakers.

Other speakers on the program were Justice Minister Lapointe, Defence Minster Rogers, Hon. H. C. Nixon, Provincial Secretary and only Ontario Minister to attend, and 96-year-old Sir William Mulock, former Ontario Chief Justice and friend and adviser of Mr. King for the past 40 years.

No Reference to Opposition

The Prime Minister made no reference to the opposition and criticism directed against him by Premier Hepburn of Ontario but this issue was brought up when Mr. Nixon, at the invitation of the Chairman, Senator A. C. Hardy of Brockville, made a brief statement.

Mr. Nixon, who resigned from the Provincial cabinet last Monday because of Mr. Hepburn's attitude toward Mr. King and his government, told his reasons for withdrawing his resignation the following day.

Mr. Hepburn, the Provincial Secretary said, took the stand that the issues on which they disagreed were outside of provincial jurisdiction and their differences did not affect cabinet solidarity. At the request of Mr. Hepburn the Provincial Secretary said he agreed to remain in the cabinet.

"Let me say without reservation that I have made no withdrawal or modification of my statement to the press and people of Ontario on Monday last," Mr. Nixon said.

Sir William Mulock Present

Sir William Mulock, on whose advice Mr. King entered public service in 1900 as Deputy Minister of Labor, said it would be tragic for Canada if the Liberal government met defeat, and new, inexperienced administrators put in office.

Referring to published criticism of the Prime Minister for not having entered the ranks during the first Great War Sir William told of the conditions facing Mr. King at that time. He said Mr. King was the "breadwinner" for an invalid brother and family, his own parents and a dependent aunt.

Mr. King said the war effort and the question as to who could administer it was the one and only issue in the campaign.

"Dr. Manion is trying to get away from the real issue by introducing local issues and making promises designed to suit whatever district he happens to be in. Is that putting country ahead of party?"

Would Have "Class War"

A National government formed of Liberals and Conservatives with the Opposition composed mainly of "extremist parties" would mean that within two years Canada would have a "class war" as well as a national war.

Whatever party formed the next government it would have the responsibility of planning and carrying on war of "two or three years" and to make the maximum effort would require a United Canada.

The present government, stronger now than when it took office in 1935 with a record majority, was best fitted to maintain that unity.

Quoting from National government campaign literature, Mr. King said Dr. Manion, by his own statement, "submerged party" in order to serve the whole country. That implied that a man could not serve his country if he served his party, Mr. King said.

Condemnation of Leaders Claim

"It is a condemnation of every leader of political parties since Confederation", he asserted.

Referring to Dr. Manion's claim he was following in the footsteps of Sir John A. Macdonald when he formed the National government party, Mr. King said there was no parallel because Sir John had never deserted his party. He had remained a Conservative and had never been in a coalition government after Confederation.

Mr. King referred to Dr. Manion's statement that he had initiated the National government movement after approval by his House following and by the Provincial leaders of the Conservative Party.

"When Dr. Manion had that caucus parliament had been dissolved and his followers were just ex-members of parliament. What authority had they to speak for their constituents?

King Asks For Names.

"Who were the Provincial leaders Dr. Manion consulted? Let him name them and say what authority they had to speak for Conservatives . . .

If Dr. Manion is defeated in Fort William—and I understand that is probable—who would form the government he is proposing?

"If I am defeated personally — which is always possible but not probable—I have fifteen colleagues, any one of them capable of leading the government. The war effort would go on without interruption and would be in safe hands."

Mr. Lapointe said Canada needed the wise leadership of Mr. King. "At this time we need, as never before, a leader who is guided by his reason and not by his temperament.

"A chain is as strong as its weakest link but a leader is only as strong as his weakest moment," Mr. Lapointe said. "We need a leader who is calm, steady, persevering and who never loses his head."

Canada was a united nation today, said Mr. Lapointe. How different from 22 years ago when another war was being fought. Today Quebec was with the rest of Canada.

King Responsible.

"You're proud of it and this man (pointing to Mr. King) is largely responsible." Dr. Manion had said that King and Lapointe were breakers of national unity. When he did so he must have temporarily lost his head, said Mr. Lapointe, predicting he would need it again when he gathered "the best brains" into a proposed National Government.

After the Quebec election in which he (Mr. Lapointe) took part, thousands of telegrams of congratulation and thanks came to him.

"There were many, many from Toronto. You'd be still more surprised if I told you the names of some of those who sent them. Possibly in the future I may be more discreet."

Mr. Rogers gave a brief review of Canada's war effort to date and said the first division went overseas as well equipped as any soldiers who ever left the Dominion.

BEAUTIFUL SETTINGS FOR PHOTOGRAPHERS

Amateur and professional photographers alike had the opportunity of a lifetime this morning to snap winter scenes to their hearts' content a strees and buildings throughout the city and district were covered with a substantial four-inch covering of soft white snow that clung to everything in sight. "King Winter" was very realistically portrayed on every hand as the brilliant sunshine came out and shone with magnificent effect on the snow-covered landscape.

The snow-fall proved a boon to snow shovellers and city workmen as the Department of Public Works had their employees out early cleaning up Front Street after one of the heaviest snowfalls of the late winter. Motorists, however, were experiencing considerable difficulty in getting their steeds under way last night as the snow packed in behind the wheels after the vehicle had stood for a short time and it was all hands to the rescue as theatre-goers and attendants of public meetings emerged to find their autos stalled.

MANNERHEIM'S HISTORIC FINAL ORDER TO HIS TROOPS

A final order for the day issued by Field Marshal Mannerheim to his troops with the signing of peace under 'exacting' terms is one of the most solemn and impressive documents of the soul of one of the greatest military leaders of history.

His soldiers he praised for their valor. "I have fought on many battlefields but I never saw the soldiers who were your equals."

The tragedy is that "our fate is hard that we are compelled to give up to an alien race, a race with a life philosophy and moral values different from ours, the ground which for centuries we have cultivated in labor and sweat". "Nearly every battlefield" where Finnish soldiers shed their blood has been lost. 15,000 Finns were slain and 200,000 Russians lost their lives in the awful 105 days of struggle. The Lotta group of women who followed the army and those who worked behind the lines were praised for their noble service and sacrifice.

Truly might Baron Mannerheim tell the Finns they "have paid the last penny of any debt they might have owed to the west."

Finland agreed to peace because without outside aid she could not continue the struggle. He spoke of "the precious aid" promised by the Western Powers "which could not be realized because our western neighbors, mindful of their own fate, could not permit the troops of the Western Powers to cross their countries." He said that Finland in the three and a half months of war received only two battalions of reinforcements with artillery and planes from outside.

But Finland will continue to do her historic duty: "Defence of that western civilization which has been our heritage for centuries."

True soldier, he is also a man of peace, ready to labor in the reconstruction and restoration of that land as a state and as a part of western civilization. Finland looks to the west, not to the east.

Mannerheim and his men, the Lotta, the men behind the lines, the home defence. the civilians, have written a story of modern courage to show that modern people are not as soft as they have been claimed to be, but that freemen can fight with a spirit which totalitarians cannot claim. In song and story their name will last forever. Finland's has been the true spirit of the newer civilization which will not yield.

FINLAND LAND OF HEROES

Any nation that has any preconceived notions about democracies and socalled weaknesses of the democratic system, must revise its notions after seeing what a small nation like Finland has been able to achieve.

Democratic Finland has shown the strength and valor of heroes whose deeds could not have been so great had they been fired by such a political view as, say, Nazism. Nazism crushes the soul, but democracy in Finland fired the soul and body to immortal achievement, and Finland goes on into the future with determination.

The people who are dictated to in every little detail and who are forbidden to have the slightest independence or right of expression which has not received the stamp of men like Adolf Hitler are spiritually weaker and thereby in the final analysis physically less effective than they might be were they the product of free institutions.

Finland, the land of heroes! Nothing can take that title from the people, because it expresses the soul of that country.

LETTERS TO THE SOLDIERS

Letters from Canadian soldiers overseas make very clear that they are great letter readers. They ask to have their friends write to them. On one of the greatest missions in history—to play their part in putting an end to the regime of Hitlerism and putting the world on a sound basis of security—they naturally like to hear from home and from their friends in a land which is outside of the immediate theatre of war.

Their letters reveal the fine character of these men with their love of home, which is so great that it sends them to war to guard their homes and the homes of others. They are good letter writers, for they are caught up by the newness of their experiences and their letters tell of the new spirit that is in them.

Soldiers are very human and being companionable chaps they appreciate society and they appreciate letters from Canada. Canadians have taken these young men to their hearts and stand ready to do anything for them. Many are writing to the boys who are abroad on their imperial mission.

Such letters add pleasure and interest to the life of the troops.

NEW FRENCH ENVOY TO CANADA

The new envoy of France to Canada, M. Rene Ristelhueber, who is at present in Bulgaria as Minister follows the Count de Dampierre who goes to Sweden. M. Ristelhueber has been thirty-five years in the service, having entered the diplomatic ranks through the consular service. He has travelled widely. His chief business will, of course, be to stimulate trade between Canada and France.

Count de Dampierre leaves Canada having made a deep impression by his tact, sincerity and cordiality.

GOOD NEIGHBORS

The action of the United States authorities in releasing two Canadian airmen who were forced to make a landing in U.S. territory when they became lost on their flight, is a proof that the United States and Canada are not in Europe. The decision to the release was natural as it was shown that the reason of the landing was very clear and that there was no ulterior motive in the fact that the plane came down in the United States.

In Europe, the Windsor Star points out ,the situation would have been different, because there neutrals must be careful that the air over their heads are not used by combatants in striking at one another.

Britain Scores

While peace negotiations were proceeding between Russia and Finland, Great Britain scored a heavy economic victory against Germany over the week-end. Hitler, realizing how angry Mussolini was at the seizure of his ships laden with German coal for Italian industries, had suddenly decided to send his Foreign Minister, the egregious von Ribbentrop, to Rome, to stimulate Il Duce to stiffen his attitude, which probably meant to try and persuade him to join Germany against the Allies. But he was too late. The British, holding all the aces, persuaded Rome that it would be much better for her to take the coal they had intercepted, on conditions that she did not attempt to get any more from Germany, it being understood, on the basis of previous undertakings, that Italy would not suffer any coal shortage by so doing, because Britain was ready to trade coal with her.

Mussolini, with his usual shrewdness, grasped the situation in its entirely and accepted the British proposal. So when von Ribbentrop arrived, prepared to use his eloquence, he found his trip had been useless. All the alarmist reports that had been sedulously fostered in pro-Nazis quarters proved to be so much hot air, and it has once more been demonstrated beyond any reasonable doubt that whatever else the Italian Dictator does not know, he certainly does realize on which side his bread is buttered.—Montreal Star.

The Prevention of Diseases of Childhood

A physician friend of mine once confided the following to me. "I wish we had lived in a poor and more thickly populated section of the city when my youngsters were small; they would have had all the childhood diseases—measles, scarlet fever, chickenpox, whooping cough—and have become immune (free from) to practically all ailments now they are grown".

I do not think many parents would choose this method of "strengthening" their children because the complications from these childhood ailments might have resulted in hard of hearing, heart disease, and even death.

There is, however, a way of protecting children from many of these diseases. It is called the "immunization" of the children.

In an article by Prof. C. S. Raue, M.D., Philadelphia, as guest editor of the Medical World, in speaking of the immunization against the common contagious diseases of childhood, it is said:

"The earliest immunization procedure is vaccination against small pox. The best time to vaccinate an infant is between the third and sixth month. At this age complications are less likely to occur and there is little or no danger of brain inflammation following vaccination".

After the infant is six months old, there should be immunization against whooping cough; it is claimed that 80 percent. of children receiving Sauer whooping cough vaccine will, two to three months after vaccination, be immune for several years.

Nine months is the age to immunize against diphtheria. The horror of diphtheria is almost unknown to young parents today.

The advisability of immunizing against scarlet fever is not fully endorsed by the medical profession: it is left to the physician's judgment in each case.

"There is no vaccine for obtaining permanent immunity against measles, but a child exposed to measles may be protected by an injection of placental globulin.

Unfortunately there is no preventive measure that can be used during an epidemic of infantile paralysis".

The above information from a professor of children's diseases should help parents as they discuss their child's health with their family physician.

Wood Ashes Make Good Fertilizer

Approximately 10,000,000 cords of fuel wood are cut and burned in Canada every year, and a great deal of the ashes are thrown away, although they have a definite agricultural value. A report from the Chemistry Division of the Dominion Department of Agriculture shows that wood ashes are valuable as fertilizer. They contain potash, carbonate of lime, and a small amount of phosphorus acid which are plant foods. Unleached wood ashes may have as much as 8 per cent potash. Few ashes, however, are pure: bits of charcoal, earth, and other materials are always present. Nevertheless, if the ashes are kept under cover to prevent leaching, the percentage of potash is around four to six per cent. Hardwood ashes contain more potash than ashes from softwood.

Along with potash, wood ashes may contain about 70 per cent carbonate of lime and perhaps two per cent of phosphoric acid, both plant foods. Because of the high lime content, wood ashes are particularly beneficial on acid soils, especially acid peats and mucks. The potash content of ashes makes them desirable for mangels and clovers which are both heavy feeders on lime and potash. However, ashes should not be used for potatoes, the alkaline nature of the ashes encouraging the growth of scab in the potatoes. Suggested rates of application of ashes are for 1,200 to 1,500 pounds per acre, equivalent to 60 to 70 pounds of potash, 500 to 1,100 pounds of carbonate of lime and 24 to 30 pounds of phosphoric acid, if the ashes are clean and unleached.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Russia's possible role in the war is the subject of renewed speculation as a result of the peace treaty between Russia and Finland. Disastrous as the treaty may be for Finland, it appears to carry an assurance of peace for northwestern Europe at least until the main conflict between the Allies and Germany is ended.

Whatever designs Russia may have for reaching out farther towards the Atlantic Ocean probably will be postponed until a more favorable opportunity arises.

Russia at peace ,of course, is in a better position to press Rumania for the return of the former Russian province of Bessarabia and should such a demand be made and lead to a fight, the intervention of Turkey, backed by Great Britain and France could be expected.

However, the high cost of the war against Finland together with German influence, may militate against any new Russian adventure. The Red army suffered heavily in the 3½ months of fighting in Finland and while it has ample reserves, an attack on Rumania would bring it up against an army of more than 1,000,000 men. Thus war in the southeast probably would be even more costly than the fight against Finland.

Nazi Germany never looked kindly on the Finnish war although it carefully avoided giving offense to Russia or comfort to the Finns. Germany has a definite interest in Rumania being undisturbed so long as oil and other materials flow into the Reich from Rumania. It has also an interest in keeping Russian military activity down to a minimum. The more supplies the Russian army uses the less Germany can import from the Soviet.

Ontario's Debt To the Navy

When Canadian naval defence is mentioned the Ontario citizen usually thinks of it in terms of our ocean ports.

Yet Ontario is as truly dependent upon naval defence as either Nova Scotia or British Columbia—not against life and property within this province but against Ontario's property at sea.

The ships that sail the seven seas carry Canadian Exports, and Canada is among the leading nations of the world in foreign trade. Canada's important export business is, to a large extent, made up of products from the interior. Besides natural products Ontario manufactures of all kinds are shipped across the Atlantic and Pacific, and in fact Ontario's industrial expansion is due, in a considerable degree, to this export trade.

The employment of thousands of Ontario men, therefore, depends upon the safety of the merchant marine. Naval defence is essential to sustaining Ontario's industrial progress.

These thoughts are brought to mind when the cause of the men who serve in the navy and merchant vessels is advocated by the Navy League of Canada, for these men guard not only our shores but our goods at sea. The Navy League, therefore, is rendering a unique service to the people of Ontario, just as much as to the people who live within range of a submarine. Its work for the sailors deserves the widest support of citizens of this province, for indeed, we owe much to that gallant body of men who go down to the sea in ships and upon whom the safety and prosperity of the British Empire so greatly depends.

British are Frank And it Pays

The British habitually are frank with themselves when they get into a jam. That is one of the reasons why they so often come out on top at the end.

So there is nothing surprising about the plain statements from Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Lloyd George about the need for raising all the foodstuffs possible as long as the war is on, and then conserving to the limit all that is raised.

The problem of getting something to eat while the dispute with the Nazis lasts is, they agree, quite a sizable one.

Indeed, Mr. Lloyd says in effect that things are more acute than they were in 1918 when the British had a three-week supply of grain between them and hunger.

In many countries, probably in most countries, statesmen would hesitate a long time before making statements of this sort everybody at home and abroad to hear.

In Nazi-land, for example, bad news which cannot be hidden is camouflaged and dressed up in pretty phrases, and where is can be concealed every effort of censorship is applied.

But that is neither necessary nor wise in Great Britain and it would not be necessary in the United States, because in these countries people, except under the New Deal regime in this country, have been taught from childhood on that the thing to do is to learn to "take it." and face difficulties as they are and lick them.

For in these countries, and their like, government and the land belong to the people. The first is their servant, the second is their property.

And naturally they take a view of things quite unlike the view people take in countries where the government is their master and the land belongs to that master, not to them.—Detroit Free Press.

"Wizard" Wears Well

An enthusiastic farmer himself, David Lloyd George, England's prime minister during the last war, is pictured as the guest of honor at the recent luncheon of the National Defence Public Interest committee in London. He spoke of food production and agriculture in their relation to national defence.

U.S. Iron Rations for Tommies

British "Tommies" in the French front line soon will be eating a new emergency ration developed by dietary experts of the United States army—and so will 65,000 American soldiers.

The British Government, it was learned today, has placed an initial order with an Indianapolis firm for a consignment of the new canned "chow."

The United States army will give "field ration, type C" a two-day tryout during the big manoeuvres in Texas next month.

The ration; designed for a possible three-day emergency during fighting, is packed in twin tin cans each with its key opener.

Each man will carry one 15-ounce can of pre-cooked meat and beans, one of beef stew, one of meat and vegetable hash, and three companion cans, each of which contains six ounces of crackers, one ounce of sugar, and 3-4 ounce of pulverized coffee, soluble even in cold water.

The new ration costs 70 cents a day (as against the present daily ration allowance of 40 1-2 cents), but the price is expected to be reduced by quantity production.

The army also is experimenting with a super-emergency ration—a hard bar composed of chocolate, milk, soy bean meal, cocoa butter and other ingredients. Major Paul P. Logan, an instructor at the army industrial college, who holds the patent, made its taste such that men will not be tempted to eat it as candy.

In dire necessity, a man taking three four-ounce bars (each containing 60 calories) a day could be sustained in the field for three or four days.

The new emergency rations are considered a big improvement both in taste and food value, over the old bully beef and hardtack. —Washington Exchange.

War Expected to Become Most Expensive in History

The cost sheets of Europe's war, forming a scenic backdrop for the United States political drama, are convincing bankers and federal officials that it will be the most expensive conflict in history.

Great Britain already is spending at the rate of $9,600,000,000 a year. That amounts to 40 cents of every dollar its citizens earn. On a population basis, it would equal a $27,000,000,000 annual budget for the United States, more than double that of any of the high spending depression years.

Britons figure the cost will go up a third for the second year and will double by the third year if war goes on. The third year would reach a point which, if the budget were met out of pocket, would take 80 cents of every dollar earned in Britain—if the earnings came up to those of 1939.

The French costs are a little lower than those of Britain, but still are high enough to wrench the souls of thrifty French taxpayers. France is spending at the rate of $7,400,000,000 a year, which would be equivalent to $23,000,000,000 for the United States. Compared to French earnings, however, the spending works out to more than 40 cents of every dollar the Frenchmen earn.

German costs are largely a matter of conjecture. The best estimates at which experts can arrive, however, produce the rounded conclusion that 60 cents of every dollar earned in Germany is being spent by the state. Three-quarters of this is being raised, by taxes, contributions and profits from state enterprises.

Figures from Russia and Finland are hard to get. Nor is any overall figure available for neutral spending. Belgium and the Netherlands, each with less than one-fourteenth of the population of the United States, are spending $300,000,000 to maintain their armed neutrality, in addition to their regular governmental operating expenses.

Sweden, with a population half a million less than that of Ohio, is spending $475,000,000 this year half of it to keep from being swept into the maelstrom.

Recalling their financial troubles of the last war, the nations involved are turning promptly to heavy taxes to finance the shooting. Private savings are being drafted, too through forced loan subscriptions. Already the individual income tax in Britain has been hoisted to 37-1-2 per cent.— Washington Exchange.

Dominion Air Power

To win the war the British Empire is depending not only on the playing fields of Eton but on the flying fields of Canada. From the latter the first squadron of the Royal Canadian Air Force has arrived in England. It is the vanguard of an armada which is expected to develop 15,000 trained pilots a year. The British believe that with their home forces this will be enough to tip the balance of air power definitely against Germany.

Canada's great war effort is concentrated in the air. On the Canadian prairies the full resources of three Dominions are being pooled in the Commonwealth Air Training Plan. Canadians are confident that they can supply at least 10,000 pilots, air observers, gunners and radio men annually. Australia and New Zealand will each send 2,500 more from their home fields for final training. The cost of the plan, allocated among the three Dominions and the United Kingdom, has been set at $80,000,000 over a three-year period. Canada, highly air-minded, already has about twenty suitable airdromes and sixty more are being added. Canadian plane factories are operating at top speed, and both training and fighting craft are coming from the United States. For every man sent into the air ten are necessary on the ground, and these crews are under intensive training. By May of this year the Commonwealth plan should be under full power.

Toward the end of the last war Canadians made up 40 per cent of the R. A. F. Major Bishop, the Canadian ace, alone destroyed seventy-two enemy planes. Canadians and Anzacs proved the best flying material England had. If, as Napoelon said, victory depends on the last reserves, fighting fliers from the British reserve of Canada, Australia and New Zealand may force the final decision in the clouds.—New York Times.

The Isle Of Pines

By TEMPLE MANNING.

If you are in search of unspoiled beauty, romance, interest and charm, then it's the Isle of Pines for you. About 70 miles off the southern coast of Cuba, now within easy reach of the mainland by plane service, this romantic Treasure Island is due to be discovered by travelers. They will thrill at the first sight of the Isle of Pines as they glimpse mountain ridges of beautifully-colored marble. Many of Havana's public buildings are from material mined from these mountain quarries.

Nueva Gerona, the island's capital, is a tiny tropical town by the Las Casas River, which threads its way inland for about five miles. Small steamers carry the fruit, lumber, marble and other exports to the mainland. The little town, which seems quite bustling, is fascinating, but it is in the interior that one finds the most of interest and beauty. Orange and grapefruit orchards, pineapple, mango and other fruit trees give beauty to the landscape and work to the natives. Nature has been lavish here, for it isn't only the soil that is rich. There are marvelous mineral springs in the interior of the Isle of Pines, and for years their richly curative properties have been enjoyed.

At the Howard Hacienda there is a marvelouus spring. It is housed in a palm-thatched enclosure set in a garden just ablaze with hibiscus, bougainvillea and other tropical flowers. The thermal baths at Santa Fe are said to be marvellous. We first heard about them from an American physician we met at Vichy!

Recreation Spot

A short distance out of Nueva Gerona is the Rockyford Grove, an immense plantation that is a delightful recreation spot. There are swimming facilities along the cool river; there are riding horses for those who like to move leisurely about the sweet countryside, and there is a tennis court. But if there is good bathing at Rockyford Grove there is bathing de luxe at Bibijagua Beach, where bathers loll on a long stretch of coal black sand.

The Isle of Pines was once on the pirate map. The swashbuckling buccaneers of the seventeenth and eighteenth century are supposed to have used the island as a hiding place for their booty. At Santa Fe where there are shallow streams, an iron pirate chest has been found. What tales of romance such a discovery conjures — pieces of eight, precious stones, gold ornaments, perhaps a map giving a clue to the buried treasure that is said to be lurking in and around the Caribbean!

Marvellous Jewels Found

Cairo, March 15—A.P. — Jewels made to comply with an Egyptian Pharaoh's order for necklaces that never could be excelled and slippers of solid gold have been found in the sarcophagus in which Psou Sennes' mummy wasted away.

The French Egyptologist, Pierre Montet, who opened the ancient Pharaoh's tomb, found two necklaces, one made of two solid gold bars linked by a golden lotus flower, the other of two huge pieces of lapis lazuli. An inscription on the latter told of the Pharaoh's command that they be perfect.

A great block of black granite bars the entrance of another tomb, possibly the burial chamber of Psou Sennes' queen and children or a treasure store room.

Amusing Debate Features Meeting Of Picton Club

Picton—An amusing debate, "Resolved that a cow is of more use to a minister than a wife", proved a great deal of amusement at a St. Patrick's party in Picton United Church S. S. room, Tuesday evening. This was the regular meeting of the Phi-Del-A-Tee Club and was marked by an attendance of forty, including a number of soldiers as welcome guests. The debate, an impromptu affair, brought out many good points of both a minister's wife and a cow. Those in favor of the wife asked listeners to picture a cow leading the W.M.S. or caring for the parsonage, and claimed parishioners would not stand for the upkeep of the necessary two establishments. The opposition claimed it was not good for man to reside alone and that despite a cow's many values there were plenty of substitutes for her products. The debaters were Wilma Hughes and Jack Blakely favoring the cow and Helen MacDonald and Rodger Ross for the wife. The audience decided the result a tie.

Phil Dodds, leader for the month, was in charge. Partners were secured for the evening in a get-acquainted manner. Following devotional exercises during which Wilma Hughes read scripture and Rev. J. F. Reycraft led in prayer, a vocal solo by Miss Alice Wiggins and a humorous recitation by Miss Hettie Unger were enjoyed. A why and because game saw questions and answers mixed with humorous results as did a lively sing-song of nursery rhymes. Three soldiers demonstrated their ability in a potato peeling race with each receiving a gift. The president, Helen MacDonald distributed numbered shamrocks and the lucky winner was held by Cpl. Grover Gage. Other lucky prizes given by the leader went to Mrs. Raycraft, Millie Dodds and several of the soldiers.

A lunch in keeping with St. Patrick was served with all seated at two long tables, the hostesses being Mrs. Alexander, Miss Hettie Unger, Miss Alice Wiggins, Mrs. Clealand Blakely and Miss Martha Mouck.

Championship Game

Wellington won the championship of Wellington and District Hockey League for the second successive year Tuesday night when they defeated Picton 7-5. Each team had previously won one and the deciding tilt brought out a capacity crowd.

An early lead by the Picton team was wiped out by the determined home town team, which was led by Goyer, ex-professional, of Belleville.

In the first half of the first period, Picton banged in two by Hicks and Cork, both on passes from Carmen Welbanks.

Right after the face-off in the second, Bowerman drove in Gerry Welsh's pass for the third goal. Wellington scored two in as many minutes, all three goals being tabled within two minutes of the opening. Picton came back with a drive which netted a goal by Cork from Hicks. Wellington plays began to click and three goals were sent home in six minutes, Parks from Stinson, Young from Goyer and Goyer from Burley.

In the third period, Wellington added two more, Harris from Burley and Goyer from Harris. At the eleven-minute mark, Welsh scored for Picton on Bowerman's assist, but in spite of replacing goalie Walt. Fraser by a forward could not add more.

West Lake sprung a surprise when they defeated the highly favored Mountain View team, 3-1. This necessitates a third and deciding game for the championship of "B" group. Mountain View's lone goal was in the first period, by Rowbotham from Mansfield. West Lake set a fast pace and in the second scored two, both by N. Platford on assists by Huff and G. Platford. They added another in the third, by Trumpour on a solo effort.

Tice and O'Mally handled the game which lacked the fights which featured the two previous "A" games.

John Holsey Celebrates His 92nd Birthday At Home in Foxboro

"Love your enemies and lead a good life—hard work and respect for your fellow-men". Such is the recipe of a life, well and truly lived, and the motto of John Holsey, who yesterday celebrated his ninety-second birthday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Joseph Waddell of Foxboro.

Life has been kind to this genial nonagenarian, who for the past seventy-six years has chosen Belleville and district as his home. Possessed with a vitality of mind and body that belies a man of his years, Mr. Holsey discourses with a keen interest the topics of the day and reads avidly from the daily newspapers which he takes regularly, and with which he keeps abreast of the times.

Born in Hilderstone, Norfolk County, England, ninety-two years ago, Mr. Holsey early in life developed a tendency for the milling trade, an occupation which he followed all through his working days. A few years after his marriage to Elizabeth Patrick, also of Norfolk County, Mr. Holsey and his small family came to Canada and settled at Glenora where he worked for fifteen dollars per month and a "free" house.

Moved to Consecon in 1881

Woodrow's Corners next claimed the Holsey family and in 1881 they moved to Consecon where he helped build a grist mill. From here the Holseys moved to Stirling, then to Glen Miller and it was here that the family effects were wiped out by a disastrous flood which swept through the Trent Valley at that time. For the next nine years the family resided at Marmora. It was at Tweed that Mr. Holsey ended his life-long connection with the milling trade, retiring at the age of 74, shortly after the death of his wife.

Lived 18 Years in Foxboro

Almost continually for the past eighteen years Mr. Holsey has made his home at Foxboro where he has been residing with his two daughters, Mrs. D. Longwell and Mrs. Joseph Waddell. Yesterday, surrounded by members of the family, this grand old man was feted in honor of his ninety two years. Messages of congratulations were received by Mr. Holsey from relatives in England as well as being the recipient of many personal felicitations. The entire community joins with the family in wishing Mr. Holsey the best wishes on this happy occasion, with the hope for the continuance of good health that he may celebrate many more birthdays.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Let the "I's" Have It

It's a queer fact that while we use the pronoun "I" over and over again in the beginning of our sentences when we speak, the moment some of us start to write a letter, and particularly a post-card, we drop the "I" from the beginning of practically every sentence we write.

A subject-less sentence in a letter or on a post-card, isn't correct, and it isn't attractive. But there are millions of them written every day.

What is the saving of space and ink and time in the letter that awkwardly begin, "Glad to receive your letter, and thought I would write at once to tell you the news". The saying of that "I' in the beginning of your written sentences stamps you and your sentences as slipshod.

"Finger" Foods

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I contend that asparagus is eaten with a fork, also that a club sandwiches, chicken and lamb chops may be taken up with the fingers and eaten in that manner.

I claim that outside of a very few exceptions, such as open sandwiches, olives, radishes, and artichokes, all food should be eaten with a fork, and a knife, if necessary. Am I correct?

W. V.

You are right, on all counts. Asparagus is eaten with a fork. Club sandwiches, chicken, lamb chops demand that we use the knife and fork if we would be considered even tolerably well-mannered. It's a most unpleasant experience to sit opposite a person who takes a piece of chicken in the fingers, and it's a devastating experience to watch a person gnaw a lamb chop.

Foods are divided into "moist foods" and "dry foods" and, generally speaking, we eat moist foods with a fork or with a knife and fork, as they suggest for their convenience. Naturally, there are exceptions. Artichokes, which you mention, are one of the exceptions, and so is corn on the cob, unless we insist on using the silver holders. Olives, radishes are eaten in the fingers. When we eat sandwiches at a party, buffet party or other kind of stand-up party, we eat them in our fingers, and naturally they should be sandwiches conveniently made for this. When sandwiches are served at table, either rather simple one or more complicated ones, like club sandwiches, we eat them with our fork or with our knife and fork. Dry cookies or small cakes are eaten in the fingers, but layer cake or other kinds of moist cake should be eaten with the fork.

City and Country Women Decide How to Be Happy, Though Married

Last week in "Washington, D.C., Friend Husband was pinned to a board, even as entomologists exhibit butterflies after scientific study.

This genial vivisection was taken in hand by the American Association of University Women, which reported that 57 per cent. of the rural husbands, whose wives were polled, were accredited with willingness to assume "some domestic responsibility to free their wives for outside interests", as against 40 per cent of city husband, whose wives answered a questionnaire.

Nobly, city wives flew to the rescue of their husband by saying this might mean that the city husband's spare time was not as flexible as the farmer's hours.

Of the two surveys, one covered 262 rural women in Michigan, and the other reached 52 groups of college alumnae in cities and small towns. There was nothing hasty about the survey, prepared by Mrs. Harriet Ahlers Houdlette, based on a five-year study of family problems most generally discussed. Mrs. Houdlette is the associate in education at the headquarters office of the A.A.U.W. in Washington.

The first four topics discussed were found to be "Power Versus the Human Hand"; "Has the Homemaker Lost Her Job?" "Marriage Upheaval, Whose Fault is it?"; and "There's no Place Like Home".

Other factors discussed were religion of partners, nationality of partners, similarity of social interests, similarty of intellectual interests, age of partners, education of partners, ideals of childhood in respect to material wealth and culture; relations with in-laws, and childhood environment.

The country women considered the attitude of their partners toward marriage the most important factor of all, and the sharing of responsibility in marriage, the second most important.

Their city sisters listed these points but not as the most important factors of marital bliss. Town ladies regarded similarity of social interests and similarity of intellectual interests as the most important.

It was discovered that husbands of both the urban and rural classification had become less possessive than in granddad's day. In both groups a majority of the wives were encouraged by their husbands to participate in activities outside the home, and both groups used electricity as a home helper.

Naturally the occupations of the husbands in the two groups varied most of the rural women being married to farmers and most of the A.A.U.W. to business and professional men, both groups, as stated, being in favor of outside interests for their wives. If this generosity on the part of the gentlemen was inspired by desiring a little time for themselves, that question did not arise.

In the discussion on Power Versus the Human Hand, it was revealed that the farm women baked more bread, canned more food, and made more clothes than their urban sisters with college training, and also made more use of the electric washing machine. On wash-day 94 per cent of the country women are at work, against 79 per cent of the town women.

Going back to the happy marriage theme, important factors were similar religion of the partners, similar nationality of partners and congeniality of tastes. Everyone seemed to have a grand time discussing husbands and marriage, and went back home to her partner in high feather.

Limiting the Time Of Music Practice

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph. D.

"Dear Dr. Myers— I understand that in a public address in our city recently you said that a child should be allowed only 15 minutes for outside music practice, as a longer time would prove a strain on the physical and mental health.

"As I am a teacher of music, I would like to say that from my experience 15 minutes would be an insufficient time to prepare and practice a lesson. I think that 30 minutes of practice a day, with practice periods of 15 minutes, say one in the morning and the other in the afternoon or evening, would not result in bad physical and mental health for the child."

What I did say was about like this: As a rule, it is well for piano lessons to begin at six or seven years of age, when for a year or two all practice should be done with the teacher, perhaps two or three times a week, in two or three sittings of 10 minutes each. When home practice by the child alone begins, it should not be for more than 15 minutes a day.

20 Minutes a Day

Unless the child should show special aptitude in music, the practice period had better not exceed 20 minutes a day until the child is 12 or 13, and thereafter not more than 30 minutes daily. The physical and mental health of some children would not permit even this amount, especially those who find their regular school work heavy. A few children, however, with obvious aptitude in music, could afford to practice much more and neglect their school work somewhat.

Thanks to the good music education offered by most public schools, many children find satisfaction and good training in instrumental music other than piano, at a time when home practice usually loses its sting.

Tests for Aptitude

There are scientific music tests, of course, by which the child who could not profit from instruction in music can be spotted. But most music teachers don't need such a test to find him.

The child who, under a skilful teacher and with regular practice, shows no real interest or progress with a musical instrument after a few years, should probably drop it. But most children can make progress, even though they must practice regularly whether they like it or not. We don't let children choose whether they shall take reading and arithmetic at school. They just have to take it and the teacher tries to make them like it. For most children, instrumental music ought not to be treated differently, although there is no good reason why all children should have to take piano lessons or begin instrumental music on the piano.

CORNFLOWER HATS

New York—Among the already made-up "hats" at a flower counter here is one bunch of white and blue cornflowers, held on with a black velvet ribbon, and the same thing has also been done in daisies. Velvet pansies in purple and yellow and plain bunches of white violets would also make effective headdresses or corsages. And for those who like something less florid there are some little bunches of fruit that look good enough to eat. Cherries, peppers, crab apples and miniature oranges are tied together with green leaves and several bunches of these could be worn in the same way as the flowers.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

A Letter For the Quins

I got many letters from all over the country telling me of the influence of the Quintuplets, but I got one a couple of weeks ago from the Ursuline Academy in Pittsburg, Pa., that affected me as much as any letter I've read in a long, long time.

It was written by twelve children in the third grade in that school—ten girls and two boys, and it told how these children had scraped and saved their pennies until they had raised enough money to ransom five pagan babies in Tanganyika, Africa, and how these five babies are being named after the Quintuplets.

The letter was sent me by Sister M. de Chantal of the Academy. She had a few words to say about how the children of the third grade were so interested in the Quins and how this interest had spurred them to buy from slavery, five little children. I think you may find the childrens' letter as interesting as I did. It is done in pencil in a very round, childish hand:

"Dear Dionne Quintuplets:

"We are not writing you a long letter. We are just writing to tell you that our class saved up twenty five dollars from September 1938 to May 1939 to buy five black mission babies. We named them Cecile, Annette, Yvonne, Marie and Emilie after you.

"We also saved five thousand stamps and several pounds of tin foil for the mission. We sent money for lolly pops and rattles for our "Quints". These babies are poor and so we sent them these things.

"We though you would be glad to know we bought five black baby girls and named them after you. We hope you are well.

"Your truly, Third Grade— Nancy Harper, Norma Jean McKeague, Mary Gertrude McPharland, Joan Nealon, Betty Ann Pfohl, Jeanne Mannella, Mary Louise Boch, Mary Jane Brady, Paul Buechel, Kathleen Craig, Victor De Leonardo, Mary Audrey Edwards."

I will do my best to explain to the Quintuplets just what this letter means, but I don't know how successful I'll be. For one thing, I don't think they will understand just what ransoming children in Africa will mean. In fact I'm not sure I realize altogether what it means myself.

It may be that the best thing to do will be tell them about it, keep the letter for a while and when they are older tell them about it again. I am sure when they can understand more about the meaning of it all they will get a great deal of satisfaction out of knowing that they have helped make five other children happy, even if it is many thousands of miles away in Africa. I know it gave me quite a thrill when I read what those children in the third grade of the Ursuline Academy in Pittsburgh were doing.

I have always felt that if the survival of the Quintuplets under the handicaps they found themselves at birth had any significance, it was to bring home to parents the right of every child to every chance in life. It really makes no difference whether those children live in Canada, in the United States, or in Tankanyika.

TROOPS OVERSEAS START TO BALLOT

Voting Began Thurs. in Canadian First Division in Dominion Elections

By SAM ROBERTSON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Aldershot, March 15—(CP Cable)—Men and officers of the First Canadian Division started balloting Thursday in the Dominion General Election.

Lists of candidates were posted conspicuously throughout the training area giving their addresses, occupations and constituencies—but not their party affiliations.

The fact party labels are not shown in keeping with parliamentary usage promised to cause difficulty for the troops who have not been able to follow the campaign closely.

Have Not Heard Speeches

Unlike the people at home they have not heard stump speeches. Neither have they had political posters to teach them that "Harry Hansard" is a liberal and "Bertram Blackrod" his conservative opponent.

(It was stated in Ottawa last night that the Liberal and Conservative parties have taken steps to make the names of their candidates known to the troops overseas. The Liberals have cabled the list of their candidates and representatives in Britain are planning to distribute the list at Aldershot, possibly by handbills. The Conservatives are making their candidates known largely through agents of the candidates among the soldiers themselves.)

A commissioned officer of each unit of the division has been appointed ballot issuing officer. For at least three hours daily from today until March 23, except Good Friday and Easter Sunday, every member of the division can call at the ballotting office specially set apart to mark his vote.

Generally two or three periods are being set aside daily for recording the khaki vote.

Active Service Ballot

The same system is being used in the training area many miles away where the first squadron of the Royal Canadian Air Force is quartered.

The Active Service ballot simply bears the words: "I vote for......" with instructions to "write name of candidate — family name last."

The khaki voter is required to make a declaration giving his name and rank, and stating whether he is a British subject, whether he has voted previously at this general election and whether he was ordinarily resident in Canada when he enlisted and giving his place of residence. The declaration is sworn to before a commissioned officer.

Voters to Mail Ballots

The voters are required to mail their ballots themselves to Colonel J. T. C. Thompson, special returning officer, with headquarters in Canada House, London.

Counting of the votes, by six scrutineers appointed by the political parties, will begin at 6 P.M. (1 P.M. EST) March 26 and counting must be completed within six days. When the complete count of the Overseas Active Service Electors' vote is made it will be forwarded to Jules Castonguay, Chief Electoral Officer for Canada, at Ottawa, who in turn will forward it to the returning officers for the various constituencies concerned.

Glen Miller "Papermakers" Even Count With Wallbridge

Third and Deciding Game for Robertson Trophy to be Played Monday

SCORE IS 9-3

Running rampant with five goals to their credit in the middle session, the Glen Miller "Paper-makers" evened the count in the district rural hockey championships at the Hume Arena last night when they soundly trounced Wallbridge by a 9 to 3 count, the "Townhallers" having taken the initial game of the series, forcing the issue into a third and deciding game for the Dr. J. J. Robertson trophy to be played at the Hume Arena on Monday next.

The game wasn't without its moments, however, as a fistic battle occurred in the middle session, when spectators swarmed the ice and fists were swung with abandon in a merry free-for-all scrap that took the officials some minutes to quell and terminated in major penalties being handed out to the chief offenders. Twice players were lowered to the ice following attacks and the blood flowed on one occassion as the contesting squads did not spare the rod seeking a district championship. Although defeated on the night's play Wallbridge scored the first and last goal of the game, but the "Paper-makers" literally forced the issue throughout and carried the play with four players on the attack for the greater part of the game.

Glen Miller led 2-1 at the end of the first period and 7 to 2 as the middle session ended. Beale, with three goals, led the winners in scoring, with Davis and Johnson bagging a brace each. Green, Semark and Goyer accounted for the three Wallbridge counters. Wallbridge won the first game of the series by a 6-3 count, forcing a third and final game here on Monday night.

The line-ups:

Wallbridge: Goal, Carson; defence, Goyer and Semark; centre, Ronsky; wings, Green and Rowbotham; subs, Christopher, Vermilyea, Muir, Jarrell and Wood.

Glen Miller: Goal, Jones; defence, Lamoire and Lott; centre, Vangates. wings, Drake and Beale, subs, Johnson, Davis, Anderson, Campbell.

N. Y. Yankees for Sale But No Deal as Yet Made for the Clubs

New York, March 15 —(AP)— The New York Yankees, a nice bauble in financial as well as baseball figures, are for sale but it looks like they will be at the same old stand for the same owners when the American league season opens next month.

Many prospective purchasers have been mentioned in recent months and there was quite a scurry yesterday over reports Governor Francis P. Murphy of New Hampshire had virtually completed a deal for a syndicate.

The Governor said he had inquired into the possibility of the sale several weeks ago, but denied negotiations were underway or that he had submitted an outright proposition.

So all the flame-fanning yesterday accomplished was smoking out an admission from the Yankee officials that the club could be had for a satisfactory sum.

Edward G. Barrow, president of the club and one of the trustees of the late Col. Jacob Rupert, said that two or three legitimate offers had been made within the last year but that none was under consideration.

George Rupert, another trustee, said: "The Yankees have not been sold and there is no indication they will be sold for some time to come. When and if the club is sold the deal will require a considerable length of time."

CAPITALS CINCH PLAYOFF BERTH

Indianapolis Defeats Syracuse Stars to Head Western Division of Int.-Am. Loop

By the Canadian Press

If the International-American brethren aren't careful the tyros of the company, Indianapolis Capitals will walk off with the league title.

Though it's only their first season in the league, the Capitals clinched the championship of the western division last night by a 3-2 victory over Syracuse Stars.

Hershey Bears too are giving notice that they'll bear watching. In their drive for the playoffs, the Bears beat Pittsburgh Hornets, 2-1 last night for their sixth consecutive victory.

By turning back the Hornets, Hershey hopped into second place in the western section and need to win only one of their two remaining games to make certain of a playoff berth.

Indianapolis beat the last-place Stars by a powerful second-period attack.

The opening period was scoreless, but the second was less than two minutes old when Les Douglas scored. Only 17 seconds after the first Indianapolis goal, Douglas and Eddie Bush set up a play that brought a second count by Bill Thomson.

Jackie Keating on a passing play with Kilrea and Giesbrecht got the third little more than sixty minutes after.

Bill Cunningham scored for Syracuse early in the third frame and Maxie Bennett got the Stars' second point with only seven seconds of the game left.

JOHN WOODRUFF BREAKS RECORD

Negro Olympic Champion Now Hailed as World's Greatest Half-Miler

Hanover, N.H., March 15 —(AP) —After being denied admission to trackdom's select circle of record-breakers for five years, John Woodruff, the great Negro olympic champion, gloated over two indoor marks today and the world hailed him as the fastest half-miler in history.

The long-striding Columbia graduate student dominated last night's third Dartmouth record-breaking carnival by racing 880 yards against a handicapped field in 1:47.7. That time was 1.5 seconds faster than the fastest half-mile ever run outdoors, for which England's Syd Wooderson has been awaiting official credit for two years.

While erasing the half-mile record of 1:49.8 chalked up on this remarkable six and two-thirds laps track by John Borican last year, Woodruff was caught in 1:47 flat at the 800-metre point. That clocking wiped out Borican's 1:49.2 record for the metric distance.

SENIOR HOCKEY CLUBS ARE READY FOR STRETCH RUN

Sidney Millionaires, Touted as Great Team, Ready to Meet Hull Volants

QUEBEC LAGGING

Kirkland Lake and Goodyears Likely to Meet for Ontario Title

By the Canadian Press

Two sectional champions have been declared as Canada's senior amateur hockey clubs battle down the stretch towards the Allan Cup.

Sydney Millionaires, touted as the best team the far east has turned out since the lush cup-winning days of Moncton Hawks, captured the Maritimes' title last night by brushing aside Moncton Eagles 12-6, taking the best-of-three round in two straight games. Sydney's All-Star back won the first contest 11-2.

Hull Volants took the Ottawa and district championship with a 4-2 victory over Smiths Falls at Ottawa in the deciding game of a best-of-three round. Hull and Sydney will meet in the first round of playdowns.

Veteran Guards Goal

The veteran Bill Dickey guards Sydney's goal and acquisitions this year include Tony Graboski, from Hershey's old Eastern United States League team, and Doug Fritz, from the London Michigan - Ontario club. Albert and Jules Cholette, scoring stars of the Ottawa Valley, are leaders of the strong Hull contenders.

Across the rest of the Dominion most divisions have reached the finals and some have only a game or two before declaring winners. There seems every indication the intersectional fight will be as hot as last year, when Port Arthur came east to lick Montreal Royals for the Dominion laurels.

Royals Reach Finals

Quebec lags a little. The Royals, strong favorites again, have reached the final in the Quebec Senior League but are awaiting the summary of a round involving Montreal Concordia and Verdun, who play their deciding game tomorrow. Sherbrooke and Lachine will meet for the Provincial League championship, as a result of Lachine's 8-0 triumph over the Olympics at Boston last night, and the winners will play Quebec's Intermediate champions for the right to meet the Q.S.H.L. champions.

Toronto Goodyears, eliminated by Montreal Royals in a terrific 1939 set, are two games up on St. Catharines after two starts in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior "A" finals. The probable opponents for Toronto or St. Catharines are the mighty Blue Devils of Kirkland Lake, who scored their second straight win in the second game of their Northern Ontario best-of-five title round with South Porcupine, 5-4, at Timmins last night.

Kirkland Lake has three members of the Trail, B. C., team that won the world's amateur championship last year—Mel Snowden, Johnny McCreedy and Dick Kowcinak—as well as an all-star cast of holdovers from 1938-39.

Bear Cats on Trail

Port Arthur's Dominion champions and Port Frances Maple Leafs start a best-of-three round for the Thunder Bay championship Saturday. The Bearcats had to overcome a big obstacle from Geraldton, Ont., to gain the final.

Winnipeg Cruisers rallied last night to defeat Rifles 4-1, levelling the best-of-three Manitoba finals at a game apiece. The winners will oppose the Thunder Bay survivors.

Saskatchewan will turn a powerful contender on the team which takes the Manitoba-Thunder Bay playoff. Moose Jaw Millers and Regina Vic-Aces are to play a best-of-five round for the Saskatchewan championship and the right to enter Western semi-finals.

Nelson Maple Leafs are refusing to concede Trail an advantage in the Kootenay finals, being played on a best-of-five basis. The winner will meet Alberta's champions, who are favored in many quarters to gain the Allan Cup finals. Marty Burke, the former professional star, has his Calgary Stampeders in the Alberta finals with Turner Valley, whom they beat 3-1 last night to tie the best-of-five round at one game each.

YANKEES TO USE FIVE IN LINEUP

McKechnie, However, Will Sprinkle Lineup From Every Team of National Loop

Tampa, Fla., March 15—(AP)—Joe McCarthy has agreed, as a sort of compromise, to use only five or six New York Yankees in his starting lineup against the National leaguers in the all-star game for the benefit of Finnish relief here Sunday.

Joe could have nominated the entire Yankee lineup, but the manager of the world champs bowed to public opinion to the extent of naming three members of the Boston Red Sox—tentatively—to start the engagement.

Joe's choice, announced last night, include Joe Gordon, Red Rolfe, Charlie Keller, Joe Dimaggio and Bill Dickey of the regular Yankee line-up. The three Red Sox named were Jimmy Foxx, Ted Williams, and Joe Cronin. The starting American league flinger might be a Yankee too, Joe said. Either Red Ruffing or Lefty Gomez.

Manager Bill McKechnie of the Cincinnati Reds, who has been placed in charge of the National league forces, divided his starting brigade more equitably.

Bill said he would start Morris Arnovich of the Phillies in left field, followed by Cooky Lavagetto of Brooklyn at third base, Mel Ott of the Giants in right field, John Mize of St. Louis at first base, and so on. In other words, a typical National league all-star lineup.

ALL-STAR LISTS WITH NEW NAMES SOON COMING UP

Father Time and Casualties Take Fairly Heavy Toll in Pro Hockey Ranks During Season Now Waning

APPS IS OUT

By JACK CALDER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, March 15—(CP) —All-star time has come to the National Hockey League again, accompanied by the speculation that always springs up when the writers go to work to select the Canadian Press teams.

One familiar name is almost certain to be missing when the ballots of hockey writers in the six National League cities are counted and the first, and alternate teams of 1939-40 are compiled.

Eddie Shore has made the first team in seven of the nine years in which it has been chosen for The Canadian Press. This season the veteran hurtling defenceman has left Boston Bruins to devote most of his time to managing and directing his newly-acquired International-American League club at Springfield. He made a few appearances with the Bruins and then was traded to New York Americans, who have used him when he could spare the time.

There will be other changes — some based upon the fading of long-established stars, some upon injuries that have kept players out for long periods and others upon the rise of brilliant youngsters like Boston's famed Sauerkraut Line. Some writers would elect the high-scoring Krauts from Kitchener, Ont.—Milt Schmidt, Bobby Bauer and Woody Dumart—as a unit.

Matter of Goalies

Dave Kerr of New York Rangers, so far ahead in the league averages that no other goaltender can catch him, is bound to give Frank Brimsek of the Bruins a fight for the position that poker-faced Frank won last season in his first appearance, as a big-league goalie. The selectors won't overlook Earl Robertson's work in keeping the Americans going behind a wobbly defence.

Aubrey (Dit) Clapper, selected beside Shore on the defence in 1939, has played better than ever at the blueline for the Bruins since Eddie's departure. What the Boston captain has to worry about most is the continued brilliance of such established defence stars as Ebbie Goodfellow of Detroit, Earl Seibert of Chicago and Art Coulter and Ott Heller of the Rangers.

Syl Apps, last year's all-star centre, was out of Toronto's line-up almost continuously for two months this season with injuries. In his absence other pivots attained new prominence. Among them were Schmidt, the league's leading pointmaker, Neil Colville and Phil Watson of the Rangers, Bill Cowley of Boston and Murray Armstrong of the Americans.

Apps' absence also had a detrimental effect on the effectiveness of his linemate, Gordon Drillon, who was named at the right wing post on last year's team. Bryan Hextall of the Rangers meanwhile has gone far ahead in the league's goal-getting department, Bauer has made a deep impression and Mush March has kept pinch-hitting for Chicago.

About Some Others

Toe Blake, voted to the left-wing berth last year despite the fact he was with the sixth-place Montreal Canadiens, has been handicapped even further by the Canadiens' drop to the cellar. But Blake still is a great player. Dumart has progressed rapidly with Boston and Bob Davidson of Toronto, Tommy Anderson of the Americans and Johnny Gottselig of Chicago have played their old steady games.

Paul Thompson's great job of coaching at Chicago has earned plaudits everywhere and may win him the coaching position. Cooney Weiland and Frank Boucher, replacing Manager Art Ross and Manager Lester Patrick respectively as coaches of the Bruins and Rangers, have maintained a constant fight for first place, while Red Dutton has kept his Americans punching.

N.H.L. ALL-STAR SELECTIONS

Following is the 24th in a Canadian Press series of National Hockey League All-Star selections by hockey writers in N.H.L. cities. A consensus will be prepared later.

(By Victor O. Jones, Boston Globe)

First Team: Thompson (Detroit) goal; Clapper (Boston) r. defence; Goodfellow (Detroit) l. defence; Cowley (Boston) centre; Bauer (Boston) r. wing; Dumart (Boston) l. wing; Thompson (Chicago) coach.

Alternate Team: Kerr (Rangers) goal; Coulter (Rangers) r. defence; Seibert (Chicago) l. defence; Schmidt (Boston) centre; Hextall (Rangers) r. wing; Blake (Canadiens) l. wing; Dutton (Americans) coach.

BOSTON BRUINS WIN LOOP TITLE FROM RANGERS

Hold New York to Scoreless Overtime Draw in Last Game for Rangers' in Schedule

LEAFS WIN

Red Heron Tied the Season's Record With Four Goals Against Canadiens

(By Jack Calder, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Something about the way Boston Bruins go after the hockey prizes sets them apart from the run-of-the-mine clubs.

The Bruins needed only a tie against the Rangers at New York last night to capture the National League Championship. They got it —a scoreles tie that gave them the league title for the second straight year and the right to open at home when they meet the Rangers again next week in the first round of Stanley Cup playoffs.

The Bruin board of strategy, Manager Art Ross and Coach Cooney Weiland, decided this was a game to be played close to the shoulder. The Bears played it just like that, lying back to let the Blueshirts come at them in waves, and any time a rush got through Frankie Brimsek was as hot as ever in goal.

Boston hasn't wasted a lot of excess effort this season. The champions contributed liberally to that streak of successes in which the Rangers went 19 games without defeat, losing four times and tying once in their first five meetings.

But when the time came the Bruins pulled up their braces. They whipped the Rangers 6-2 when they met them for the sixth time. Then came the seventh collision Tuesday night and Boston came from behind to win 2-1 in the last two minutes, approaching to within a point of the championship.

Brimsek Outguesses Rangers

Through most of last night's test the Rangers poured down in attacks of four and five men, keeping the 12,500 customers on their feet. Through it all the 23 year-old Brimsek outguessed anyone who got near him.

It was the Rangers' last game and it gave Dave Kerr the Georges Vezina trophy as leading goaltender of the campaign. He finished the 48-game schedule with 77 goals against him, compared with 96 for Brimsek and 99 for Turk Broda of Toronto.

Boston has one game to play, with the last-place Montreal Canadiens Sunday, before opening the first cup round.

Toronto Maple Leafs showed again that they are approaching rare form for the playoffs by breaking loose in the third period to defeat the hapless Canadiens 8-4 at Montreal. The victory was Toronto's seventh in eight starts against the habitants.

Heron Ties Score

The victory marked outstanding success for an experiment by Coach Dick Irvin. He tried Robert (Red) Heron at centre-ice on a line between Pep Kelly and Sweeney Schriner and the redhead came through with four goals and an assist, tying the season's record of four goals achieved by Herbie Cain of Boston.

Heron may be the answer to Irvin's prayer for a centre who can work effectively with the potentially high-scoring Schriner. Though he hadn't played centre since his amateur days, Heron fitted in so well that Schriner got a goal and three assists, while Kelly drew four assists.

Sylvanus Apps scored twice for Toronto and Hank Goldup once. Smiley Meronek got two goals for the Canadiens and Tony Demers and George Mantha one each.

It is a popular misconception that baseball players hibernate. Until January some run filling stations, go on lecture tours, operate chicken farms or just hold out on their contracts. But after that they travel South. That is where they are now, basking in Florida training camps at Clearwater, Winter Haven, St. Petersburg or Lakeland. There they play only shadow baseball, all in fun, with a little work added for exercise; but the shadow is steadily creeping North with Spring.

With a sense of surprise we realize that the exhibition games are about to start. We learn that the redoubtable Joe DiMaggio, resolving all painful doubts, again takes his place at bat. Though many a diamond is still covered with the snow, the season is near at hand. By the middle of next month the big league bleachers will fill up, the umpire will don his mask and a large part of the American public will be its noisy self again.

A real fighting issue lies ahead. Shall the Yankees be permitted to establish a permanent baseball dictatorship? Forty million fans demand an answer.

If Babe Ruth really thinks he still belongs in baseball and wants to do something for himself and the game, as well, a path for him to follow is pointed out by Hank Hart of the Big Spring, Tex., Herald, who asserts he should tour in the minor leagues.

"If Babe Ruth is still of the opinion that he wants a place in professional ball, we think he could contribute no finer service to the game than to travel among the minor leagues as an ambassador of good will, much in the fashion of Al Schacht," writes Hart. "Ruth is a legend. There has never been another like him and probably never again will be.

"Only 46 years of age, the famed slugger is not too old to don his monkey suit and hit a few. The fans would eat that up. The players would like it. He'd probably revel in the chance, too. The door of major league baseball may be closed to him for once and for all, but the way is certainly open for him to pioneer on the other frontiers."

Do you remember when Hamilton Tigers went on strike 15 years ago today after winning the National Hockey League championship? The club executive had refused a bonus to players for a game against Victoria Cougars in the Stanley Cup series, later won by the Montreal Canadiens.

Manager Bill Terry of the Giants still can't see Brooklyn. "No, definitely no," he declared, in answering an interviewer who wanted to learn if Bill regarded the Dodgers as contenders.

We received a letter from one Raymond Dument, President of the National Semi-Pro Baseball Congress, Wichita, Kansas, recently requesting information regarding baseball in these parts. Annually each August in Wichita a mammoth baseball tournament is played between the various state champions. One or two teams from Western Canada have participated in this tournament in years past, while this year a team from away down at Cape Breton Island is planning to make the trip. If a team is invited to participate in the National Semi-Pro Baseball Congress all of the expenses of the club are paid by the Congress. It is doubtful if any baseball club in Ontario would be strong enough to compete in this tournament, however, as the players composing these state champion semi-pro teams are bordering that of minor leaguers. The major leagues scout this tournament seeking possible talent, every major league club sending at least one scout to Wichita while the tourney is on.

Belleville's interscholastic sporting endeavours moved out of town enmass over night. Last evening the Albert College C. O. S. S. A. champs. entrained for London to participate in the provincial interscholastic puck finals, but only carried hope in their hearts. Today George Laughlin's Belleville Collegiate cagers left for Toronto where they enter the C.O.S.S.A. basketball playdowns, meeting Bowmanville High School in their first game of a knock-out draw series. Albert College meets the cream of Ontario's interscholastic puck teams, while the B.C.I. at least have better than an outside chance to get into the C.O.S.S.A. finals at basketball.

Those rural league hockey supporters really take their puck-chasing games in earnest. Last night when fisticuffs broke out the supporters of both Wallbridge and Glen Miller swarmed the ice and a merry time of fist-swinging was the order of the night. The blood flowed at one stage and ultimately Glen Miller knotted the series at one game each and the boys saw-off Monday night for the Robertson trophy.

SPORT SPICE—There is talk of the Rupert Estate selling the New York Yankees . . . The syndicate negotiating the purchase of the Yankees is headed by Governor Murphy of New Hampshire. . . .It is believed that the sale of the champions will bring at least seven millions of dollars into the estate. . . . Former Mayor Jimmie Walker is also reported to have been approached to head a syndicate to purchase the Yankees, all of which seems to substantiate the report that the world champions are for sale, following the death of the late Col. Rupert. . . . Sydney "Millionaires" won the Maritime hockey title with little effort and will now enter the Allan Cup playdowns.

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

By The Associated Press

Anaheim, Calif., March 15—(AP)—Sammy Chapman appears headed for a big year with Philadelphia Athletics. In his first look at major league pitching yesterday against Pittsburgh Pirates he turned defeat into victory, hitting a homer with two on in the sixth, driving in two runs with a triple in the seventh and getting one of three walks in the 14th.

x x x

Lakeland, Fla.—Camp followers of Detroit Tigers are about sold now on Dick Bartell, the pepper-pot shortstop obtained from Chicago Cubs in exchange for Willie Rogell. So far Bartell has been an improvement afield and his fiery spirit has livened the club. The Tigers, going great in the Grapefruit league, had a date with the fluttering St. Louis Cardinals today. The Redbirds have lost five straight.

x x x

San Antonio, Tex.—Robert Virgil Swift, aged 25, says St. Louis Browns can stop worrying about the holdout of Joe Glenn, because Swift will be their No. 1 catcher this season.

Although he batted only .263 in the Texas league last year, Swift was tops behind the plate, he led the league in assists and threw out 63 of 112 base-stealers.

x x x

Tampa, Fla.—Paul Derringer and his Cincinnati teammates, after failing again to stop the world champion Yankees, may get some consolation from a declaration by Charley Keller, hero of the last world series, that "Derringer was the toughest pitcher we faced all season." Keller's bit of praise came yesterday after the Bombers had blasted the Reds 5-3.

The Stars Say

For Saturday, March 16
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

PARTICULARLY lively and sudden events may be expected on this day, with many developments of a surprising character. These will be attended by much doubt and perplexity because of side issues that are treacherous, subtle and even sinister. Be alert to all sorts of schemes, plots, illicit involvements and snares as well as open hostility or attack. There might be accidents, fires, theft or disaster. The private life is also afflicted, but over all are factors for progress and definite gain and good fortune.

Those whose birthday it is have a rather complicated year with which to cope. While there is augury of positive success, progress and increased possessions and finances, won by enterprise, ability, originality and creative genius, there also are pitfalls and plots of malicious and sinister intent. Beware of deception, subtle and open hostility, fraudulent entanglements and also sudden physical dangers. Be careful with the signature and all writings.

A child born on this day may have much versatility, originality and creative ability, with aggressiveness and ingenuity, but it may be carried away by temperamental and emotional stresses.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

LATE MRS. GEORGE MITCHELL

The funeral of Mrs. George Mitchell, late of Orono, Ont., and one time of Tyendinaga Township, took place Thursday afternoon, March 14th., from the residence of her sister, Mrs. William Doxtator, in the 3rd. concession of Thurlow Township. The service in the home was conducted by the Rev. A. Armstrong, pastor of the Cannifton United Church, assisted by the deceased's former pastor, the Rev. S. Littlewood of Orono, and the Rev. L. S. Wight of Belleville.

Interment was made in Shannonville cemetery; the service at the graveside was conducted by the Rev. S. Littlewood and the Rev. L. S. Wight.

The bearers were Messrs. John Juby, Orville Beare, William Casey, William Clark, Frank Walker and Wesley Cawker.

Writer Believes Finns Accepted Peace to Reorganize Their Defence

Havoc Wrought by Bombing and Heavy Shelling Showed Need of Improved Construction

TRANSPORT DIFFICULT

(Editor's note: Wade Werner, chief of the Associated Press Bureau in Copenhagen, was in Finland for most of the Finnish-Russian conflict and here discusses features of the war kept secret under the censorship while the fighting lasted.)

Copenhagen, March 15—(AP)—Now that the Russian-Finnish war is over some of the most obvious reasons influencing the Finns in their decision to sign peace can be disclosed.

While the hostilities continued the censorship policy naturally dictated supression or minimizing of the damage done by the Soviet air raids to industries and transport vital to continuance of armed resistance.

The havoc wrought by the bombers actually was tremendous. Not a single large town in all Finland escaped punishment from the air.

This was bad enough for the civilians, hundreds of whom were killed while countless others saw their homes demolished, burned or badly damaged. But damage to the factories and railway transport as well as harbor facilities was a more vital factor in crippling Finnish defence.

Hanko and a number of other towns practically ceased to exist. Some railway junctions had little left but tracks and the movement of troops through such points to the front was a most difficult and dangerous task.

Almost Continuous Bombing

In late February when I passed through the junction of Elisenvaara near the western shore of Lake Ladoga, trains were crowded with reinforcements, some southbound toward the Karelian Isthmus, some travelling to the northeast of Lake Ladoga. The troops with whom I travelled moved through with the utmost difficulty for Elisenvaara had been bombed five times during the night before our arrival and bombers raided us four times during the day.

My censored dispatch did not mention soldiers but it was the movement of reinforcements to the front that the Russian raiders were crippling. Elisenvaara already was in ruins when we left but it was bombed again repeatedly in succeeding days.

Viipuri, seaport at the western end of the Karelian front, was so systematically bombed it was useless as a supply base even before the Soviet troops advanced to within easy artillery range.

Turku, vital western seaport and industrial centre, was raided almost daily and bomb damage to harbor facilities and vital factories was disastrous.

Tampere— munitions centre — was scourged systematically by large fleets of bombers.

Civilian morale everywhere was magnificent—but when factory after factory is destroyed and even foreign supplies and munitions cannot be moved to the front over railroads without the greatest of handicaps and despite heroic work of railwaymen, how can soldiers continue fighting?

Guns Out of Alignment

In the midst of increasing transport difficulties the Russian drive against the Mannerheim Line was intensified. The Finns had strong steel and concrete forts on the Summa front—the weakest point in naturally strong defence lines on the isthmus—but such a tremendous volume of Russian shells rained down on them they finally were undermined. They tipped upward like boxes—throwing their guns out of alignment.

The tragic misfortune for the defenders here was that Swedish volunteers who just had relieved seasoned but fatigued Finnish troops broke under a surprise attack of Soviet tanks. Before the rout could be halted the Russians had to be reorganized.

Despite the setback on the isthmus, however, despite the increasing difficulty of moving men and munitions to the front, despite the lack of seasoned reinforcements to replace tired troops, Finnish morale was unbroken.

Foreign military observers generally agreed that the Red army would need years really to conquer the Finns if they abandoned the cities and fought a delaying guerilla war through lake, swamp and forest regions.

The fact that the Finns calmly chose instead to sign peace now on harsh Russian terms means only to some of these observers that Finland is willing to sacrifice greatly for a breathing space in which she can reorganize defence of her independence on a modern basis — particularly as concerns defence against enemy bombing fleets.

Collegiate News

Open Night is practically upon us again, and next Wednesday the school will throw upon its doors to the public. This year, during the auditorium program, the Technical Night School classes will be presented with their diplomas. As usual, there will be a gymnasium display by both boys and girls, exhibitions of work done by students through the year, and numerous booths where the weary sight-seer may pause for refreshment.

Girls' Athletic Society

On Thursday last the finals were fought off in Girls' basketball between XII A and XII B for the school championship.

Both teams played well and their pivoting, guarding, passing and shooting might well be noticed by the lower grades. XII B was the favourite according to the gallery, and the favourite won with a score of 26-18. XII B was ahead at the end of the first quarter, XII A was leading by a single point at the end of the first half. In the third quarter XII B crept ahead and in the last quarter they clinched the game when Victoria Scott put in five goals as fast as you could count them.

XII B the winning teams' line-up was as follows: Forwards, Victoria Scott, Ruth Oliphant, Lois Bankier, Dorothy Price; Guards, Loretta Stark, Helen Chumbley, Winnifred Soady, Helen Walker, Phyllis Barlow.

Girls' basketball has had a very successful season, but in the spring our thoughts begin to turn to tennis, swimming, etc.

The Stamp Club

On Open Night, Wednesday, March 20, the Stamp Club (long unheard from) is planning a stamp exhibition in the board room. Last year a very successful exhibition was held and we hope that this one will be as good.

On the walls and on tables will be displayed coronations, jubilees, commemoratives, sets, pairs, blocks, strips, used and mint of all sizes, descriptions and countries. Philatelists will talk about, discuss, trade, regard stamps and such terms as perforations, cancellations, firsts, seconds, covers, condition will be wafted through the board room.

Prizes will be given as follows:

1. Best Newfoundland collection.
2. Best Canadian set.
3. Best foreign set.
4. Best British Colonials.
5. Best single stamp written up
6. Best group i.e. Transportation etc.

We would like all stamp collectors in the school to exhibit sheets of stamps in the exhibition.

On Wednesday, March 13, at noon in the Girls' gym, a game of basketball was played between 10K girls and 10K boys. The girls won with a score of 17-14, and it was a scrapping good game. Some of the players left the floor with a few bruises, but no one really minded.

Small "Want Ad" Brings Good Results

While a shortage of trained domestic help is reported in the city advertising evidently pays. A lady who inserted an ad for a maid in the Ontario Intelligencer had 29 replies by young women seeking employment of this nature.

Letter to the Editor

To The Editor Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ontario,

Sometime during the past summer there appeared on the editorial page of your paper an article written concerning and in sympathy with the army of men we designate as "transients". I was prompted then to write you but did not. I cannot recall the exact words but the article was of such a nature that I said that behind the reams of paper and the setting of type and all the work of printing a daily paper there was a heart beating in sympathy with the woes of humanity and especially with those poor homeless men who are obliged to tramp our roads as they have no place to stay. I recall an article written by our then Mayor Jamieson Bone, after he had taken a trip into the United States. He remarked the absence of these "knights of the road" over there. On a trip south we stopped at several towns, and were surprised to find that the President had caused homes to be set apart for these men where they could stay for a time until they could find jobs. This accounts for their absence on the highways.

Most all readers of our Toronto papers have seen articles by Judith Robinson and others telling how an Anglican Minister on Bay Street, the Rev. John Frank, has opened his church basement and sheltered many of these poor fellows and fed them for days at a time. We have had it from two of these how he gets them jobs and shows every kindness. One was getting a job in Kingston and another in Brockville. This minister we are told has had much better churches offered him but he thinks he can do more good where he is. He is only forty-nine, we are told, but is the greatest philanthropist of this age for he is engaged in other work for the poor and outcast. It seems that with all our clubs and religious organizations in Belleville, some work of charity along this line could be undertaken. The Red Cross, one winter established an eating place, which was a great blessing while it lasted. We had two calls one morning so close together I asked "Did anyone send you here? and he said "I asked in about ten houses before I came to yours." It is very kind of Dr. Ackerill to be good to poor animals, but surely we can share up with boys, many of whom are well educated and most of whom are real gentlemen at heart. Of those who called three were born in England, one in Ireland and two were from Scotland. "Because ye did it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye did it unto me."

Matilda Arthur,
Belleville.

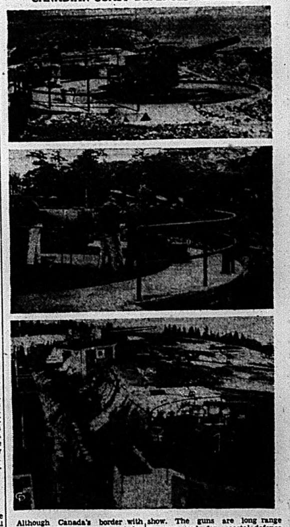
BRITISH SHIP SINKS WITH CARGO OF KRUSCHEN

Canada bound with 50,000 bottles

A grave interruption in Kruschen supplies for Canada occurred recently when a special shipment of 50,000 Kruschen Giant Packages was sent to the bottom. The balance of the supply of Kruschen Packages, sent on other ships, has been landed and distributed thinly across the country. Special concern was felt because this particular shipment was of the Giant (Free Trial) size which contains the regular package plus the free trial package offered at the regular price. Your local druggist still has a supply — but act immediately! We urge regular Kruschen users to get their packages at once to avoid disappointment. If you suffer from rheumatic pains, frequent headaches, lassitude, blotchy complexion and other ailments frequently caused by constipation, just you try Kruschen Salts.

A scene from "Torpedo Raider," a gigantic drama blazing with adventure, now playing at the McCarthy Theatre in addition to the laugh hit, "Money to Burn," which features the Higgins Family.

CANADIAN COAST DEFENCES PREPARED



Although Canada's border with the United States is renowned for being the longest unfortified frontier in the world, her coastlines are a different matter, as these pictures, taken from the latest "March of Time" film, "Canada at War," show. The guns are long range weapons used for coastal defence and are stationed at undisclosed points on Canada's coastlines. The film from which these "stills" were taken has been banned in Ontario by Premier Hepburn.

The Gift

By WARREN SMITH

Martha Carter and her sister Augusta lived in a fine, old house which stood at the corner of Peel and Earl Streets.

Possessed of a comfortable income and most excellent health it would seem as if the two women might have almost an ideal life together, but it was known by their friends and neighbors that they were secret enemies.

This enmity between the two sisters started when Martha was 17 and Augusta two years older.

That was the summer Casper Hunter came home, invalided from the Spanish-American war, and spent three months with his cousin Mrs. Bell.

Casper had been hit in the arm by a bullet which had incapacitated him for work but left him free to amuse himself in any way he could.

The Bells and Carters were great friends as well as neighbors and the young people saw much of each other.

When Casper had sufficiently recovered his health he went back to his home in a distant town, but he left two broken hearts behind him.

Mrs. Bell said that the reason he had not proposed to one of the Carter girls was that he had not been able to choose between them.

Other suitors came and went but nobody ever took the place of Casper Hunter in their affections. And so they remained unmarried.

As the years passed Martha grew stout and calm ,with a passion for tatting.

She spent long hours with shuttle in hand weaving intricate patterns in snowy white thread.

Sometimes she hummed softly to herself and sometimes she talked to her big yellow cat.

Now, Bingo was a perfect bone of contention between the sisters.

Augusta hated cats, Bingo especially, for sometimes in her remarks to Bingo Martha said things that she would not have dared to say directly to Augusta.

Augusta went in for culture.

She could repeat reams of poetry in a most languishing voice, and it is marvelous what cutting things can be got out of a mere poem by one who knows how to change a word here and there. That was Augusta's weapon of defense which she constantly hurled at Martha. Augusta was thin and stern and austere with a fondness for wearing severe black.

Today the sisters were sitting together in their cosy living room, a bright fire burned in the grate.

Martha was tatting as usual and Augusta posed near the front window, was reading the 'Doll's House" for the tenth time.

Bingo lay on a cushion before the fire. Silence reigned because the sisters were not speaking. Suddenly they were startled by a loud knocking at the back door.

Augusta hastened to answer the summons.

When she opened the back door she was surprised to find an expressman, on the step beside him stood a good-sized crate. The man touched his cap and held out an open book.

"Sign here, ma'am," he said in a businesslike way.

Augusta took the book and pencil he offered and signed as directed.

Whereupon the expressman slid the crate through the open door and turned and walked briskly away.

Augusta stood eyeing the crate and was just bending to get a closer look when she was startled by a high-pitched voice saying in a smothered voice:

"Oh, spare my tender blushes!"

Augusta recoiled in consternation.

"Let me out! Let me out!" demanded a quite different voice, a man's voice this time. "You poor fish! Quit blinking!"

Clinging to the bars of the huge cage which the crate contained, scrabbling with wings and beak, was a large, gray bird with a wicked beak and watchful eyes. A parrott!

Now Augusta had always longed for a parrot and this was a superb specimen of its kind. But upon the large card attacked she read her sister's name as well as hers. In fact Martha's came first.

"Martha! Martha!" she cried. And Martha came as fast as her thick legs would permit.

Together they knocked the cleats off the crate and removed the gleaming wire cage.

A table was brought and the cage placed upon it. And then wondering very much, the two women sat down to look at their unexpected guest.

The parrot danced and capered on his perch; he hung wrong side up, he spit out seeds, he laughed, screamed and sang.

When Martha attempted to speak, he bade her "shut up, strawberry."

Martha's face was naturally red.

He called Augusta "old goose!" And he yelled "scat! scat!" until Bingo fled in a panic.

"Who could have made us a present of such a beast?" Martha gasped.

"I don't know," Augusta shook her head.

Mrs. Bell came in to see Polly.

"He's probably 70 years old," she said. The sisters stared aghast. "And worth several hundred dollars." They looked at each other in amazement.

Nothing so odd or exciting had ever happened to the sisters and they found themselves highly diverted. They hung about the cage for hours while Polly went through her paces, using first one voice and then the other; whistling, singing, cavorting, even swearing at them.

They laughed more than they had ever laughed; they grew merry and forgetful of ill feelings.

The day Polly told Augusta she was his "hunky-dory," she fell upon Martha's shoulder and laughed until she cried.

One rainy afternoon the door-bell rang. Visitors!

Augusta peeping out saw Mrs. Bell and a man! Martha hastening doorward, little knew whom she was about to admit.

As a matter of fact she didn't know Casper Hunter until Mrs. Bell introduced him.

Though the sisters were thrown into confusion, they found that they had outlived the poignancy of their early romance.

Casper was thin, bald, sallow, showing that he had lived so long in hot climates that his liver was not altogether healthy.

It was hard to realize that he had ever been young, blond, fresh-colored and enchanting.

The parrot went wild at sight of him.

"Hello, ol' top!" he shrieked.

Casper thrust his finger into the cage and the bird pretended to bite him.

"Well, what did you girls think of my gift?" Casper asked.

"Your gift!" exclaimed Augusta.

Casper laughed.

"I brought the old fellow, from South America. I couldn't keep him any longer, because I move around so much and I wouldn't sell him. I wrote to my cousin here, asking her to take him and she refused. She suggested I send him to you. She said you, Augusta, had always wanted a parrot."

"I have," Augusta admitted. "It was very kind of you, Casper. I'm sure Martha and I both appreciate Polly. We find him very amusing."

"He knows a lot of naughty words," said Martha.

"Well, I never taught him a thing. If he knows naughty words he's picked them up on his own hook. You'll find you'll have to be very careful what you say before him."

"Oh, we are," said Augusta, putting an arm about Martha.

"Sweethearts!" Oh, my!" snickered Polly sentimentally.

Augusta colored.

Casper stayed a fortnight. He couldn't be persuaded to stay longer, because he was by nature very restless.

The sisters were almost glad to see the last of him.

"It was awfully kind of him to give us Polly," Martha said.

"Yes, indeed, dear, I rather think Polly is the best part of the whole affair," returned Augusta.

Waite-Amulet, Pend Oreille, Noranda and Nickel all boarded declines and other base metal issues were steady.

Outstanding weak spots in the industrial list were C. P. R., Brazilian, Canadian Canners B and Canadian Locomotive. Senior oils held firm and Imperial posted a gain.

GUESTS LEAP FROM WINDOWS

Visitor Awakens Guests.

The fire alarm was turned in by Tim Holland, a visitor from Northern Ontario, who then helped in awakening the hotel guests. He stopped passing cars to enlist their occupants' aid.

TAKE TWO TWO MEN .. ..

Fire Chief Sinclair said his men carried 29 persons down ladders. With the three men saved by the R.C.A.F. men, rescues totalled 32.

Among the injured now in hospital are: Miss Alice Runnells, 39, maid, suffering burns and shock; Miss Helen Lambe, 37, badly burned; W. J. McFarland, 69, slight injuries; Fred Hugli, slight burns; Don McNaughton, 35, slightly injured; Walter Osterby, George Fitzsimmons and David Ungerman, all suffering slight burns and shock.

Axe still in hand when newspapermen arrived, Airman Hichon modestly minimized the part he played in the rescues. The three women he and his partner saved were half paralyzed with fear and partly overcome by smoke, Hichon said. Firemen declared the women might have perished but for the bravery of the Airmen. Civilians ripped off their overcoats, held them like life nets and urged the women to jump. Overcome by fear and half blinded by smoke, they refused and waited for the airmen to rescue them.

Guests 'Crazy with Fear'

"We had an awfully tough time getting them to come down," Hichon remarked. "They were crazy" with fear, and the smoke made things ten times worse—it was so thick we could hardly see."

"We were cruising around (on military police duty) when we saw the reels going up Jarvis Street. We arrived at the fire just as the first reel pulled up. We grabbed a ladder and shoved it against the side of the building. We heard someone screaming, so we climbed up to see who it was. We couldn't see because the smoke was so dense.

"We brought one woman down. Someone said: "There's more up there," so we went up again. We brought another down. Then we heard another scream and we saw a woman hanging from the corner of the building. Things were popping all around then. The noise was terrific. We got this girl, and that's all we could do."

Every Window Filled

"There were people in every window shouting and screaming," Holland recalled. "I saw several jumping out on to the roof of the drug store. When I got back from turning in the alarm the whole place was in flames.

"The fire just seemed to burst out in all directions," Holland continued. "I could see the flames shooting through from the bottom to the top, and a few minutes later the roof was burning.

"I took off my coat along with several other men, and we held them out like nets and shouted to those at the windows to jump, but nobody seemed too anxious to take up the suggestion. They were all shouting, and some would run back into the rooms and then came to to the windows again. Several stayed there until firemen were able to get ladders up for them, but I noticed that some who went away from the windows didn't come back. They must have got out some other way."

PRODUCE PRICES HOLD STEADY

Toronto, March 15 — All lines held at about previous prices on the Toronto open produce market yesterday. Demand picked up slightly for eggs during the afternoon, but butter continued quiet.

A steady tone prevailed on the egg market as trading improved. Dealers reported prices unchanged in both sections, with supplies enough to satisfy the demand. Government inspected lots of graded eggs sold at 1-2c premium on prices quoted.

ATTEMPT

As reported in Belgrade, Von Ribbentrop's proposal to the Italian government would put Europe's small Baltic, central and southeastern states in the economic orbit of the three totalitarian powers, with whom some already do most of their trading.

Yugoslav officials, although familiar with the economic operations of the Rome-Berlin axis, were skeptical, however, that Italy would consider taking Russia into partnership. Moreover, Italy in recent months has striven to capture German trade in the Balkans.

As Britain pulled in her belt another notch, the Times forecast the likelihood of further sacrifices, emphasizing the need of "diverting from civilian consumption something like half of the whole current production in order to devote it to winning the war."

May Drift Into Inflation

It warned also of a "real danger that we may drift into inflation" should the government delay a decision on whether to finance the war by voluntary or compulsory saving.

These were the three new measures:—

1. To tighten its hold on foreign exchange, the government banned private importation of canned and bottled fruits, beginning next Tuesday.

Only the Ministry of Food will be permitted to buy these products abroad but the effect on British supplies is not expected to be felt immediately since large stocks have been accumulated recently. Fruit juices, jam and marmalade are exempt.

The United States has been Britain's chief provider of canned and bottled fruits, principally peaches, pears, apricots, grapefruit and fruit salad. In 1938 more than $14,000,000 worth was imported from the United States.

2. To organize Anglo-French colonial co-operation in order to utilize all of both Empires' resources for the war effort, it was learned, Malcolm MacDonald, Colonial Secretary, will confer in Paris soon with Georges Mandel, French Minister of Colonies.

Discuss Trade

Besides production, their discussions are expected to include intra-colonial trade, transport, broadcasting, aviation and foreign currency restrictions. Colonial collaboration, it is believed, will supplement the economic agreement of last November by which the Allies pooled their resources and will make the colonies largely self-supporting.

3. Large-scale selling in Britain of securities, chiefly negotiable bonds on behalf of German interests, was disclosed in a stock exchange warning to members to "exercise greatest caution in accepting and executing orders, the real source of which they are not able to verify beyond all reasonable doubt."

Long Purse is Helpful

Such sales are subject both to stock exchange disciplinary action and stringent penalties under the law forbidding trade with the enemy.

The Financial Times explained that delivery of a "tainted" security passes no title to the purchaser and that "the seller thus is at the risk of having to make a second delivery if, as the result of an enemy interest, the securities comprised in the first delivery, are claimed by the custodian of enemy property."

Lord Beaverbrook, in a signed editorial in the Daily Express, voiced the opinion that the Russo-Finnish peace would not result in an increase in Scandinava's trade with Germany.

"Scandinavia must sell to Britain," he wrote. "Cash is the necessary condition of their lives. And it is only in Britain that they can collect it.

"A long purse makes a short war."

Some sources expressed belief Italy may double her purchases of British coal as a result of Britain's release of 13 Italian colliers laden with German coal and the Rome government's agreement to transport no more German coal by sea during the war.

The Daily Herald saw reports of an impending Russo-Italian reapprochment as a prelude to two other moves—"A big Balkan drive, an attempt to cajole or coerce Rumania, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria into the Berlin-Rome-Moscow system" and "a big peace move, Russia and Italy saying, 'Why not call it off?'"

LONG, TERRIBLE WAR PREDICTED

The war would be long and terrible and the next parliament would be a "war parliament" in the fullest sense of the word, the Prime Minister said. From the best information the war would last two or three years "and who can say what part of this world will not be "terrorized?"

He felt maximum war effort over a period of years only could be exerted by a united country and the present government was in the best position to keep Canada united.

Dr. Manion spoke at Hamilton, Ont., and denied charges that he owed his leadership to Quebec and now had a "tie-up" with Quebec. "I am subservant to no individual, class, group or section. I am my own master and will remain so in or out of power."

No Arrangements With Duplessis

Concerning former Premier Maurice Duplessis of Quebec, Dr. Manion said he has no arrangement with him of any kind.

The Toronto Liberal meeting also heard Justice Minister Lapointe, Defence Minister Rogers, Provincial Secretary Nixon of Ontario and long-time friend of Mr. King.

Mr. Lapointe said he would "stand or fall with Mackenzie King but fall we shall not." Mr. Rogers said a united national effort has been the constant concern of the government and "it will continue to be our purpose day and night until the final victory has been won."

Only Ontario cabinet minister on the Toronto platform, Mr. Nixon said his return to the Hepburn cabinet after resigning in protest against the premier's criticism of the war effort involved "no withdrawal or modification" of remarks made by him when he left the cabinet. Because the issue was federal and had not been discussed in cabinet he had agreed to remain as Provincial Secretary.

"Madness" for Canada to Change

Sir William said it would be "madness" for Canada to change governments at this time.

At another Toronto meeting, Conservative leader Drew of Ontario charged that defence department orders were received from 1936 to 1939 inclusive by a lumber partnership at Kingston, Ont., in which the "main interest" was held by Grant MacLachlan, Private Secretary to Mr. Rogers.

Stating that during all this time Mr. MacLachlan was Mr. Rogers' secretary, Col. Drew said: "The last order received by Mr. MacLachlan and his partners was awarded through the War Supply Board on Nov. 24, 1939, for lumber. That tells just how the War Supply Board has been able to stop patronage and favoritism."

"If Mr. Mackenzie King is at all concerned about public confidence in the direction of our war effort he should ask for Mr. Rogers' resignation immediately," Col. Drew said. "And on this occasion he should not ease the blow by appointing him to some other department.

Drew Criticized Rogers

Col. Drew said that on Aug. 17, 1936, Mr. MacLachlan formed a partnership with his wife and C. C. Wyatt of Kingston known as "MacLachlan Lumber and Woodworking Company." On Aug. 15, 1939, Wyatt left the partnership and new partners were A. G. MacLachlan, Sara E. MacLachlan, his wife Alexander MacLachlan, his father, and Ian MacLachlan, his brother.

Col. Drew asked whether Mr. Rogers would "suggest for one moment that he was unaware of these orders from the Department of National Defence given to a business in which his private secretary had the main interest.

"Does Mr. Rogers suggest for one moment that he is so ignorant of orders given in his own riding of Kingston that he did not know that 10 orders had been given to the MacLachlan Lumber and Woodworking Company during the time that Mr. MacLachlan was his private secretary?"

Denies Charges

The war effort of the Mackenzie King administration was defended by Transport Minister Howe, at Geraldton, 175 miles northeast of Port Arthur.

"Never in my life have I had a cost-plus contract with the government," he said in referring to a statement made in Cornwall, Ont., recently by Dr. Manion.

He also denied a charge by Col. Drew, that his desk was piled high with war purchase contracts which Mr. Howe could not make up his mind to sign.

"Not one of those contracts lingers in my desk," he said. "After reading them over they are promptly signed and passed along to Privy Council for approval. I would say that the average time of a contract at my desk as Minister of the War Supply Board is 10 minutes."

Accused of General Terms

Defence Minister Rogers hit out at Toronto in a half-hour address over a network of Ontario radio stations Thursday at the use of "general terms" in criticizing the Dominion government's war effort.

He accused Dr. Manion and Col. Drew and Premier Hepburn of using "very general terms" in accusations against the administration.

"Sometimes, in order to give them the appearance of authority, they are introduced by such phrases as: 'I have this from military authorities themselves,' or 'a General told me this,' or 'this statement is made on the authority of the highest officers who took the first division overseas'," Mr. Rogers said. "When all else fails, the charge may be introduced by that masterpiece of vagueness, 'everybody knows'."

Willing to Create Doubt

Dr. Manion, Col. Drew and Mr. Hepburn, with Maurice Duplessis, former Premier of Quebec, "possibly lurking in the background," were willing "in their desire to gain power" to "create doubt, distrust and suspicion in the minds of the Canadian people." They hope to "discredit our carefully considered long-range plan, which has been designed to achieve unity in the accomplishment of Canada's maximum war effort."

Canada's old parties are trying to slide into power on a wave of war enthusiasm, J. S. Woodsworth, Co-operative Commonwealth Federation leader, said at Regina. I don't think that's enough," Mr. Woodsworth said. "I don't think any government should be returned to power without telling what it intends to do about domestic conditions."

Some Opposed

Referring to the sessions held last September, on the outbreak of war, Mr. Woodsworth said: "The government had practically committed us to the war before the session assembled."

Some of the C. C. F. group at Ottawa had favored supporting Great Britain to the limit but "I don't mind saying there were some of us opposed to entering the war."

With Canada at war, the party had to decide a common policy. It opposed conscription and opposed sending an expeditionary force.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King had said he did not think any overseas force would be required for some time.

"We had hardly got home when an overseas force was dispatched," Mr. Woodsworth said.

At Vancouver Senator Cairine Wilson said it was "curious if Denton Massey was taking credit for originality" in the 12-point program for curing the problems of youth and unemployment he outlined here last Tuesday "because 11 of the points are in the program of the Liberal Government."

She referred to a speech in which the National Government candidate for Toronto Greenwood outlined the National Government party's plan to ameliorate those problems through conservation, training, development of industries and other measures.

12th to Be Considered

Senator Wilson said the 12th point on Mr. Massey's program — unemployment insurance— would be brought down by the Liberal Government when the necessary co-operation was obtained from the provinces for a constitutional amendment.

M. J. Coldwell, C. C. F. National Chairman, at London, Ont., said Mr. King deliberately has prevented Canadians from learning what his government has done since war started. He criticized the Prime Minister for calling an election and forestalling Parliamentary debate on the war effort.

At Montreal Works Minister Cardin defended Canada's entry into the war because it was a crusade to preserve liberty and freedom. Trade Minister Euler spoke at Paris, Ont.

Dr. Manion States That He Has Made No Cabinet Commitments Also Has No 'Tie-up' With Quebec

(By Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Hamilton, Ont., March 15—(CP)—No cabinet commitments have been made by the National Government cause, Conservative leader Manion said here last night in a Federal election campaign address to 1,500 persons.

Dr. Manion said Defence Minister Rogers had been picking a cabinet for him in his recent speeches but Mr. Rogers was not "capable of belonging to a cabinet, much less picking one."

"I repeat what I have stated on several occasions: I am subservient to no individual, class, group or section," Dr. Manion said. "I am my own master and will remain so in or out of power."

Neither had he any arrangement with Maurice Duplessis, former premier of Quebec. He had met Mr. Duplessi only two or three times "and I have no arrangement with him of any kind."

Suggestions had been made that he had some "tie-up" with Quebec province, but the Conservative leader denied these. He said he loved "Canada and all its nine provinces—not just one," like Works Minister Cardin, Justice Minister Lapointe and "other Quebec lieutenants of Mr. King."

Dr. Manion said that at the National Conservative convention in 1938 he had received every vote from Prince Edward Island, a heavy vote from New Brunswick, the whole vote of eastern Ontario and "a whole sweep of votes from Toronto, too, to their credit."

"I owe the leadership to the Conservative convention which was representative of every province and I got votes from every province."

Dr. Manion urged the benefits of a National Government to handle the conduct of the war, since that and the prospective post-war problems were beyond the capacity of any one party to handle satisfactorily.

Country Has to Think of Future

While he held that the war was Canada's prime interest at the moment, it was not the government's only interest. The country had to think of the future and other problems besides the war. One didn't close down the country's normal activities because of the war.

A National Government, he said, would be a step towards rebuilding the present system—but not changing the system—to give every section of the populace a fair deal.

To the statement that he had not made himself clear in the Quebec election as had Mr. King, Mr. Lapointe, Dr. Cardin and Postmaster General Power, Dr. Manion replied that Mr. King had done as he had—"We were both from Ontario and had we gone into the Quebec election we would probably have been told to mind our own business and go back to our own province," he said.

Mr. King had jumped into the "feast" only after the election, he said.

To the report that M. J. Coldwell, National Chairman of C. C. F., had been offered a National Government cabinet post by some wealthy man, Dr. Manion said no wealthy man or no poor man had the right to ask anyone into the cabinet he might form.

"I repeat what I have stated on several occasions, I am subservient to no individual, class, group or section. I am my own master and will remain so in or out of power."

Defence Minister Rogers was also picking a cabinet for him, he continued, although Mr. Rogers was not "capable of belonging to a cabinet, much less picking one."

He said Mr. King had been promising unemployment insurance for 20 years but excused himself by saying the constitution would not let him — "His constitution," he added. After a pause and a chuckle he said: "By golly, that's better than I thought. It slipped out."

UNCLE OF VICTIM TELLS OF SHOOTING

James Crawford Appears at Preliminary Hearing on Charge of Murder at Stratford

Stratford, Ont., Mar. 15 (CP).—James Crawford, 41, general merchant and service station operator at Prospect Hill, Perth County hamlet, today was committed for trial on a charge of murdering Amber Carter, 39, Blanshard Township farmer.

Magistrate J. A. Makins heard five witnesses, one of whom was James McWilliam, Carter's uncle and who lived with him. McWilliams testified to seeing Crawford fire the fatal shotgun blast. McWilliams' bail of $1,000 as a material witness was renewed.

It is likely that the trial of Crawford will be held in October.

Carter was shot to death on his farm the night of Feb. 29. Crawford was arrested some hours later.

James McWilliam, uncle of Carter and who lived with him, said that on the day of Carter's death, he had come with him to Stratford. They returned home about 10 o'clock at night.

An electric light on the end of the house was turned on as the car driven by Carter entered the laneway. Carter stepped from the car on the side nearest the house. Witness said he recognized Crawford who "came up, stopped on the lane and shot". Crawford was carrying a double-barrelled gun in front of him.

When this shot was fired, the muzzle of the gun pointed to the sky. There was about 30 feet between Crawford and Carter.

"Crawford said 'where have you been' twice and Carter replied 'hold on, Jim.' Then Crawford fired twice with the shotgun." Carter toppled over and Crawford "struck for the road".

Carter did not speak when he picked him up, McWillam said. "I could tell he was near dead and I carried him into the house. He breathed three or four times while lying on the kitchen floor before he died."

McWilliam told Defence Counsel Meyer Lerner of London that he had lived with the Carters for two years. After McWilliam and Carter reached Stratford they separated, agreeing to meet at the Windsor Hotel. He did not see Carter again until that night. On previous occasions he had waited "short times" for Carter, sometimes until nine or ten o'clock at night.

Dr. T. J. McInnes, St. Mary's, called to the Carter home, said there were indications of shotgun wounds in the chest. Carter was dead when he arrived. Later Dr. McInnes assisted at a post-mortem and it was established shotgun wounds caused death.

Provincial Constable George Clubbe, London, said that early on the morning of March 1 he and Constable Fulton went to Crawford's store.

"I walked in and asked what had happened," Clubbe said. "He (Crawford))said 'I shot a man'!" Clubbe asked who the man was and Crawford said it was Carter. Asked how he shot him, Crawford handed a shotgun to police.

Mantle of Fresh Snow Turns Trees, Shrubbery Into Fairyland of White

Belleville awakened today to a veritable winter wonderland. Snow, usually heralded by maple-sugar makers of the district as the "sap-snow" converted gaunt trees and winter-tired shrubbery into things of white glistening beauty.

Silver-ribbed, leafless trees stretched their arms into the morning sunlight, with snow-laden branches and twigs, like things of living beauty. Dull drab roofs of houses and buildings in the city took on a new life; cars parked outside over night were white mounds of snowy radiance. The mantle that fell over everything converted the aftermath of a winter's residue into a thing of white glory.

Traffic on the highways, however, was not impeded seriously as the snow was of a damp substance that refused to drift. Sideroads and concession lines of the northern areas, according to travellers, were filled, but snowplows of the county were despatched early today to relieve congestion of snow. Main highways were reported to be clear at noon.

Observers Believe Negotiations Begin For Defence Alliance

Stockholm, March 15 —(AP)— The first step in negotiations toward a possible northern defence alliance was seen today in the arrival here of C. J. Bambro, president of the Norwegian parliament.

Observers expressed belief Bambro will establish his first contacts with Swedish political leaders on the question of whether such an alliance is feasible. These sources said military staff conversations will follow to consider the important changes in Scandinavian defence policy involved.

In Oslo, Foreign Minister Halvdan Koht today issued a statement in which he emphasized that Norway so far has pledged herself to nothing beyond a willingness to discuss the possibility of a pact.

"So far as I know there exists at present no draft or detailed working out of plans," Koht said. "I can however, well appreciate the different conditions which may make it desirable to take the program up for earnest consideration."

CREW SCUTTLES GERMAN SHIP

60 Members of Crew Picked Up by British Warship That Intercepted Vessel

London, March 15 (CP)—The German steamship La Coruna, 7,414 tons, was scuttled at sea on Wednesday when intercepted by a British warship, it was announced officially today.

The warship picked up 60 members of the German crew after the ship was set afire. The warship later finished off the vessel with gunfire to prevent it becoming a menace to navigation.

La Coruna left Rio De Janeiro Feb. 13 and apparently was trying to reach Germany by using Norwegian territorial waters. She was intercepted in "northern waters," the official announcement said.

She was the third German merchantman put out of action by Allied naval patrols this week. On March 10 the 5,000-ton Hannover was intercepted and, after the German crew had failed in an attempt to scuttle her, was taken to Kingston, Jamaica, as a prize of war. Three days later the 3,303-ton Erchersheim was sunk in European waters.

Once Passenger Liner

La Coruna before the outbreak of war was a passenger liner trading between Hamburg, her home port, and Rio De Janeiro and Santos. Built in 1921 in Hamburg, she was 414 feet long and had a 61-foot beam.

When she slipped away from Rio De Janeiro her declared cargo which included 30,000 bags of coffee and 2,000 cases of lard and some mica and nickel ore, totalled only 1,600 tons.

A Brazilian source at the time said she was loaded with much coal and there was speculation in Rio that she planned to transfer some of it to other German merchantmen at sea.

Constables Arnott and Ellis made the arrest and today police seized a quantity of home made wine in a Station Street residence as a sequel to the case.

Must Send Girl to School

Charged under the School Attendance Act, E. J. Dafoe of this city, admitted in open court he was guilty of keeping his 14-year-old girl from attending school. "My wife fell and injured her leg and it was necessary to keep the girl home," pleaded Dafoe. The accused was ordered by the court to send his daughter to school.

Truant Officer Fred Wiggins was present in court and revealed that the girl had been absent from school 19 days in January, 19 days in February and 11 days in March.

Appearing on a charge of keeping liquor for sale, Fred Day, East Dundas Street, Belleville, asked for a week's enlargement. His request was granted by Acting Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson.

Next Friday being Good Friday there will be no session of city police court, Magistrate Butler enlarging all cases until March 23rd., Saturday next.

BRITAIN TO BUY PRESERVED FRUIT AND VEGETABLES

Preference to be Given Canada and Other Parts of Empire, Says Report

CANADIAN REACTION

London, March 15—(CP Cable)—The Ministry of Food, it is understood, plans to purchase large quantities of preserved fruits and vegetables, giving preference to supplies from Canada and other parts of the Empire.

Commenting on last night's Board of Trade order prohibitiong imports of canned and bottled fruit except under licence, a spokesman said it is necessary to slow down imports of fruit in order to conserve dollars and other currencies hard to get.

Imports of canned and bottled fruits in recent months have been substantially above the country's normal requirements, a large proportion of the imports coming from the United States.

The new Empire buying program it was added, likely will have to wait until the situation becomes normal again. Last night's order permits application for specific licences but in practice few will be granted. Fruit pulps, jam and marmalade are not affected.

The Ministry of Food becomes virtually the sole purchaser of canned and bottled fruit and Food Minister W. S. Morrison is closely watching the prices of present stocks.

View at Ottawa

Ottawa, March 15.— (CP) — A Trade and Commerce Department source said today the effect on Canada of a British Government decision to purchase large quantities of preserved fruits and vegetables, giving the Empire supplies preference, cannot be gauged immediately.

It was said in London that the new Empire buying program likely will have to wait until the supply situation in the United Kingdom becomes normal. Imports have been especially heavy.

The British Board of Trade last night prohibited imports of canned and bottled fruit except under licence with a view to conserving foreign exchange. The order becomes effective March 19.

Meantime negotiations in regard to Canadian exports to the United Kingdom are being carried on in London by the Canadian High Commissioner.

President Submits Russo-Finnish Peace Treaty to Parliament

Helsinki, March 15. (CP-Havas)—President Kyosti Kallio today submitted the Russo-Finnish peace treaty to the Finnish Parliament for ratification.

In his message to parliament, the President recalled that "from the beginning of hostilities the Finnish government expressed its desire to re-establish peace".

He briefly reviewed the sending of a delegation headed by Premier Rysto Ryti to Moscow on March 6 and the signature of the pact on March 12, "the date on which the government gave the order to accept the peace conditions and sign the treaty".

Since the Finnish constitution makes ratification by the Diet necessary, he said, "I propose that you proceed to the act of ratification".

Rome, March 15—(CP-Havas)—Italy is speeding improvement of her air force and can dominate the Mediterranean from the air, General Francesco Pricolo, Under-Secretary for Air said in a speech before the Chamber of Fasces and Corporations today.

Rumor Says Hitler Plans To Invade Netherlands

Unconfirmed Report From Neutral Country States German Offensive Set for Early Date in Hope of Forcing Allies to Agree to Open Peace Negotiations by Offer to Withdraw From Netherlands

London, March 15—(CP)—The Havas News Agency said today that according to unconfirmed reports reaching London by way of a neutral country, Adolf Hitler is planning to invade the Netherlands soon in the hope that German occupation of that country will force the Allies to submit to drastic German peace terms.

The German offensive into the lowlands has been set for an early date, the report said. Hitler would attempt to justify Holland's invasion by claiming that Germany needs air and submarine bases with which to combat the Allied blockade.

However, there are deeper purposes behind Hitler's plan, according to the report. He was described as hoping that Britain and France, faced with the threat of a "lightning" war from the air and undersea, would agree to open peace negotiations upon the Nazi leader's promise to withdraw his troops from the Netherlands.

It is reported that Joachim Von Ribbentrop asked Premier Mussolini during his recent visit to Rome how Italy would act if the Reich attacked the Netherlands and Belgium. There was no information as to Mussolini's reply.

PROBE ASKED BY OWNER OF CLUB

Department of Defence Disclaimed Any Responsibility for $1,250 Damages Inflicted

London, Ont., March 15—(CP)—A. W. Gilleno, proprietor of the former Hollywood Dine-and-Dance Club, which was raided and wrecked by soldiers last fall, said today he would communicate with Premier Mitchell Hepburn, requesting a public investigation in view of the recent enquiry at St. Thomas.

Through City Council, Gilleno asked the Department of National Defence to pay a $1,200 bill for damages, and to conduct a probe. The department disclaimed responsibility.

Announcing he would now seek the aid of Premier Hepburn, Mr. Gilleno said: "If a so-called disturbance, without violence, at the St. Thomas air force training centre was considered serious enough to call for a public enquiry, why has similar action not been taken with regard to a disturbance at my place of business, where violence and destruction of property did occur?"

The proudest woman in the district beamed smiles of appreciation at the Capitol theatre Wednesday night when she received a cheque for $200.00 from Manager Tommy Mascaro for her photograph.

Presented with the cheque on the stage, Mrs. Conley modestly expressed her appreciation, and thanked her friends whose privilege it was to select her name.

The popular "Foto-nite" will continue indefinitely, Manager Mascaro said today. The present offer is $170.00 for the first selection and $35 for the second.

Popularity of this feature is evidenced in the overflow crowds that attend the theatre each Wednesday night.

RESTRICTIONS ON U. S. IMPORTS A WAR MEASURE

Lord Lothian States They Are Not in Any Way Intended as Permanent Diversion

HULL EXPLAINS

Washington, March 15.—(AP)—Great Britain, through Lord Lothian, declared today that her restrictions on imports of certain United States products were solely war measures and "not in any way intended to cause a permanent diversion of trade".

The assertion was contained in a formal statement by the British Ambassador issued by the British Embassy here.

State Secretary Cordell Hull, at his press conference a little later, said he was glad to be able to say that discussions were continuing with representatives of the British and French governments to safeguard United States commercial interests.

Hull explained that total American exports to Great Britain, despite the restrictions on certain products, had greatly increased since the war started in September. Those to France have more than doubled, especially during the past two or three months, he said.

War munitions, Hull said, constituted only a minor portion of the exports.

The British Ambassador's statement followed announcement in London that canned and bottled fruits have been added to the list of goods which may not be imported except under licence.

Discussions Continue

"In view of the Trade Agreements between the two countries", the Ambassador's statement said, "discussions are taking place at the present time with the United States government with the view of mitigating to the fullest extent the effects of the measures which the British government are compelled to take for war reasons."

The statement added "Lord Lothian explained that the licensing of imports of canned and bottled fruits had been necessary because of the very large stocks now held in Great Britain. There had been a very substantial increase in the imports of such fruit in the first eight months of 1939, largely from the United States.

"Since the outbreak of war importation had continued on a greatly increased scale and quite recently there were unmistakable signs of further large orders coming forward.

"It has therefore become necessary to control imports as part of the National policy of restricting consumption of non-essential commodities in order to protect dollar exchange, to prevent the accumulation of unnecessarily large stocks and to save shipping space. This is purely a measure which results from the war. Its objects are solely those stated and it is not in any way intended to cause a permanent diversion of trade."

FRENCH SENATE IN SECRET DEBATE

Daladier Explains in Detail Conduct of War to the Senators

Paris, March 15 (CP)—As the French Senate gathered for a second day of secret debate on the Allied war strategy, former premier Leon Blum's newspaper Le Populaire today described the atmosphere in Paris as "a political crisis the consequences of which cannot be gauged."

For three hours yesterday Premier Daladier explained to the Senators the conduct of the war. It is likely a vote will be taken tonight.

"A vote not of an overwhelming or unanimous character like the others since the start of hostilities could be interpreted as censure of governmen action," commented Le Petit Journal.

The debate covers French reaction to the Russo-Finnish peace. One of the four Senate leaders questioning Daladier yesterday was Pierre Laval, former premier and possible successor to Daladier in the case of a government upset.

Press Criticism

The general tenor of press criticism is that the Allies "find a battlefield and make war" against Germany. "In other words," says Le Temps, "abandon the present war of siege policy."

Blum, writing in Le Populaire, said "The Finnish peace does not expose the Allies to any new danger, but their cause has been damaged."

Ruger Deleplanque in Le Petit Bleu said that "since we are from all evidence on the eve of a great change in the affairs of the country, a change involving the conduct of the war, is not indicated that those responsible for the enormous errors in relations with Russia, for example, and still more in relations with Italy, have to be purged."

Le Matin forecast no sensational results from the Senate debate, declaring the "high level of the discussion will not prevent some severe criticism but that will not change the final result which seems easy enough to predict and which Daladier can await without uneasiness."

Pontiff Unconvinced Of Certainty of German Victory

Vatican City, March 15 (CP-Havas)—Authoritative Vatican circles disclosed last night that the German foreign minister, Joachim Von Ribbentrop spent more than half of his 65-minute interview with Pope Pius last week-end in an unsuccessful effort to convince the Pontiff of the certainty of a German victory in the war.

These sources said Adolf Hitler sent his foreign minister to the Vatican with the following aims:

1. To impress upon the Holy See the certainty of an impending and crushing German victory.

2. To impress public opinion in neutral countries.

3. To reassure German and Austrian Catholics whose distrust of the pro-Russian-German policy is growing daily.

The interview, the same sources said, opened with a 30-minute monologue by Von Ribbentrop, who dealt at length on what he claimed was the invincibility of the Reich. He expressed the certainty that German arms would triumph some time this year.

The monologue, it was said, was interrupted finally by the Pope, who asked Von Ribbentrop regarding prosecutions inflicted by the Nazis on the Catholic clergy in Poland and the general anti-Catholic attitude of the Nazis in German-controlled territories.

Vatican circles said Von Ribbentrop limited himself to vague promises regarding treatment of the clergy in Poland.

MACY'S USED AS A "MIDDLEMAN" SAYS DIETRICH

Acted as "Middleman" Between Girard and Company and Bootleggers Says Witness

New York, March 15.— (AP)—George Dietrich, brother of the late Philip Musica who as F. Donald Coster headed the $87,000,000 wholesale drug firm of McKesson and Robbins, Inc., testified in Federal Court today that R. H. Macy and Company virtually was used in 1926 as a "middleman" between Girard and Company and bootleggers.

Girard and Company was the concern which Coster-Musica headed after he left New York City under indictment for subornation of perjury. The Girard Company, the government had charged, was a blind for diverting products with a high alcoholic content.

Dietrich was called back to the stand today to continue his testimony at the trial of five men, indicted for mail fraud and conspiracy.

On trial are Horace B. Merwin, Bridgeport, Conn., banker, Rowley W. Phillips, Waterbury, Conn., investment broker, John H. McGloon, former comptroller of McKesson and Robbins, Leonard and John O. Jenkins, brothers. The latter two defendants are brothers of Mrs. Carol O. Coster, widow of Coster who ended his life when he was exposed as an ex-convict.

Dietrich's statement relating to Macy's—a large New York Department store—was made under cross-examination by George Z. Medalie.

"Didn't you sell many drug products to R. H. Macy's"? the attorney asked.

"Yes, we did. Macy's was known as a cover house", replied Dietrich.

Once, the witness said, a sale of 350 barrels of hair tonic was made to the department store of the drug firm.

"Did Macy's actually buy this?" demanded Medalie.

"Yes, they did," was the answer. "Macy would pay Girard and Company, and the bootleggers would pay Macy. It was a wash sale."

Informed of this testimony, Delos Walker, general manager of Macy's, issued the following statement—

"Such testimony sounds too ridiculous to receive serious acceptance. However, we shall be glad, indeed, to lend every facility to the Federal District Attorney for the exploration of Musica's testimony."

Germany Suggests That Carol Take a Pro-Nazi Iron Guardist Into Rumanian Cabinet — Also Asks That Rumania Demobilize Most of 1,600,000 Troops

By ROBERT ST. JOHN

Associated Press Staff Writer

Bucharest, March 16 —(AP) — Sources close to King Carol declared today that Rumania cannot pay Germany's price for a "security" offer.

They described the terms for proposed Hungarian and Russian border guarantees as "intolerable and impossible of acceptance" and said the plan is doomed unless Germany modifies it greatly.

Stiff opposition rose in high government quarters against every concession asked of Rumania—political, economic and military. The King's advisers were said to feel that any Rumanian attempt to give Germany the virtual monopoly of exports she seeks would disrupt the country's economy almost as badly as war itself.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Spring fogs! Since fogs are in essence the same as clouds they are formed in much the same way: in general by water vapor in the air being cooled to or below the dewpoint. Specifically fogs are formed by (1) warm moist air flowing over cool surfaces; (2) by warm moist air losing its heat by radiation; or (3) by the mixing of different masses of air of different temperatures. Fogs of the third type are generally light. In spring, fogs are often formed by the flowing of warm moist air over cool land or water surfaces, and the fogs occurring on Great Lakes at this season are of that type.

Engineer of Pusher Engine Responsible For Crash, Report

Calgary, March 16—(CP) — A Canadian Pacific Railway statement concerning the Dennis siding main line crash between a passenger train and a pusher engine 20 miles west of Medicine Hat early yesterday stated an "investigation indicates responsibility rests with the engineer of the pusher engine." Five passengers were injured.

The statement of E. D. Cotterell of Calgary, General Superintendent of the railway's Alberta district follows: "The investigation conducted on the ground indicates that the responsibility rests with the engineer of the pusher engine for his failure to take the passing track at Bowell (six miles east of Dennis siding) for No. 4." The passenger train was listed as No. 4.

Railway officials earlier stated that A. Foulston of Medicine Hat was the engineer of the pusher engine.

Of the passengers injured only J. R. Milne of Winnipeg, who suffered from knee and back injuries and shock, remained in Medicine Hat Hospital.

SIR A. SINCLAIR PRAISES WINSTON

Claims Royal Oak Would Not Have Been Sunk if He Had Been in Charge

Manchester, March 16 (CP)—Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal leader, in a speech here today said that if Winston Churchill had been First Lord of the Admiralty "a few months earlier when we were loudly demanding it, that fine ship, the Royal Oak and her gallant crew would never have been lost in Scapa Flow."

Recalling that Mr. Churchill and Anthony Eden, Dominions' Secretary, were "only admitted to the government on the day war was declared," Sir Archibald said: "Six months of Mr. Churchill before the war would have been six nails in Hitler's coffin. But he was not a yes-man, so they would not have him until they were forced to have him."

The Liberal leader criticized the attitude of Sweden and Norway during the Finnish-Soviet war, but said:

"The Swedish government behaved must as our government did at Munich, but we Liberals are entitled to record our condemnation of this fresh betrayal of democracy.

"The freedom and independence of Sweden and Norway are bound up with the fortunes of France and Great Britain."

If Germany defeats the Allies, he said, Scandinavia will either be divided between Germany and the Soviet Union or will become the theatre of a merciless war between them. International law, treaties packs of non-aggression and neutrality, he said, will have no validity for Sweden and Norway if Germany wins.

Brawny Alaskan Sourdough Travels Over 6,000 Miles to March in Parade

Newark, N.J., March 16—(AP)— A brawny Alaskan sourdough who travelled 6,822 miles because he was "lonsome for a crowd of Irishmen," will march tomorrow with 99,999 others sons of Erin expected to participate in Newark's St. Patrick's Day parade.

Marching with the O'Hara Association will be Peter A. Brady, a County Caven man who struck out for the gold fields 32 years ago.

Brady returned to Newark at the insistence of an old acquaintance, Frank O'Hara, who has been corresponding with the gold miner since he left Newark in 1908.

"I'm sad for the lack of my own people," Brady wrote O'Hara from his camp on Jack Wade Creek, 200 miles north of Fairbanks, Alaska. "St. Patrick's night will indeed be a sad time for me."

O'Hara lost no time inviting Brady to march here as Marshal of the O'Hara Association Unit. Brady lost no time getting here.

He balked at parade regulations which require silk hats but finally agreed to wear one.

"I'll do it," he said. "But mind ye, I won't like it."

(By the Canadian Press)

This wartime Dominion election campaign is providing more repetition of a multitude of arguments and controversies than any in Canadian history, political veterans in Ottawa maintain.

All parties seem to be running short of high-powered ammunition and pound away at the original issues, but electoral bomb shells might explode before the majority of voters cast their ballots March 26. The Active Service vote start in Canada today.

There were no explosions last night, however as campaigners for the most part emphasized policies and points of view expounded previously.

Conservative leader Manion addressed a London, Ont., rally and denounced a "despicable whispering campaign" which he said was being carried on in all parts of Canada by "low, back-door slanderers."

Wants British Fair Play

Canadians want British fair play and they "will condemn cowardly tactics by men who are afraid to speak publicly," he added.

Rumors that a National Government would introduce conscription and amalgamate the railways were criticised by Dr. Manion, who again said he opposed both policies.

45 Polish Priests Are Imprisoned

Vatican City, March 16—(CP)— Imprisonment of 45 Polish Czech and Austrian priests in German concentration camps has been reported to Pope Pius, the Polish embassy to the Holy See announced today.

The Pope received the report before his conference last weekend with Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop of Germany and the embassy believes the Pope referred to it.

August Cardinal Hlond, primate of Poland, in another report says Soviet authorities in Russian-occupied Poland have discouraged the killing of priests in favor of more subtle and "scientific" methods of instilling Atheism. Some violence still exists, the statement said, but most instances are to the excesses of local communists, lasting only until the secret police take control.

In the place of violence the Soviet regime has confiscated church possessions and deprived the clergy of its revenues.

24-HOUR-A-DAY JUDGE

Lebanon, Mo., Mar. 16 (AP).—William H. Turner, Lebanon's 24-hour-a-day police judge, filed for re-election with a plea to be kept in office until he's 100 years old. Turner, 95, has a standing request with police to call him immediately after an arrest — day or night. He claims his system costs the city hundreds of dollars annually by eliminating board for prisoners awaiting a hearing.

Bandits Flee After Imaginary Call For Help Given

London, Ont., March 16—(CP)— Two bandits, one of them holding what appeared to be a revolver, fled from the grocery store of Mrs. D. J. Ross, Hamilton Road, last night when she cried "Come on in and help" to an imaginary person in the living room adjoining the store.

Mrs. Ross said the men came into her store late last night and one of them asked for cigarettes. As she turned to get the cigarettes, she was told the visit was a hold-up. She then made her outcry and the men turned and fled.

Both bandits, unmasked, were described as of medium height and wore dark overcoats and masks.

Police believe the pair were the men who have been sought for a holdup a few blocks away.

"SACRIFICED" BY SUPPLY MINISTER CHARGE LEVELLED

Political Storm of Criticism of Ministry of Supply Heard in Parliament

ULLMAN MENTIONED

London, March 16—(CP Cable)— A political storm arising out of criticism of the Ministry of Supply increased sharply today with a charge by a dismissed Ministry official that he had been "sacrificed" by Supply Minister Leslie Burgin.

Robert Behar, one of three Ministry officials dismissed March 5 without explanation, issued a statement charging that Mr. Burgin, "embarrassed by attacks on his department and by questions in the House of Commons, sacrificed me in a miscalculated political manoeuvre."

"Mr. Burgin's action," charged Behar, "was in violation of every principle of natural justice."

Behar's brother David, one of the three dismissed, yesterday demanded his (David's) "rehabilitation" or a plain declaration of the reasons for his dismissal. Mr. Burgin has refused to give these reasons to the House of Commons.

The matter was brought up again in the House of Commons yesterday, by Herbert Morrison, Labor.

Atmosphere of "Suspicion"

The Minister, Leslie Burgin, admitted during yesterday's debate that an "atmosphere of suspicion" had been created by the activities of "unscrupulous individuals" but said measures are being worked out which will make it a crime for an individual to attempt to obtain commissions by giving the impression he can influence civil servants or government services.

In leading the attack on the Ministry, Mr. Morrison charged certain businessmen claimed that through their influence on government departments they could obtain orders for manufacturers in return for a commission. Among these men he mentioned Captain V. R. Ullman, M.C., who served in the first Great War with the Canadian Army, 21st Battalion.

SAP'S RUNNIN' IN WEST ONTARIO

Department of Agriculture Estimates a Crop of 3,000,000 Gallons This Year

Ottawa, Mar. 16 (CP). — Sap's runnin' in Western Ontario and soon in other parts of central and eastern Canada the Maple bushes will echo to the shouts of workers as they tap trees to make syrup and maple sugar.

The Dominon Agriculture Department said today that there are prospects of a good yield this year and estimate that 3,000,000 gallons of syrup will be turned out. Last year the crop amounted to 2,502,000 gallons, valued at $3,443,800 to the farmers. It takes 40 gallons of sap to make a gallon of syrup and 80 per cent of the syrup comes from Quebec province.

The demand is expected to be particularly good for syrup and sugar this year, the department said, and as there is very little export trade, the crop will not be affected materially by wartime trade restrictions.

Two More Members Of Finnish Cabinet Give Resignations

London, March 16 —(CP)— An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Stockholm today reported the resignation of two more members of the Finnish Government, Juhu Paasikivi, minister without portfolio and Dr. R. von Fieandt, minister of public works.

Two cabinet ministers, War Minister Juho Niukanen and Education Minister Uuno Hannula resigned in protest against the peace with Soviet Russia.

Paasikivi was a member of the Finnish delegation that negotiated the peace treaty with Russia in Moscow last Tuesday and headed the delegation that went to Moscow before the outbreak of the war November 30 to discuss Russian territorial demands upon Finland.

NEW U-BOAT WAVE EXPECTED SAYS COMMUNIQUE

U-boats Now Out Are Returning to Bases and New Ones Taking Their Places French Report

TWO U-BOATS SUNK

Paris, March 16 (AP)—Sinking of two German submarines was reported by French naval sources today with the comment that Germany apparently is dispatching a new wave of U-boats to prey upon shipping.

There are indications, naval men said, that the submarines which had been at sea since February were returning to their bases and that others were taking their places.

One submarine was sunk by an armed British trawler, the French informants said. (Such a sinking was reported by British seamen Thursday. It was not clear whether the French and British versions referred to the same incident.)

Friday passed on the western front without the slightest evidence of action, and another day of bad weather hindered aviation.

This morning's French communique said "nothing to report."

With Spring only a few days off, the general arrangement of German troops remains what it was at the end of last Autumn, according to French military sources.

During the intervening three months German training centres have been busy and new divisions have been created in central Germany. A few of these divisions have moved forward to take their place behind the German forces which have not changed their location.

Practically the same number of large units are stationed behind the Belgian and Netherlands frontiers as spent the Winter there. Also there is no change in the strength of the forces facing Switzerland or those manning the Westwall.

GERMAN MINISTER HAS RESIGNED

Secretary of State in Transport of Ministry Announced Officially

Berlin, March 16—(CP-Havas)— The resignation of Gustav Koenigs, Secretary of State in the German Transport Ministry, was announced officially today. The German News Agency said the resignation was connected with "changes of an internal nature and measures for reorganization of the ministry of communications and transport."

(The Berlin correspondent of the Swiss newspaper Neue Zurcher Zeitung last week forecast the resignation of Dr. Julius Dorpmueller, German Transport Minister, as result of chaos in the German railway system since the war began.)

Koenigs had been in the Transport Ministry 19 years.

FINNISH MINISTER TO U.S. TO MARRY

Washington, March 16—(AP)— Now that his country is at peace once more, Hjalmar Procope, Finnish Minister to the United States, intends to marry. Mrs. Adela Shaw of York, England, announced today the engagement of her daughter, Margaret to Mr. Procope. No date has been set for the wedding.

FINLAND BEGINS TO REORGANIZE BATTERED ARMY

There Will be No General Demobilization Except for Certain Classes

DEFENCE ALLIANCE

Nation Will Go Forward "With Sword in One Hand and Trowel in Other," Ryti Tells Diet

Helsinki, March 16 (AP)—Finland will begin immediately to fortify her newly-narrowed frontiers and to reorganize her battered army following her peace treaty with Soviet Russia, informed quarters declared today.

There will be no general demobilization of the army, except for certain classes which will be released to help with civil reconstruction work, these sources said.

The Finnish government's attitude toward the future was suggested by Premier Risto Ryti, who told the Diet last night that the nation would go forward "with a sword in one hand and a trowel in the other."

Finland's proposal for a defence alliance with Sweden and Norway is another part of her determination to be strong.

Still Grave Danger

All of western civilization remains in the greatest danger, and only the future can show whether Finland acted wisely in making her hard peace with Russia, Ryti said.

Addressing the Finnish Diet just before it approved the treaty by a vote of 145 to 3 last night, the premier declared:

"In the same way as we waged war alone, we concluded peace alone. Only the future can show whether we acted wisely and rightly.

HEAD OF HOUSE OF DOUGLAS DIES

Duke of Hamilton, 78, Holder of Earldom of Angus Created in 1387

London, March 16 (CP)—The Duke of Hamilton, 78, premier Peer of Scotland, died today. He was the thirteenth Duke of Hamilton, and tenth Duke of Brandon and holder of the Earldom of Angus created in 1389. He was head of the House of Douglas and hereditary keeper of Holyrood Palace. His hereditay honors now fall to his son, Squadron Leader the Marquess of Douglas and Clydesdale, M.P.

With the death of the Duke of Hamilton, Scotland lost both her premier Peer and her premier Earl in eight days, Lord Crawford and Balcarres having died March 8.

The new Duke, Conservative M.P. for East Renfrewshire since 1930, is now serving with the Royal Air Force in France. He is married to Lady Elizabeth Percy, sister of the Duke of Northumberland. He is one of the finest amateur boxers in the country, and participated in the memorable air expedition over Mount Everest.

The family of the Duke of Hamilton and Brandon is one of the proudest of the realm, combining the blood of the Hamiltons and the Douglases.

The eleventh Duke of Hamilton also claimed the French Dukedom of Chatelherault, and signed his letters "Ham, Chat and Bran." This led one unfortunate wine merchant to head a letter: "Messrs Ham, Chat and Bran; Dear Sirs."

Australian Steamship Kahika Goes on Rocks and "Sinking Fast" Report Given — 1,317-Ton Norwegian Steamship Wrecked in Storm

Amsterdam, March 16 (CP-Havas)—The 1,589 ton British steamship Melrose sank last night in the North Sea after an explosion. 18 members of the crew are missing.

The captain and four men picked up by the Dutch vessels Nettia and Catharina were landed at Zeebrugge. Unconfirmed reports said four other sailors were rescued by the Netherlands freighter Kortenaer.

"I was in the chart room when I heard a loud explosion which took place near Hold No. 2," the captain of the Melrose said at Zeebrugge. "When I left the room the vessel was already partly under the water."

The Melrose, owned by G. Gibson and Co., Leith, Scotland, has been in regular service between Rotterdam and British ports.

Intercepts S.O.S.

San Francisco, March 16 (AP)— Globe wireless said it had intercepted an S.O.S. from the Australian steamship Kahika that she had gone on the rocks in a pass between the tip of Australia and Tasmania and was "sinking fast."

The Kahika asked any ship available to "render immediate assistance." Globe said the nearest ship was 90 miles away.

Lloyd's register lists the Kahika as a vessel of 1172 gross tons 230 feet long.

The message was intercepted at 6.10 a.m. E.S.T.

An S.O.S. asking for immediate assistance was picked up by the Matson passenger liner Monterey, en route from Auckland, N.Z., to Sydney, Australia, and relayed to Globe wireless.

There was no information immediately available on how many persons were aboard the Kahika or if it carried any passengers.

Navigation Suspended

Amsterdam, March 16 (CP Havas) —The newspaper de Telegraaf reported today that the naval general staff has ordered Netherland's shipping companies to suspend all navigation until further notice.

The order, de Telegraaf said, was due to the dangers threatening shipping.

Ten Lose Lives

Risor, Norway, March 16.—(CP) —Ten men lost their lives today when the 1,316-ton Swedish Steamship Osman was wrecked in a storm on rocks outside Risor Harbor, on Norway's south-eastern coast. Nine men were rescued by a Norwegian destroyer.

SWEDISH NOVELIST DIES

Stockholm, March 16 (CP-Havas) —Selma Lagerlof, 81, Swedish novelist and first woman to win the Nobel literature prize, died today following a celebral hemorrhage suffered when she learned of the Soviet-Finnish peace. She had played an important role in organizing help for the Finns.

Mme. Lagerlof was one of Sweden's best known novelists. A member of the Swedish Academy, she won the Nobel Prize in 1909.

Mersea Township Farmer Believes Prehistoric Animal Buried on Farm

Olinda, Ont., March 16—(CP)— Charles Jeffrey, 65-year-old Mersea Township farmer, can hardly wait for the spring—so that he can start the work of exhuming the bones of a prehistoric animal he believes is buried a foot below the soil surface 100 yards from his home here.

The Essex County crown-grower said that the first tooth was discovered nearly five years ago by two Mennonite hired men hoeing a field. The next summer, his children, playing in the same spot, unearthed a second tooth.

Last year a third tooth and long bony ribs were found on the farm. The continued discoveries indicating that there may be an entire body of some prehistoric animal near his house has Jeffrey interested, especially as visitors from Detroit, Toronto, Windsor, Ottawa and even Florida have visited his farm with offers for the bones.

Jeffrey's farm came into prominence on two previous occasions, part of a meteor being found there and a petrified frog having been discovered on the land as well.

SHIPS SUNK DURING WEEK

(By The Canadian Press)

Germany lost 16,317 tons of merchant shipping in the week ending March 15 as against 10,798 lost by Great Britain due to enemy action.

The 7,414-ton German liner La Coruna was scuttled in northern waters when intercepted by Allied patrols. The 3,303-ton Eschersheim was sunk in European waters, while the 5,600-ton Hannover was captured by the Royal Navy after her crew had failed in an attempt to scuttle her.

In addition to the 10,798 tons lost by Britain due to enemy action, two ships totalling 7,678 tons were lost in ordinary marine accidents, bringing the week's total diminution of the Empire's 20,000,000-ton merchant fleet to 18,476 tons.

When the captured Hannover is added to Britain's tonnage, however, the net loss is 12,876 tons, or 3,441 tons less than Germany's losses. British tonnage, of course, is being continuously augmented by new ships entering service. These figures are kept secret.

The week's losses, including ordinary marine accidents, as compiled by The Canadian Press:

Nationality	No. of Ships	Tonnage
British	7	18,476
German	2	16,317
Netherlands	2	3,361
Greek	1	3,854
Swedish	1	1,032

London, Mar. 16 (CP).—Lloyd's Gazette today listed total wartime shipping losses for the Allies and neutrals at 338 ships with a tonnage of 1,199,938. Total German losses were placed at 34 with a tonnage of 184,651 not including 27 German vessels captured.

Lloyd's broke down the figures as follows:

Nationality:	Ships	Tonnage
British	168	654,698
French	16	71,349
Polish	1	14,294
Norway	42	99,073
Sweden	33	69,604

Figures for other neutrals were not itemized.

Heavyweight Bout Cancelled

New York, March 16 (AP)—Promoter Mike Jacobs, rather than put in a substitute for Valentin Campolo, today cancelled next Wednesday night's boxing show at Madison Square Garden. Campolo was to have met Buddy Baer in the 12-round main bout.

Campolo, Argentine heavyweight, was ordered to bed with the grippe by his own doctor and told he couldn't appear Wednesday. Dr. William Walker, of the New York State Athletic Commission, said he could find "no symptoms of anything wrong with the man."

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

LACERATES HEAD IN HEAVY FALL

Striking his head when he fell on a slippery pavement last night, Gunner George Freeman, "A" Battery, R.C.A. was admitted to Belleville General Hospital suffering with a lacerated scalp. Dr. G. H. Stobie is in attendance.

YOUNG KNITTER COMPLETES SCARF

Said to be the youngest knitter in her community if not the entire district, seven-year-old little Miss Merle Moore, of Harold, has just completed a woolen scarf "for the soldiers." Three schoolmates of the little girl, none of them over twelve years of age, have also completed the knitting of scarfs and wash-cloths.

FARM LAND BENEFITS FROM SNOW FALL

Farmers of the district viewed with appreciative eyes the heavy fall of snow that blanketed the district yesterday. "It will relieve the water shortage situation, if the mild weather continues," one said today. He pointed out that the first snow of Winter is still on the fields and there has not been a bare spot all Winter. This has prevented ice from forming around the fall wheat; has provided a protective blanket and when the thaw comes will be the source of plenty of water.

WILL ASK COUNCIL TO GIVE PERMISSION

Members of City Council will be asked to permit various members of the City Fire Department to attend the courses in fire prevention being held at Queen's University next month. It was inadvertently reported yesterday that four members would take advantage of the course. This statement was published through a slight misunderstanding, as nothing definite has been decided as yet.

West Lake Crowned Champions by Win Over Mountain View

Picton, Mar. 16.—West Lake was crowned champions of the "B" section of Wellington and District Hockey League Thursday night when they defeated Mountain View 3-2. Each team had previously won one game.

West Lake surprised the fans with their victory over the league-leading Mountain View team. They barely made the play-offs but showed their strength in the final games.

Unfavorable weather kept the attendance down which was unfortunate since the proceeds of the evening went to Ross Parks who suffered an eye injury in a previous game. Parks, star goal tender for Wellington, was accidentally struck in the eye with a hockey stick. He will not lose the eye as at first feared. On the same bill, fans saw a Trenton team aided by three Picton players defeat Wellington 10-6.

In the championship game Rowbotham opened the scoring with a goal for Mountain View in the first period. Wellington scored twice in the second, by McQuaid and Platford. They added another in the third by Platford while May scored for Mountain View.

This winds up the hockey season in Prince Edward.

To Hold Field Trial For Golden Retrievers

Of interest to local dog fanciers who have a soft place in their hearts for the Golden Retrievers is the first annual specialty field trial and bench show which is being staged by the Golden Retriever Club of America at Mequon, Wisconsin, on May 13 and 14.

Interest in this particular breed of dogs has grown rapidly during the past two or three years and in many field trials held during the past year, more Goldens were entered than any other type of retriever. With so many active fanciers throughout the country, the Golden Retriever Club believes that 1940 will be an auspicious time to conduct its first specialty trial and bench show.

Captain Ullman, who lives on an island at Thames Ditton, had been "very active" in obtaining orders and placing business in the Midlands area, the Labor Member charged. He said he was informed Captain Ullman had stated he had considerable influence with the Ministry of Supply, that he could get "inquiries" whereas other persons could not.

Captain Ullman, speaking to newsmen last night, denied Mr. Morrison's charges. "I have consulted my solicitor regarding the matter," he said. "I cannot imagine the source of Mr. Morrison's information. This is a terrific blow to me but I have nothing to fear. I have done nothing wrong nothing whatever."

Stewart-Warner-Alemite Stage 'Staff Night' at Arena

Hockey, Skating, Races, Cards and Bingo Enjoyed by Large Crowd

MUCH ENJOYMENT

Within the walls of the Hume Arena last evening, the laughter of oldsters mingled with the joyous shouts of youngsters as the Stewart-Warner Alemite Corporation of Canada staged their annual "Staff Night." Employees of this enterprising industry, their wives, their children, single employees with their sweethearts and a few invited guests made up the party and the show ranged from races for the kiddies to hockey matches between the office and factory staffs and the married men pitted against the single boys of the plant. In other rooms of the Arena, cards and bingo were enjoyed, while in the main waiting room behind the Press box, the good ladies of the plant supplied all and sundry with all good things to eat.

The hockey matches probably provided the most amusement and some real old timers were out to show the fair sex and all doubting Thomases, that there was still some good hockey left in the old bones. When the word old is used it is not in a matter of years but rather in hockey experience and particular reference in this respect must be made to Art Young, Stan Hagerman and Johnny Kerr. Many can remember when Art Young played a pretty fair game at defence for an industrial team from the plant, when the Alemite team was to be feared in hockey circles. Stan Hagerman will never be forgotten for his forays down the right boards, when he was a member of an Intermediate team that went places in provincial hockey and Johnny Kerr, who also played a smart game in the industrial loop in years gone by.

Butt of Good-Natured Banter

Stan showed surprising bursts of speed, while Johnny Kerr was the same elusive puck carrier and Art rocked them on defence as of yore but at times the younger element made him miss. Stan was unfortunate to secure a bad injury when his thumb was either dislocated or badly sprained but he took it all in stride and it was just another added to the long list. His young son made a passing remark: "Dad is getting too old for that game" and the father was the butt of good natured jokes for the remainder of the evening.

Incidentally the office staff were too smart for the factory boys, walking off with a 4-1 victory but a great deal of blame is attached to Bill Cook and Bill Holway as referees for letting the game get out of hand because at the end of the tussle every player on both sides were in the fray. In the other game the single men could only eke out a 1-0 victory over the married men in what could be described as a first class hockey match. Jack Bundy was captain of the single boys and Stan Hagerman did duty for the married boys. The races were the chief interest for the kiddies and Mariam Bertram won the girls' race and Don Boyle was victorious in the boys' battle. Miss Barbara Lloyd was the best in the mixed heat. Each of the winners were awarded with beautiful prizes.

Marian McLean Wins

Marian McLean, a girl athlete of considerable prominence in Belleville for some years, easily defeated a large field in the older girls' race with Helen Richardson a close second. Rosie Locke was the winner of the spot prize and a social circle had the skaters going around in circles. The door prizes were won by Margaret Giffin, Mrs. Julia Tice, Gordon Williams and Beverley Asseltine. A large number enjoyed bingo for which suitable prizes were offered, while in the Director's room a large number enjoyed a euchre drive with prizes also awarded. Skating occupied the evening and it was enjoyable to see many who have not been on skates in years, taking a whirl on the frozen surface. It was a grand party and reflects to the credit of the Stewart-Warner Alemite Corporation in making life just a little happier for their employees.

The euchre winners were: Ladies—Mrs. J. Boyle, Miss M. Varley and the Gents, H. Ryan and J. Pringle.

The committees of J. Joblin, F. Pounsett and W. Page for the races, Art Young, Harry Mackay and Fred Douglas for general work, R. Ketcheson, E. Summers and J. Allin for bingo and Miss Helen Benn and L. Alexander for euchre and their corps of assistants are to be congratulated on the splendid evening of enjoyment provided and all wended their way homeward with the thought of an evening well spent.

Young Conservatives Attack Liberals on Reaction to Air Plan

At a meeting in Wallbridge Town Hall last night sponsored by the Sidney National Young Conservative Association, Dr. Austin Walters accused the Liberal administration in regard to the Empire air scheme, stating that had the scheme gone into effect when it was first proindustry in Canada at the present pased there would be an aeroplane time that could absorb many of the contracts that are now going to the United States and that much of the unemployment of the past few years could have been relieved by the influx of British capital for the scheme which would have provided work in all types of industry.

Major J. W. Howard reviewed the war effort to date and said that the present effort was not the work of the present government but merely the effort that the Canadian people were allowed to make. The units that have been mobilized have been organized for years.

Mr. J. Fred Wilson, Reeve of Sidney spoke of the difficulties of farmers and charges ineffective work of the Liberal administration in this field.

Mr. George H. Stokes, the National Government candidate for this riding and Mrs. Charles Payne, Mr. Harry Rollins and Mr. Wilmot Shortt also spoke.

Mr. Bob Pringle acted as chairman and musical entertainment was provided by the Lohnes family.

Judge Deroche Writes Of Novel Display of Collection of Miniatures

The value of advertising is well known by large business interests of California as is shown by the following description of a novel idea used by a large store in Los Angeles and sent along by Judge G. E. Deroche who is holidaying in the sunny south.

For ladies who window-shop, for Mr. George Stewart and for merchants who advertise.

I remember George Stewart once gave a public address on the "Little Things in Life." This will add to the address.

One of the largest stores in Los Angeles is Bullock's. In that store there is on display for a few days the largest collection of small curiosities in the world—some 28,500 articles. They have been collected by one man through forty years research. There is a jug so small it will not hold a single drop of water. His name is written on the edge of a calling card.

There are some three thousand gold spoons which fit into a hazelnut shell. The entire collection has been viewed by more than 7,000,000 people the world over. One of the outstanding pieces is the Lord's Prayer inscribed on a pin. It took a quarter of a century to complete it and its workers went blind in the process. Only through a powerful microscope can the letters on the pin head be read. Of interest to many are the eleven pocket knives with real blades and wooden handles — the knives fit into a cherry pit.

Another piece is carved from an olive seed showing a Chinese junk with forty-three figures on it. The exhibit also includes the world's smallest electric motor, developing only one one-millionth horsepower. An electric light is built on similar proportions. Also two hundred elephants so small they fit into a seed. By accident he spilled these pieces on the floor. It required hours to find them with a high-powered glass.

Isn't this some advertising for Bullock's store and the joy of window shoppers?

—G. E. DEROCHE.

P.S.—It is eighty in the shade here today.—G.E.D.

SATUR. MARKET PRICES STEADY

In spite of the fact that the weather man provided the nearest approach to spring that has yet been evidenced, the city market was devoid of any large amount of produce. Contrary to general expectations, there was no maple syrup offered. Vendors reported that if present weather conditions prevail the sweet delicacy will be available next week.

Price levels were generally firm. Eggs were steady at 24 cents the dozen for grade "A" selects with mediums offered at 22 cents. Butter quotations were unchanged at 30 cents the pound, with two-pound rolls marked at 55 cents.

Young broilers again stole the spotlight in the chicken display with choice birds selling at prices ranging between $1.00 and $1.25 the pair. Six-months-old birds sold at from $1.10 to $1.65 with fowl offered from 65 cents each. A few ducks were quoted at $1.00 each.

Slackening of stocks of winter apples was apparent with a lower-than-usual offering of Northern Spies and Stark Delicious offered at $1.45 and $1.25 respectively for choice hamper-lots. Cooking varieties were quoted at $1.00 the bushel for No. 1 quality, with domestics selling at a few cents less.

Potatoes appeared plentiful with good quality stock offered at $1.00 the 75-lb. bag. Demand was fairly good, with a number of farmers demanding certified stock for seed purposes. Staple vegetables maintained their former high levels with parsnips offered at $1.00 the bushel, and beets, turnips, carrots, etc., selling between 80 and 90 cents the bushel. Onions were quoted at $1.25 for 60 pounds.

Fresh mudcats highlighted a somewhat slim fish offering, selling briskly at two pounds for 25 cents. A few fresh pike brought 10 cents the pound, with frozen whitefish offered at 20 cents for the same quantity.

Young pigs brought prices between $5.50 and $6.50 but transactions were dull during the early hours.

SAFETY PICTURES TO BE SHOWN IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Pictures Have to do With Traffic Control and Safety of Children on Streets

REPORTS RECEIVED

Teacher Given Two Months' Leave and Resignation of Another Accepted

The annual audit of the books of the Secretary-Treasurer of the Belleville Board of Education with balance sheets and statements of revenues and expenditures was tendered at last night's monthly meeting of the Board of Education, expenditures of the Board for the year 1939 to have been $180,641.53. The assets of the Board were set at $1,081,496.27 by City Auditor F. G. Chamberlain in his report. The City Auditor suggested to the board they curtail their insurance expenditures another year if at all possible.

P. B. LaTrobe, field secretary of the Ontario Safety League, addressed the meeting seeking permission to show talking pictures in the city public schools in connection with accident prevention. "Last year we showed pictures to 120,000 public school children in the province. Our pictures have to do with traffic control and the general safety of children on the streets," stated Mr. LaTrobe. Upon the motion of J. W. Deacon the sum of $10.00 was voted to Mr. LaTrobe, but no collections will be permitted in the school in connection with the showing of the safety pictures.

Attendance Good

In report Principal P. C. MacLaurin announced that during the month of February the attendance at the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School was 95.52 per cent, which was an increase over the previous month. Mr. MacLaurin also reported that the annual Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School "open night" would be held in the Collegiate on March 20th and assured the Board of a night of pleasure and profit. The Night School attendance for the month of February was announced at 72.6 per cent.

Mr. F. T. Grafton, teacher at the Belleville Collegiate, was granted a two months' leave of absence. "I understand it is under doctors' orders that Mr. Grafton has been forced to seek this request," revealed Chairman Reg. Moncrieff.

The resignation of Miss Lillian McGuire, from the public school teaching staff, was accepted with regret, Mrs. Edna Emery being appointed to replace Miss McGuire temporarily. In the matter of a proposed salary increase for a member of the Collegiate teaching staff presented by the Advisory Vocational Committee, the matter was referred back to committee. Supply bills amouning to $2,046.71 were passed during the meeting.

Letter of Thanks Sent

Upon the suggestion of C. I. Frederick, principal of Queen Mary School, a letter of thanks was sent to Dr. N. Edwards for the splendid assistance rendered in a recent eye survey and the providing of charts to the public schools.

W. C. Mikel addressed the meeting relative to the purchase of copies of his proposed "History of Belleville." Mr. Mikel proposed that the board place a copy of this educational and historical publication in the hands of every teacher in Belleville. "The history of Belleville should be disseminated in every school room in the city," held Mr. Mikel. Previously the board had agreed to take ten copies of the issue, pointed out Col. E. A. Geen. "I do not desire any remuneration for my efforts in compiling this data and this board can publish it themselves and make a profit, if they desire," concluded Mr. Mikel.

The report of the city truant officer, Mr. Fred Wiggins, revealed he had made 123 visits to homes last month and had taken one parent into court for violations of the School Attendance Act. The correspondence was read and the requisitions favourably received.

The City Auditor's report of the Secretary-Treasurer of the Belleville Board of Education for the year 1939 was submitted by F. G. Chamberlain, City Auditor.

McLEAN HAIG
Liberal Government Candidate

Never before in the history of Canada has it been more important to have a continuity of effort and a constantcy of purpose in the public affairs of this country.

The present Government has enlisted the best available brains of this country to take over the detailed administration of our national war effort on both the military and economic fronts. This entire effort has been free from patronage and has been handled efficiently and effectively.

The post war problems are hardly less important than those involved in our war effort. Already the present Government is laying plans to meet these problems of demobilization and rehabilitation.

I suggest to the electors of Hastings South that the seriousness of the issue exceeds any question of personalities or political affiliations. I solicit your support on March 26th. and again pledge myself to your service and to that of my fellow Canadians in the larger sphere of public affairs.

FINNS LEAVE CEDED TERRITORY

Moving from the ceded areas of Finland to the borders of the newly narrowed Finland is a vast army of men, women and children, estimated at one hundred thousand, foresaking their farms and homes, abandoning their firesides and old ties and associations. They move into the narrowed Finland, where they will establish new homes of their own again.

Such a scene is another tribute to the soul of Finland. Suffer hardships her people will. They will start with nothing their lives all over again under the Finnish flag which covered itself with glory in fifteen weeks of war.

Further proof of the spirit of the Finns is found in the statement that no pressure had been brought to bear on these people. They began their sad trek on foot, in automobiles, wagons and trains over the snow, driving their remaining livestock, pigs, cattle and horses. They carried on their weary shoulders or packed into their conveyances the few heirlooms and clothing they could take and left the ancestral land, ceded to Russia.

These people will maintain in a new place their love and faith in their homeland. What a foundation for the reconstruction of Finland—a basis of loyalty and devotion never surpassed! One can imagine the lingering looks they cast behind as they left what had been for generations a part of Finland, even when that country was under Russian suzerainty. Fired by loyalty they want to be where their brother Finns are. Such a state must endure.

The Finnish Government is heroic in its attitude. With a true spirit of brotherhood it sees that it must find homes for these exiles and will pay the cost of their establishment.

They will help in keeping Finland alive. They may have lost valuable territory but they have preserved their soul untarnished.

The reestablishment of the Finns who have been refugees and of this trekking population creates a problem. Finland has been caring for 500,000 refugees who left the war zone early in the campaign. It is estimated that 140,000 of these will return to their homes in war-torn Finland and so it remains for the state to take care of at least 460,000. Finland has never failed in her spirit of co-operation and though the task is great, her people will carry it through.

WILL RIGHT WRONGS DONE TO CZECH NATION

It is just a year ago Friday since the Germans entered Prague, the step which, followed by Hitler's attack on Poland six months later, started the war between the Allied countries and Germany.

It was fitting that a representative of the Allied nations should make a declaration on the eve of the first anniversary of the outrage on Czecho-Slovakia. Viscount Halifax declared in a broadcast in which he was associated with former President Benes to the Czech people that "it is with firm resolve to restore your freedom that the Governments and peoples of the British Empire have taken up arms together with the Allies. It is their high purpose to right the wrongs which you have suffered and create a new Europe in which a recurrence of such evil will be made impossible."

Dr. Benes pointed out what the world recognizes to be true that history will classify the behaviour of Czecho-Slovakia as an "unexampled readiness of a smaller nation to sacrifice itself for the sake of peace among great nations."

Lord Halifax struck a cardinal point of Nazi doctrine when he referred to the systematic attempts of the Nazi Government "to destroy not only the economic but also the spiritual life of your nation."

SAP SEASON DRAWS NEAR

Owners of maple groves welcome such a storm as that of Thursday with its hint of mild days and frosty nights, so essential for the flow of sap. The time is very near when the Canadian woods will be the scene of the great spring industry. There will be hurrying through the woods with pails and spiles. There will be new tracks in the woods. Roads are cleared to the maple syrup huts, wood is in readiness, the huge level sap pans are clean and prepared.

It is an industry that does not last long but it is one that lends keenest zest to living. It is the first flush of spring when the sap mounts into the branches of the maples and is ready for the hardy yeoman who tap the great reservoirs of the colorless liquid that drains into the buckets.

It will not be long to the day when smoke rises from the maple cabins. When the sap is brought in, from then onward the fires glow. The sap boils until the moisture is so far gone as to leave that deep amber syrup which possesses a flavor all its own and which synthetic chemistry has not been able to duplicate. Some is reduced to maple sugar.

The way is then ready to the marts. In Belleville and other country centres there will be usual scenes of crowds about the first jars and tins of syrup or about the boxes containing small cakes of the sugar. For four weeks or so this industry usurps a large share of the city market activities, a market within a market.

In the country there are the sugaring parties where young and old participate while the snow is on the ground—a real spring festival in the lovely Canadian countryside.

It is a lucrative industry, this one of maple products, and is a delectable industry too, one of sweetness and one of happy associations as spring comes in.

NATURE IN WHITE

Out of the March storm which disrupted highway traffic and taxed the strength of snow-shovellers, came a picture which lasted for a whole day, a scene of the most delicate tracery by nature's hands as she placed gently on every branch and every twig of the leafless trees her white decorations and spread thickly a heavy load upon the broad arms of the evergreens and covered roofs and ground. Never was artistry more lovely and satisfying than nature's handiwork in this scene. A little dip in the temperature preserved this picture of beauty far longer than is usual. After the driving snow from the south on Thursday, a bright sun shone out of the clear sky, while a light blue canopy endomed the whole scene of nature on land and lake, on plain and hillside. But the sun did not destroy the intricate and infinite pattern of nature.

The protected sides of tree trunks and branches lent color by contrast. Every weed which was not covered up reared its stem or branches holding aloft the festival decoration.

Those who decorate Christmas trees could learn lessons from Friday's show—how well nature does it.

But it is not Christmastide. It is March, the month that opens rivers and ushers in spring. Nature in preparing for the retreat of winter gave us one of the loveliest creations in her millinery emporium. Springtime is lovely, thrilling. So is the frost's farewell attire after such a storm.

Nearly every winter nature outdoes herself once or twice in such beauty. March 14th and 15th, 1940, was to many her supreme effort in years. Camera fans know it and have recorded the scene for future days. Artists missed not the opportunity of study of the beauty of form and delicate contrast of coloring and the glistening of the snow.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

Depression of Spirits

It is likely that everybody at times feels low in spirits, but to be always depressed means that something is wrong somewhere in the individual. That something may be infection, tiredness, lack of sleep, or other condition. In a few cases continuous depression may be a symptom of mental illness.

Dr. L. H. Ziegler, Wauwatosa, Wis., in the Psychiatric Quarterly, Utica, N.Y., reports his findings in a study of 111 patients whose chief symptom consisted of well defined attacks of depression or low spiritedness. Their ages ranged from 16 to 77 years of age. All occupations and all the major professions were represented among them.

"Possessed of serious and sensitive natures, wih a rigid singleness of purpose to succeed, they were not interested in hobbies or recreations. The majority were self-centred, looking inwards all the time. The onset of their depression was unnoticed by them but usually appeared at the same time as some family trouble, financial loss, sickness or death".

"However, it was not the depressed spirits which made these patients consult a physician, but symptoms of slowing up, withdrawal from usual activities, fatigue, loss of appetite and weight, and sleeplessness. Depression, worrisomeness, anxious concern about self, shame of the symptoms, sadness, melancholy, despondency and low spirits appeared later to their fullest extent. Unusual and mystifying body sensations were common, leading many of the patients from physician to physician, and some finally to creeds, cults, and quacks".

Dr. Ziegler states that estimating or putting true value on thought, emotional state and activity, is just as important as dropsy, heart murmurs or other signs of disease, in the treatment of these cases.

Unfortunately these patients are often misunderstood because, as no organic disease is present, family and friends accuse them of "putting on" their illnesses.

It should be remembered that most of these patients were serious, sensitive and ambitious. Their one thought was to succeed, and so mixing with others, taking vacations, enjoying hobbies, had no place in their scheme of life.

The lesson for us all is plain. Lack of interests outside our regular work may make us unfit to meet life's problems and we become depressed.

Uncle on Rescue Ship Cossack in 1900, Nephew on New Cossack in 1940

Galt, Ont., March 15—(CP) — When William T. Reynolds, Galt, read a letter saying his nephew, William Reynolds, took part in the action of H.M.S. Cossack, in releasing British merchant seamen from the German prison ship Altmark, he brought to light an unusual coincidence.

It was 40 years ago, Mr. Reynolds recalled, that he himself went through an almost identical experience aboard a ship of the same name. In 1900 he was a member of the crew of H.M.S. Cossack, a third class cruiser patrolling off the northeast coast of Africa. While on patrol the Cossack captured the Kitty, a ship engaged in blockade running during the Boer war.

"The crew of the Cossack boarded the Kitty with cutlasses and after overpowering the crew took it in tow to Berbera on the northeast coast of Africa. I was the third member of the crew to board the captured ship," he said.

He thought it strange that 40 years later a nephew of his should be the member of a new Cossack and take part in action similar to the one he was in.

Daily War Survey

by The Canadian Press

Devastation worked in Finland by the Soviet air force has been revealed with the lifting of war censorship and the cessation of hostilities. Although news reports during the course of the war told of flights of Russian bombers over the whole of Finland, the damage done was concealed.

It now appears this damage was a material factor in inducing the Finnish Government to come to terms. Russian bombs from the air apparently destroyed railways and prevented the moving of troops to the front to relieve hard-pressed front line defenders.

Factory after factory was wiped out, although foreign supplies might have been obtained to replace products of the destroyed plants, aerial warfare made the distribution of supplies increasingly difficult.

The result seems to support the theory held by some modern strategists that the only defence against aircraft is more aircraft. The Finns were weak in the air.

In war a powerful air force may be of as much value as an insurance policy as it is as a striking force. The danger of launching an air attack on a nation with an effective air force is a deterrent factor.

Death Preferred To Russian Yoke

"I believe the Finns would rather die than live under the communistic system, and so would I," declared Prof. Stanley Hart, of McMaster University, in an address given last week at St. Catharines and reported in the Standard.

Prof. Hart last year travelled extensively through Russia on a special visa which permitted him to see the country in the raw, rather than in the carefully prepared style shown to tourists.

The tourist is not permitted to wander about the streets in Russia without a guide, and the latter sees that the tourist does not stick his nose in where it is not wanted, stated the professor. The tourist is met with Lincoln cars, and sees model communities, hospitals, tractors, and other carefully prepared pieces of propaganda.

Buildings in Ruins

Approaching Leningrad, Prof. Hart who was studying architecture, was impressed with the beautiful skyline. On close examination, he found that the buildings were falling to pieces, and that they were so dirty that you could not tell their original color. "In the 22 years since the revolution, they have made practically no attempt to keep the buildings in repair. Only three streets in Leningrad were open to traffic, as the others had gone to pieces. But that didn't matter because there weren't any cars. Only the occasional one was seen, and that was usually of the pre-revolution vintage." Tourists are whisked through the streets so fast that they do not see these things, he said. He had stayed at the best hotel, but the furniture, carpets and decorations were all falling apart from lack of attention.

"The population as a whole looks like a big rag bag," he said. "They have rents in their clothes, which are patched up or closed with safety pins. The officials are dressed a little better, but not well. Silk stockings for women are never seen. There are hardly any leather shoes; they are made of canvas with leather soles in some cases.

Poor Living Conditions

Two different prices are charged for goods: one price for the natives and one for visitors. It cost Prof. Hart the equivalent of $1.25 for 20 cigarettes, which "bloomed" at the end when lighted. He had to pay 12 cents for a small box of matches, and half of them were useless; the rest went off like firecrackers. He couldn't use the writing paper in the hotels because it was so poor it blotted.

The waterworks of the town were bad, so he thought he would use soft drinks; a small bottle of an orange drink cost 50 cents. He paid $2 to $3 for a meal, which, although the best Russia could offer, was very bad. The people of Russia are not starving, but they have not too much to eat, and it is not tempting food which they have. Each week, the comrade is given a ration card, with which he gets his food from a government store. Practically all other stores are closed up, and have in the window only a bust of Lenin or a portrait of Stalin.

It is true that the Russian gets almost everything given to him, said Prof. Hart. But the government exerts such control that it tells him where he shall live. He is usually given a one-roomed apartment, no matter how large his family may be. He goes to the movies, but only on the nights when his factory workers are herded together and driven down to see pictures prepared by the government. He has holidays when the government gives them to him, and he goes where they tell him to go. His wages are very small, and the Russian lives in sanitary conditions "that are perfectly appalling." As the population is not increasing, there are no new buildings, and no-improvements in santitation. "I saw no model working communities" said the speaker. Rather, the court house in Leningrad had been altered into small apartments.

People Are Ignorant

The steel mills and most of the textile mills in Leningrad had been closed down. "The Russians say they have not enough men to do the things that need to be done," related Prof. Hart. "What they mean is that they have not enough trained men for in the revolution, they got rid of all the middle class, aristocracy, and professional class. So they are madly trying to train the proletariat of Russia, which is very ignorant. They have no gray matter to make the grade, and they try to solve the problem by bringing in specialists from other countries. There is a vast mass of unskilled labor there, and a lot of foreign engineers are trying to do something with it. If something goes wrong with a machine, a Russian's inclination is to keep on driving it till it will go, until it finally breaks down and a lot of valuable parts are ruined.

"Russia's five-year plans are the laughing stock of the world. The country has not kept pace with the rest of the world. It is going backwards. It would not take much to make the people revert to barbarism, because they are bordering on it now. The average Russian has such a bad time of it that he does not care whether he lives or dies."

Prof. Hart said that when he moved from Leningrad to Moscow, he visited one of the modern hospitals. The place was black with flies, he said. He had asked one of the doctors if they did not think this a danger in spreading disease. "We don't worry about them," replied the doctor. "We'll have them all killed off in a few years."

The average Russian revolted in 1917 for the things he wanted, but he has yet to get them. So the government keeps bringing in more five-year plans, and the Russian looks forward in each period to the time when his Utopia will arrive at the end of that five years.

Everything is Wretched

Travelling in the country, Prof. Hart had ridden on a wretched train on which the locomotive and rolling stock had been built before the revolution and was in a bad state of repair. Often the locomotive would break down, and the train would stand all day on the siding while it was being repaired. The sleeping cars were infested with bed bugs and lice.

"You find that the people living in the villages are 20 years worse off now than they were after the Revolution," he stated. "They are animated rag-bags, going barefooted, or with bags wrapped around their feet. Some have sandles of bark. They live in unsanitary log buildings. Their farming is primitive, and you certainly don't see the fields filled with tractors as the Russian government would have you believe. There isn't a tractor in sight, and the peasants wouldn't know how to operate it if there was. There are no schools or hospitals. The people live in indescribable filth and unsanitary conditions. Most of the land is very fertile, but life seems so futile to the Russians."
